To Build A Better World ...

An ancient proverb states that before a man can rule the world, he must govern his own nation. Before he can govern a nation, he must manage his own household. Before he can manage a household, he must be the master of himself.

Ruling the world is no longer considered a worthwhile goal, but aside from that, the proverb is a good one.

We accept the axiom of Twentieth Century thought that complexities are combinations of simplicities and recombinations of the combinations. Men cannot live unto themselves. Their lives are the warp and woof of the community, the state, the world. Morally, economically, and spiritually, the threads cross and recross. Rips and tears in the network affect the entire fabric.

A child is aware only of his own wants and needs. His circle expands to include the ones who surround him—mother and father, brothers and sisters. After family loyalties are formed, community consciousness develops. The early school days bring the beginnings of patriotism, and the child learns to identify himself with his nation.

A sense of world participation emerges more slowly. A child assumes that God speaks his own native language. The realization that the brotherhood of man includes every race and nationality is a subtle abstraction of experiences shared with one's immediate groups.

The care and feeding of this world-sense is the most important service rendered by an educational institution. "Ruling the world" takes on a new meaning. It doesn't mean rule by force, or by economic pressure. The word "rule" in fact, must be completely thrown out, and the ancient quotation paraphrased thusly: "Before one can understand the world's peoples and think in terms of living in peace with them, he must learn to use effectively and harmoniously his own government. Before he can participate intelligently as a citizen, he must live in peace and harmony with his family. Before he can contribute to the welfare of his family group, he must know himself. He must understand his drives and prejudices, and learn to modify them when they conflict with those of the people around him. He must enter into such compromises with the willingness to put the harmony of the group before the gratification of every personal whim.

The law of the jungle is still strong, and the civilization of man far from complete. Education has as its main function the development of a rational mind capable of considering one's desires in the light of the general welfare. The goal is to have the general welfare as one's desire. This cannot be achieved by the forceful imposition of a constructive uniformity—it can only be achieved by the intelligent consideration of the fact that cooperation is the only way to keep the world from being blown to fragments.

To give each thread a mirror-image of the whole bolt of cloth, then, is the function of education. There are two ways of doing this. One is to sort through the idea-accumulations of the ages, and the other is to actually participate in a variety of human situations.

The proper balance of the two methods is the measure of effective education.

Eventually—Why Not Now?

Education is a process directed to help man live a better life--within himself and within the world about him. Much of it is geared to the future. The world of today, whether it be the microcosm of man's existence or the macrocosm of the universe, is looked upon in despair. To elude a complete sense of futility, man places himself in the time perspective of tomorrow. Few recognize the invalidity of this defense. If man is ever to build a better world, he must begin to do so in the present. Education must challenge him to use actively the tools he now has. To do this, much of education must come not merely from the text or classroom, but also from the professor, as he strives to give the student a part of his life experience. Such is the process of sharing offered by Dr. Lewis E. Smith in his deep and varied influence upon his students.

Beginning as a teacher of economics and political science in 1923 at Schuylkill College, Dr. Smith has been active at Albright since the merger of the two schools in 1929. His keen interest in his subject matter is apparent through his participation in learned national organizations on political science and international affairs. He received his bachelor's degree from Ursinus College and his M.A. from Columbia. In its Centennial Year, 1956, Albright College was privileged to present Dr. Smith with an honorary doctorate. His service in several pastorates evidences his view of life in its spiritual dimension.

Dr. Smith has exemplified in his own life the power of fact, reason and faith combined to make the eventuality of a better world an immediate and powerful experience. Through his faith, he has helped student generations to move beyond the immobilizing fear of the present. Because of its gratitude to him, the Class of 1957 takes honor in dedicating the first Cue of the new century to Dr. Lewis E. Smith.

Without a governing body, society becomes an unwieldy, uninfluential mass. To become effective, it must gain order and voice. Uncorrelated opinion is insufficient. Each person must feel vitally concerned for the welfare of the state, and dynamically involved in the voice of society—its government.

Direct participation in so large a dynamism is impossible. Therefore leaders must be chosen with judicious care so that they most accurately reflect the opinions of those whom they represent. The community must function through its representatives.

So it is with the community of Albright College. Student Council is its representative government and thus the voice of its students. The concern of student government is with each group as a component part of the whole, and with the whole as it affects each group.

Capable, just leadership of the governing body is indispensable if the jurisdiction is to reflect the will of the governed. This year the student body chose Clement Cassidy to head its government. His was the responsibility to develop a sensitivity to human needs, and a strong sense of order so that he might guide Student Council to best fulfill the needs of the students.

Council Presents

A need met, a desire fulfilled—such is the character of each Student Council event. Since every human is unique, he has different ways of meeting needs which are essentially the same in all humans. In its diversified activities Council accommodates in one way or another the basic human need to share.

Homecoming, the first major event of the term, brings a blend of beauty, fellowship and tradition. First of its activities is the Ivy Ball, its significance renewed each year by the creativity of its planners, Beauty itself witnesses to the constant flow of the democratic process, as the Ball is climaxed with the crowning of a Homecoming Queen previously elected by the student body.

Among the most enjoyable of Councilsponsored activities are the Friday night record or combo dances. One of the initial means for acquaintance among students, they provide the informal atmosphere which heightens friendships. A recent and popular innovation has been the alternation of these dances with free movies.

Not to be neglected are the more obvious means of broadening acquaintances and sharing as effected in the Student Directory and the Student Book Exchange. To each Albrightian these services have the supplementary values of efficiency and economy.

Without committee work effective organization of activities is impossible. The outward success of Student Council events is merely an indication of sound internal structure.

Grass Roots

Philosophy has said that the idea must be translated into form before it can become meaningful to man. Thus, the citizen, in order to comprehend fully the democratic ideal, must see his government function at the local level. At Albright we recognize in miniature the grass roots organizations that form the basis of student government. Through the media of day and dorm councils, issues flow back and forth between the central structure and its periphery. In addition, each council has set up a judiciary system to deal with problems in its own jurisdiction. Such a localization of function is as essential to the identification of the individual student with governmental processes as it is to the total operation of student democracy.

Coordinating Organizations

Interaction, the basis of every society, is the key to understanding among different societies. Growth does not occur in a society through the operation of mores or in a government through the administration of legislation. Wisdom and understanding arise as individual parts of the whole extend their interaction to other parts.

Women's Student Senate is the co-ordinating body which gives Albright women the opportunity to function as a unit. Day, dorm, sorority and non-sorority women come to a mutual sharing of efforts and talents as they promote non-academic campus activities. The monthly Student-Faculty Social Hours are outstanding examples of productive interaction.

The role of the Inter-Sorority and Inter-Fraternity Councils in maintaining high standards for the six social organizations cannot be minimized. Yet the major significance of these co-ordinating bodies stems from their contribution to a growing respect among all the individuals they represent.

SCIENCES

Departments of Biology and Geology—Marcus H. Green, B.S., M.S., Associate Professor of Biology; Albert Schwartz, B.A., M.S., Ph.D., Instructor in Biology; George W. Walton, Ph.B., M.S., Sc.D., Professor of Geology and Dean of the College; Edwin L. Bell II, B.S., M.S., Ph.D., Assistant Professor of Biology; Clarence A. Horn, B.S., C.P.H., M.A., Sc.D., Professor of Biology.

Biology

The study of biology reveals to us the intricacies and mysteries of the human body. Students unlock the door of this mystery through endless hours of probing, investigating, and more probing over the lifeless bodies of earthworms, crayfish, and frogs.

Each hour is essential, however, to prepare and instruct the physicians, biologists, and laboratory technicians of tomorrow. Each one of these specialists is indispensable in our democratic society.

Chemistry

The field of chemistry offers a constant challenge in our democratic world. Advances are continually necessary in the atomic realm. Many atomic advances have been made along destructive lines, but few have been made for peacetime use.

Novices at Albright College experiment with test tubes, elements, and bunsen burners to prepare to aid in this search for knowledge.

Mathematics and Physics

Well-rounded men and women are molded into the mathematicians and physicists of America, who will strive for peace in their work. Through scientists who appreciate the meaning of freedom, the terrifying weapons of the future can be kept silent. There will be hope for the troubled world. Albright requires its science students to take courses in the humanities to teach them the importance of the individual . . . the free individual. There is hope for a harmonious world when men and women in laboratories experiment with democratic ideals kept well in mind. Their field involves all mankind, not just a single country. A science degree should mean not only knowledge, but understanding and respect. From such sentiment comes universal happiness and perhaps the fulfillment of the supreme goal of democracy.

Home Economics

Home Economics Department—Ernestine Elder, B.S. in H. Ec., M.A., Assistant Professor of Art and Home Economics; Pearl O. Bright (Mrs. Irwin J.), B.S., Instructor in Home Economics; Anne H. Smith (Mrs. John S.), B.S. in H.Ec., M.Ed., Associate Professor of Home Economics.

What is more important than the home in our democracy? Studies in nutrition and home management not only prepare the mothers of tomorrow, but train those who will instruct the mothers of tomorrow.

Just as flour, sugar, eggs, shortening, a leavening agent to make it rise, and a sprinkling of flavoring combine to form a cake, so clothing construction, foods preparation, child psychology, sociology, a bit of philosophy to make it rise, and a sprinkling of the other arts combine to form the professional home economist.

Mrs. Smith, Mrs. Bright and Miss Elder provide the knowledge behind this pragmatic educational department.

Physical Education

The citizens of our democracy must be physically strong. Touch football, calisthenics, basketball and tennis are intended to fulfill this requirement among the men. Body mechanics, archery, field hockey, and basketball serve the same purpose among the women.

The democratic citizen also needs recreation and leisuretime activities. Physical training at Albright is aimed toward this goal.

Another requirement of the well-rounded citizen is a spirit of sportsmanship. What better place can this be obtained than on the gridiron or basketball court?

Professors Renken, Potsklan and Mosser direct this area of our college education.

Political and Social Science

For young adults to grasp the meaning of the world about them, it is necessary that they understand the basic principles involved in the social and political sciences. Undergraduates are taught how people act in all societies, and what results from their behavior. Comprehension of other cultures brings tolerance. In a world that grows smaller with each improved mode of transportation, this tolerance is indispensable. We must attain it.

Bishop, Jr., A.B., M.A., Assistant Professor of History.

SOCIAL SCIENCES

Department of Political Science—Charles A. Raith, A.B., M.A., Assistant Professor of Political Science; Lewis E. Smith, A.B., M.A., HH.D., Professor of Political Science.

History

No one is ignorant of the old saying that history repeats itself. To cope with the issues of the present and the future, we must know what has happened in the past. The study of prehistoric cultures, ancient civilizations and the middle ages brings insight to the complexity of the modern world. Some students will integrate this knowledge with their professions. Others will use it to teach future generations the heritage of the world.

"And Phillip Augustus was too much of a gentleman to ever tell why he repudiated the Danish princess . . ."

Sociology

Man is, to a great extent, the product of his environment. He lives in interaction with those about him. Sociology examines man in his group. Through the factual knowledge of cultural patterns and of the relatedness of institutions the sociologist attempts to understand man's needs and his means to their fulfillment through society. At Albright, theory is put into practice through student participation in group leadership and observation of social agency operations. The student becomes directly aware of the role democracy plays in fulfilling man's needs. He is challenged to devote himself to finding more efficient means to this end.

Department of Sociology—Elmer L. Smith, B.S., M.A., D.S.S., Assistant Professor of Sociology; Richard E. Hilbert, B.A., Lecturer in Sociology.

Proper atmosphere is important for "soc" committee work.

True or false: a knowledge of photosynthesis has helped scientists in the development of color TV.

According to our calculations, this individual is completely adjusted. Do you suppose the IBM machine could be wrong??

Psychology

For man to function effectively, he must come to the nearest possible understanding of himself. It is the goal of psychology to help him do this through objective measures. Correlation of the mental, physical, and emotional against a background of environment and heredity gives the psychologist a clearer picture of the individual and his potentialities. As the psychology student acquaints himself with the testing materials, with the experimental methods and with the clinical procedures, he learns to evaluate man where he is and how he may best adjust to his present position in order to lead a happier, more productive life.

Applied psychology paves the way to a more efficient society as it helps man find his place in the structure. It touches the areas of human experience in the industrial, vocational, educational, and legal settings. Its emphasis is upon the individual as he attempts to live a satisfactory life within the norms of society.

Department of Psychology—Milton G. Geil, A.B., M.A., Ph.D., Professor of Psychology and Director of Psychological Service Center and Director of Student Personnel; Daniel F. Skeath, B.S., M.Ed., Ed.D., Assistant Professor of Education and Psychology and Counselor, Psychological Service Center.

Barth, A.B., B.D., S.T.M., Associate Professor of Religion; Henry Pfeiffer Chair of Religion, and Chaplain (on Sabbatical leave); Dean A. Allen, B.S., B.D., S.T.M., Lecturer in Religion.

Philosophy

While scientists ask the question "how," philosophers ask "why." Under capable guidance the student of philosophy learns to examine the presuppositions of the natural and social sciences, which delve into the experimental, and the fields of ethics, religion and aesthetics, which are concerned with values. From Aristotle through Nietzsche, he probes into the meaning of life, hoping to gain a clearer understanding of his own existence.

"But how does one know . . ."

Religion

Eternally, man has a fervent desire for values, and, eternally, he struggles to preserve those which he cherishes. Behind this struggle is the sense of a power beyond his own. Religion is born in man through the union of eternal struggle with this persistent sensation. It is conceived as man's belief that his highest values are sustained by an enduring universe. Education requires the student to study his universe objectively, and inevitably causes his beliefs to be challenged. It is the aim of the religious services on campus to help him rediscover the Ultimate Values.

Department of Philosophy—Ronald E. Cocroft, A.B., B.D., Th.M., Instructor in Religion; Ellery B. Haskell, A.B., M.A., B.D., Associate Professor of Philosophy.

Education

Through the main street of education the traffic of culture flows to the lanes of posterity. The democratic process is but one fragment of the total American heritage kept alive by our society's priceless institution. Paradoxically, only in the ideal of democracy has education found its existence and growth. From the masses that enjoy freedom and enlightment arise a few who dedicate themselves to the perpetuation of these benefits. The rich program of the educational department has been directed by—and to—such individuals.

Department of Education—Daniel F. Skeath, B.S., M.Ed., Ed.D., Assistant Professor of Education and Psychology, and Counselor, Psychological Service Center; Henry T. Westover, B.S., M.Ed., Ed.D., Professor of Education and Dean of Men; Milton G. Geil, B.A., M.A., Ph.D., Professor of Psychology, Director of Psychological Service Center, and Director of Student Personnel.

And THAT is who we'll be teaching the students about!

Business Administration

Theory and practice find the freedom of parallel existence in a democratic society. Commerce is often regarded as an exclusively practical endeavor. Yet behind the familiar surface of day by day functioning, lies the intricate network of economic theories and business ethics so vital to the maintenance of a sound economy. In recognition of these essentials the Department of Business Administration carries out its development of embryonic businessmen. A blend of fact and principle forms the base of their potential contribution.

LANGUAGES

Department of English—F. Wilbur Gingrich, A.B., A.M., Ph.D., Professor of Greek; Clyde A. Harding, A.B., M.A., Associate Professor of English; Samuel B. Shirk, A.B., M.A., Ph.D., Associate Professor of English, Assistant to the President and Director of Public Relations; Annadora V. Shirk (Mrs. E. L.) A.B., M.Litt., Assistant Professor of English.

Department of English—Patricia A. Hostetter, B.A., M.A., Instructor in English; James D. Reppert, A.B., M.A., Ph.D., Instructor in English; Benjamin E. Brown, A.B., M.Litt., Instructor in English; Priscilla R. Morton, B.A., M.A., Instructor in English and Dean of Women; John B. Douds, A.B., M.A., Ph.D., Professor of English Language and Literature, J. Warren Klein Chair of English Literature.

English

Educated Americans should learn to express their thoughts coherently as well as grammatically. Such is the goal of the freshman English classes. As the course advances, the literary history of the language is studied from Beowulf's adventures on the "whale road" to Dylan Thomas' wanderings through the woodlands of Wales. An appreciation of our language leads to a humble pride in our heritage. Once we learn what the English language has contributed to the cultures of other countries, we can better understand the bonds that should bring nations into harmony with each other.

French

It is truly satisfying to learn to speak and read the language of a foreign country. Although a good foundation is acquired in grammatical construction and pronunciation, the French customs and points of view are greatly emphasized. If students could lose their ethnocentricity and learn to think in a more French way when passing judgment on the actions of that nation, a greater tolerance would result.

Spanish

The southern border of the United States is the northern border of a Spanish-speaking nation. This factor alone makes it desirable to have some knowledge of Spanish. Students are taught respect for our South American neighbors and their European parent through a general study of the Spanish history, literature and culture. Having a professor whose native tongue is Spanish aids students in attaining the authentic way of speaking the language.

Department of Spanish—Consuelo R. Jordan (Mrs. Harold C.), B.A. in Ed., M.A., Assistant Professor of Spanish.

Department of German—Gerrit Memming, A.B., A.M., Ph.D., Professor of German; Luther F. Brossman, B.S. in Ed., M.A., D.Phil., Assistant Professor of German.

German

In the twentieth century, Germany has played an important role in determining the modern history of the world. The German student learns philosophy along with linguistics, to facilitate understanding of the actions of this European country. Great masters such as Goethe and Schiller are studied to impress on the student the outstanding cultural influences that Germany has rendered to the western world.

Department of Greek—F. Wilbur Gingrich, A.B., A.M., Ph.D., Professor of Greek.

Greek

The contribution of the Greeks to civilization is inestimable. The philosophers' ideas of democracy were an invaluable asset in the founding of our government. In the Greek department students are taught to read, speak and understand the language. Such study brings greater appreciation of the indebtedness of modern civilization to the ancient Greeks. Although the course is difficult, it is an invaluable aid in understanding the sources of many of our cultural values.

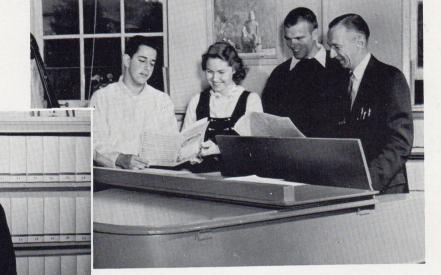

In Greece even the little children speak Greek.

Music

Music has been described as the universal language. People all over the globe find in it hope and pleasure.

Therefore, from our music education at Albright, we not only gain enjoyment, but a tie that binds us to the rest of the world.

ARTS

Department of Art—Ernestine Elder, B.S. in H. Ec., M.A., Assistant Professor of Art and Home Economics.

The democratic citizen must have an appreciation for the finer things of life. A man may possess all the elements of a good life, but without art, lack the polish.

This polish is provided at Albright through courses in the fine arts department. Here one can learn the history of art, the fundamentals of drawing, or even the elements of good dress design.

Administration

AND ISTAL COME OF CHARGING LIBERT

HARRY V. MASTERS, A.B., M.A., Ph.D., LL.D., Ped.D.

President

Every educational institution contributes its part in achieving the objective of preparation for life in a democracy. Some, at one extreme, devote themselves almost exclusively to the acquisition of knowledge and skills related to preparation for entrance into a specific vocation. Others, only a very few, acknowledge no vocational or professional objective.

Albright and most liberal arts colleges are concerned with assisting young people in making the most of life in its best and broadest sense and also in providing basic preparation for a vocational or professional pursuit. The fullness of life cannot be achieved by complete concentration upon armchair, philosophical musing. Neither can concentration upon one's vocation or profession to the exclusion of all else bring full satisfaction. A blending of these two and the inclusion of the many areas in between is needed. It is such emphases, viewing the individual as a whole, which dominate the objectives of your Alma Mater.

Education involves books, laboratories, lectures, quizzes, term papers and exams. Education which makes the greatest contribution to "life in democracy" also involves the personal, friendly "give and take" of the classroom, the lively discussion in the dormitory, the chats in the canteen, the religious activities, honest discussions and worship periods of the Y's, the friendly but hard-fought games in intramural and varsity sports, the programs of the departmental clubs, drama, music and social activities.

Your college provides you the opportunities. We believe you make the most of them. If you do, you have the basis for a serviceable and satisfying life in a democracy.

Best wishes to the Class of 1957.

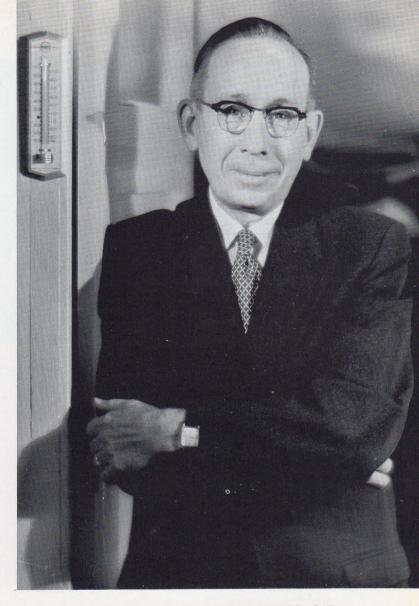

President H. V. Masters

At The Summit

Education is a two-sided coin. One side is the preparation of the individual to lead a productive life, the other, to live cooperatively, respecting the dignity of his fellow man. Whether or not education meets its goal depends upon its administrators. Albright College is fortunate in having as its policy-coordinators men who approach their tasks from a democratic and a Christian standpoint.

The president, Dr. Harry V. Masters, commands the respect of students, faculty, and community as he directs the college in its academic and extra-curricular life. Dean George W. Walton is concerned with the student as a student. He is available for counsel to anyone with academic problems, and encourages the student toward a more effective approach. Favorable public relations are necessary to a college's qualitative growth, and for this Dr. Samuel B. Shirk is credited. The three work together to carry out the goals of the college in building effective citizens of a democracy.

Valuable to the individual in attaining self-realization is the school's open door policy which gives each student the opportunity of personal guidance by any staff member on any problem. The student is aware that he is accepted as a respected personality and is important to the college community. This security offers educational growth beyond the intellect into the whole person.

Every democracy needs a newspaper to report the facts to its citizens. Albright College, our training ground for life in a democracy, has The Albrightian.

Through training on the newspaper, we learn how to write news stories, how to draw up dummies, and how to fit headlines. But most of all, we learn how to meet deadlines. On Tuesday night a big story is supposed to break. It doesn't! Something else must be covered to fill the space. The copy must get to the printer! The paper must come out on Friday!

Through training on The Albrightian, we also learn cooperation. The reporter has to cover the story, the typist must type the report, the copy-reader must read the copy. The photographer must take the picture, the business manager has to balance the budget. Each step is important, each step is vital!

P. Eyrich, associate editor; J. Linton, business manager; S. Goepfert, editor-in-chief.

At Albright, nearly everybody reads The Albrightian.

THE CUE 1957

Now what did they do about this last year? Editors refer knotty problems to the traditional arbitrater.

Discussing the advantages of souped-up picture scheduling are G. Deininger, photographer, R. Engelhardt, artist, M. Teeter, editor, and S. Kaplan, business manager.

On the surface a yearbook is composed of pictures headlines, copy, and that all-embracing term, "white space." Underneath, a yearbook is people—people who thought their college days were important enough to be preserved in a form suitable for display to prospective employers and grandchildren. The list of students who took time to help in one way or another is an ever-growing thing. At the latest reckoning, as the final deadline approaches, the following names belong on that list: D. Englert, B. Pelkus, S. Kaplan, E. Trevaskis, J. Palm, E. Weilenmann, K. Forry, M. Bray, D. Shock, M. Hunsberger, A. Miller, M. Koons, A. Purvis, M. Hutchins, J. Bloise, B. Williams, S. Goepfert, R. # Pi Delta Epsilon Proficiency in the use of English and a flair for writing characterize the members of the Rho Beta chapter of Sigma Tau Delta, professional English fraternity. Pledges are inducted annually in accordance with national rules. The group plan is a variety of programs to increase its appreciation and knowledge of literature. The "Rectangle" is the affiliated national literary magazine, providing an outlet for the creative talents in the organization. Entries in the magazine are published on a competitive basis, and copies are distributed throughout the chapters. Due to specified qualifications for membership, the group is small and informal.

Participation in one or more college publications for two years, one of which must have been spent in an editorial capacity, is the requirement for membership in the Albright Chapter of Pi Delta Epsilon, national honorary collegiate journalism fraternity. The organization seeks to maintain high standards of effective journalism in campus publications and to provide a meeting place for college journalists to exchange information and ideas. The affiliated publication is "The College Publisher," which carries news of college publishing all over the country.

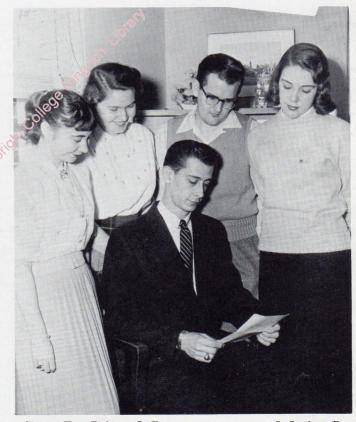

The publication of "The Agon" last year marked the first appearance in many years of an Albright literary magazine. Published jointly by Sigma Tau Delta and Pi Delta Epsilon, the magazine was edited by Wilma Rieser, with Dr. James Reppert as faculty advisor, and Marilyn Teeter as managing editor and business manager. Members of the Class of 1956 who contributed included Helen Schoener and Jane DeWald.

Dramatics

Succeeding Mrs. Annadora V. Shirk, Patricia Hostetter directed the Domino Club for another very successful season. This year's thespians followed the traditional pattern of concentrating on two major productions: "The Rainmaker," by N. Richard Nash was presented in the fall, and "Antigone," adapted by Lewis Galantiere from the play by Jean Anouilh, in the spring.

In addition, several performances of the play "I'm a Fool," dramatized by Christopher Sergel from Sherwood Anderson's story, were presented to local high schools and civic groups. Between productions, the group saw performances at Moravian College in December and at Franklin and Marshall College in the spring.

Experienced upperclassmen and enthusiastic freshmen were drawn together before the footlights and behind the scenes by the common peril of production deadlines. The efficient and ingenious "stage crews" and talented performers combined their skills to make the Domino productions rewarding experiences.

Octet—R. Reidler, B. Boyer, W. Garrett, D. Skeath, J. Seifert, K. Forry, D. Matthews, A. Young, accompanist.

Students are given the opportunity to use their artistic abilities through participation in the Glee Club or Octet. The Glee Club, under the baton of Prof. Lester Yeager and accompanied by Anne Young, utilized the voices of about forty men and women. Representatives of the group—David Bausher, president, Ronald O'Reilly, vice-president, Kathleen Forry, secretary, and William Garrett, business manager—assist in the planning and programing of the activities. To broaden its music and include others, the group presents concerts in schools and churches in single performances, one-day trips, or the spring tour. Returns to the members are only in terms of the satisfaction of having used a talent in a sharing medium.

A smaller group of eight singers who desire to further propagate the enjoyment of music composes the Octet. The experienced members of this self-directing group share the task of interpretation and leadership. Since the group is compact, all members may offer suggestions toward improving the Octet's performance. Berks County high schools, churches, and other organizations have become familiar with the Octet's musical presentations.

The community of a group project, the challenge of concerted effort, the enjoyment of music, the contentment of sharing, and the meeting with new friends, all contribute to the making of a creative hobby for Glee Club and Octet alumni.

Music - - A La Carte!

The Albright College Concert Band appears for the first time in its new uniforms.

Succeeding William H. Levan as Director of Band and Orchestra, Prof. Lester Yeager directed the 1956–7 season. As in the past, the Albright Band added spirit to the season's football games, being present at all of the home games and the game at Franklin and Marshall College. Before the Christmas vacation, the Band and Glee Club combined their talents in a concert of Christmas music.

New equipment and new uniforms, which were worn

New equipment and new uniforms, which were worn for the first time at the Community Convocation in January, added a new and bright note. During the spring semester, the Band presented concerts of popular music for Chapel programs. The Band also presented a concert sponsored by the EUB Dart Ball Church League.

In March, the Band received a special note of distinction. Two students from Albright, Robert Pearson (alto sax) and W. Alan Seiforth (flute) were selected to participate in the Pennsylvania Collegiate Band Festival held at the Indiana State Teachers College. This was the first time Albright had taken part in the festival. During the past year, the Albright Marching Band has contributed to the spirit and life of the college. Officers for the year were R. Guldin, president; S. Dettra, secretary-treasurer; W. Wollenhaupt, student director; and K. Forry, business manager.

Practicality versus idealism—here is a struggle with which man has been confronted for centuries. He has found it painful and perplexing for several reasons. If he tries to hold to his ideals, he is labeled an unrealistic dreamer and cynically tolerated by a world which seems to measure its maturity by its ability to say "Yes, but . . ." He realizes that his ideals are incommunicable to all but a few, and soon even he begins to doubt their existence. Resignedly, he steps off his cloud to find that the ground after all offers much more security. So he continues to exist within this attitude of practicality, until one day he feels a sensation of hollowness. It is difficult for him to admit that there is a void within his soul, that life has not been vital, challenging or satisfying. What, then, is there to do? Shall he restructure his compromised ideals and begin anew the frustrating cycle of disillusionment?

The dilemma is not hopeless, for idealism and practice are not mutually exclusive as they seem; they are, in fact, vital to each other. Without ideals, practice becomes unmotivated and meaningless, and without practice, ideals cannot justify their own truth or the sincerity with which they are proclaimed. The living of ideals can and must be a reality.

Christian idealism often faces denials of its applicability in the modern age, and these stem from the sin of inactive philosophising in the face of crying needs. Among the Christian organizations which have recognized the problem we hope to place our Y. Its goal is to reach out in Christian ideals to individual, campus, community and world.

The Y acts towards the realization of its four ideals through commissions. The Christian Faith and Heritage Commission seeks to foster individual spiritual growth by planning Sunday night Vesper Services and by organizing a Go-to-Church program which aims to encourage all students to attend church and to acquaint freshmen with Reading's churches. The most recent venture of this commission has been to sponsor cell groups which meet weekly for meditation, prayer and discussion.

It has been the aim of the Personal and Campus Affairs Commission to make students aware of the opportunities for Christian action on campus. Information on summer projects and vocational consultations are made available.

The Social Responsibility Commission steps out into the community in an effort to stimulate citizenship and social concern on the part of the students. Most successful of its projects has been the Christmas Party for Reading's under-privileged children. Here in simplicity and beauty we find the manifestation of love.

Recognizing that real concern must look beyond the campus and the community, the World Relatedness Commission sponsors discussions and action pertaining to international problems and human relations. These four approaches, then, constitute the Y's support of the contention that idealism can be practical.

The International Relations Club is a group whose interest in contemporary international affairs extends beyond the classroom. Panel discussions, student and faculty speakers and speakers from off campus are featured at the monthly group meetings. In December, the I.R.C. helped organize the high school model General Assembly of the United Nations, held on the college campus. Philip Eyrich, treasurer, served as Secretary General at the high school model U. Among the Greek letter societies on campus are those whose prime significance is not social. Their share in the enrichment of college life is evidenced through activities devoted to culture, community, intellect and service. Two of our honorary societies especially foster a broadening of knowledge and experience in the fields which they represent. From lectures on community organization to struggles with economic theory and practice, the members of Pi Gamma Mu, the honorary social science fraternity, step forward under the leadership of their president Mel Horst to meet challenges of the intellect. Classroom work forms the basis for a further elaboration in Delta Phi Alpha, honorary German fraternity, of many interesting aspects of German culture as well as for the development of proficiency in oral discourse. Each spring the members look forward to their annual banquet at which the poetic pledges are inducted.

As the organized group of pre-ministerial students on campus, KTX is one instrument through which present crises, future aspirations and growing concerns may be shared through a common faith. A newer asset to our campus, the Alpha Phi Omega Service Fraternity holds to the ideal that the high Scout traditions can be carried over into adult life. The fraternity approaches its ultimate purpose of service under the able guidance of Dr. Paul Leininger and a faculty committee.

Football season brought to Albright the usual spirit and enthusiasm. The Lions were not so badly outplayed as the scores indicate. Each game was hard-fought, but due to injuries and some bad breaks at critical points, the season record ended at 2-7.

Stellar performance by seniors Joe De-Meno and Chuck Hoover, co-captain, Tom Pollock, Whitey Rightmire, Joe Sheppard and the other co-captain, Willy Smith, was evident throughout the season. Their services will be greatly missed by next fall's team. However, there will be approximately 15 returning lettermen who should prove to be valuable assets on the gridiron next year.

John Potsklan turned in his second year of coaching at Albright assisted by Dick Riffle, former Albright football great, Will Renken, basketball and tennis coach, and Bob Sulyma, captain of the '55 season. Frank York, assistant manager, Bob Wetzel, assistant trainer, and Dick Thrasher, student manager, deserve a great deal of credit for their worthwhile service to the team.

ceived very able assistance from sophomores Fred Dietzel, Merrill Eckhart and Dick Kelly.

Riddell finished out his college career with a four-year total of 1238 points and led the Lion scorers this year. He also was recipient of the coveted Ron Regar Trophy as the outstanding player on this year's squad. Franklin and Marshall, Bucknell, and Moravian invaded the Albright Fieldhouse, boasting the best records in their schools' histories, but all fell in defeat before the Renkenmen. Lehigh, Gettysburg, Wagner, Lebanon Valley, Elizabethtown and Dickinson also tasted defeat at the hands of the hard-charging Lions.

Surprisingly enough, the Lions produced their outstanding game in defeat, in the eyes of many fans, when they played the National Invitation-bound Lafayette Leopards, who came to Albright boasting a record of 20-3 and a starting line-up which averaged about 6'4". It took a strong finishing surge by Lafayette to pull ahead in a game in which they had trailed for the first 34 minutes. This provides a good basis for saying, "Watch the Lions next year!"

Although the "Baby Lions" had a losing season, winning ten and losing eleven, they showed a degree of aggressiveness and spirit that was hard to beat. Coached by Howard "Hops" Guldin, the Jay Vees were hampered severely by a lack of height which was the major factor in the loss of some of their games.

Next year's varsity team will depend on this year's Jay Vee team, and there are many individual highlights that can be pointed out. For example: the shooting of Richie Greene and Charlie Smith, who averaged 17.2 and 10 points respectively per game; the rebounding of Tom Faust; the passing and team play of Bob Shoup; and the defensive work of Charles Kachel.

The valuable experience gained by these boys should make them a trememdous asset to next year's varsity.

A crucial moment in the exciting game between the Albright J.V. and the Intra-mural All-Stars.

After finishing one of their best seasons, Albright's cindermen are again preparing for a full schedule. This year's squad will be led by George Mack, who set a track record here last year in the Middle Atlantics, and Bob Wetzel, last year's highest point scorer. Along with returning lettermen Don Gottshall and Ted Faust in the middle distances, Dick Kelly and Ken Greenawald in the dashes, Dick Thrasher in the one and two mile, and John Settercze, John Cunningham and Tom Feick in the weight field, Coach Gene Shirk is again expecting a successful season.

Led by veterans Gottshall, Mack and Thrasher, the harriers finished with a 2-7 record this year. Although outclassed by the depth of such schools as Lafayette, Delaware and West Chester, the Lions made a battle of every meet. The highlight came when Captain Gottshall, Mack, and Thrasher finished 1-2-3 in the Lion's upset victory over Elizabethtown. A promising group of freshmen plus veterans Thrasher, Mack and Amy will give Coach Shirk a good nucleus to work with next year.

Things should be much greener on the golf course this year for the Albright golf team. With four returning lettermen, the team should improve on last year's 3-9 record. The bulk of the team will be made up of four stellar linksmen: Ernie Brodbeck, Willie Smith, Bill Breneman, and Bob Carlson. These lettermen will fill four of six positions on the team. The remaining vacancies will be filled by a number of hopefuls led by Don Mazza. Dave Bennett, and Jon Frank.

Last year, the tossers compiled a splendid record of 13 wins, 5 losses and 2 ties against an array of top-notch competition. Because of the large number of veterans returning and a good group of freshman hopefuls, the indication is that the team this year will improve on their '56 record. At any rate, it can be safely predicted that Albright's '57 varsity baseball team will make a creditable showing on the diamond.

Prospects look bright for Albright's varsity baseball team this season. Returning for another fling on the diamond are lettermen Bob Fiorindo, Tom Pollock, Bobby Kovack, Dale Yoder, Bob Moller, Terry Reber, Fred Dietzel, Merrill Eckhart and Vern Engle. These veterans are being counted on by Coach John Potsklan to form the nucleus for this year's contingent. Of course, it will be a task to fill the shoes of George Conrad, last year's captain and third leading hitter, Bernie Seaman and Roy Dragon, but there are quite a few good prospects in the freshman class who seem to be capable of filling the vacancies left by the graduates.

Albright's Wrestling Team, although in its first season, showed promise of good teams to come in future years. Inexperience proved to be the deciding factor in the loss of 8 matches. However, there was marked improvement in the charges of Coach Gerald Banger as the season progressed. In the first match, Delaware trounced the Lions 38-0. This same Delaware team had come from behind to beat P.M.C. by 15-14. When the Lions met P.M.C. later in the season, they lost by only 3 points—17-14.

Other opponents during the 1956-57 season were Ursinus, Elizabethtown, Lycoming, Lehigh J.V., Millersville J.V. and Lebanon Valley.

For the second straight season, Albright's tennis team in 1956 hung up a winning record. The Lions, despite a loss at the hands of Ursinus College in their finale, finished with 10 wins and 5 defeats, an improvement on the 7-6 record in the same sport in 1955. It was the first season for Will Renken as Lions' head coach. The Red and White beat nine straight rivals before bowing to Ursinus. Capt. John Schiavo was the lone senior on the Albright squad.

Athletics are an integral part of the life of any college campus. During the fall one invariably hears cheers arising from the football stadium. "We want a touchdown!" as the Albright men strain to get those points. But another cry can also be heard, arising from the hockey field. "Make that goal!" as the Albright girls fight to achieve victory over their opponents.

The portrait of a good hockey player is not a simple one. She must have high physical capabilities; endurance, running skill, and coordination. Equally as important in hockey is mental ability, for there are fundamental techniques to be acquired, knowledge of cooperation and teamwork to be gained, and a knack to be developed of knowing where to send the ball with the proper timing.

The essence of any good team is the sportsmanship of its members—putting their heart into the game. The Albright girls strive to do their best for their school and for their team, and in their playing can be seen the personification of the cheer, "Red and white, fight, fight!"

Women's Basketball

The women's basketball team, within the short space of four weeks, played one practice game, two play days, four away games, and two home games. The season started "on the road" against Immaculata. The team suffered a loss, and this pattern continued through all the away games. However, the team reclaimed its honor in the playdays. The first playday held on the home court Albright won by defeating Kutztown, Cedar Crest, and Moravian. Later the same teams played on Kutztown's court, and Albright tied for first place by defeating Cedar Crest and Moravian, although losing to Kutztown, which also won another game. The practice game against Beryllium, a town team, was won 36-30. Coach Eva Mosser has great hopes for next year's squad, since there were no seniors on this year's team and all the girls are therefore potential returnees.

WAA

One of the most inconspicuously functioning organizations on campus is the Women's Athletic Association. All women students are automatically members. The cabinet is composed of officers and one representative from each class. The cabinet decides the rules and regulations for the varsity hockey, basketball, and tennis squads. Also, the selection of team captains comes under the administration of WAA.

During the winter, the concession stands for the basketball games are efficiently managed by the cabinet, as every freshman girl knows, since she is required to assist in selling food to the hungry mobs.

In the spring, WAA sponsors the elaborate ceremony of May Day, with its crowning of the queen. Finally, awards are presented to those girls who have earned enough points through varsity sports, managing, cheerleading or serving on the cabinet. In addition to the previous awards of a numeral letter, sweater, and a gold key, beginning this year a very active person has a chance to earn an Albright blanket and a blazer, also. Two trophies are presented, one to the best girl athlete, and one to the girl who has served WAA most.

Cheerleaders

Tennis

Spring at Albright College turns the minds of many girls to out-of-door sports, and one of the most appealing is tennis. This year it has made significant gains in popularity. The facilities and their availability to all has been in part responsible for the increase in active participation in recent years. Girls returning to Varsity tennis this year are Betsy Smith, Dot Orders, Suzie Schick, Carolie Smith and Pat Krause. The return of these experienced girls, plus the number of interested freshmen, makes the team outlook favor-

Alpha Pi Omega

Distinguished men in tweedy suits, bull sessions on the porch, crew cuts, progressive jazz—these partially describe the APO's. Additional characterization can be shown in the brothers' loyal participation in intramural sports and the feeling of accomplishment gained from polishing the trophies that crowd the mantel. Twice a year, APO talent is displayed on stage, and always produces eager applause. The calibre of performance typifies the spirit of togetherness felt in this brotherhood. Discreet distribution of brothers throughout the varied campus organizations shows interest in Albright and a willingness to be a competent part of the whole. Mixing social and academic activities has proven to be natural and desirable for the APO's, producing wellbalanced individuals. Leadership, success and security have been predominate in the history of the APO brotherhood. The future can only be predicted, but the situation looks bright. Alpha Pi Omega possesses the standards necessary to maintain a successful brotherhood.

Kappa Upsilon Phi

Brothers of the Kappa Upsilon Phi Fraternity have well learned the lesson of living and working together in loyalty to one another and to their fraternity. The Kappa's were led this year by archeon Floyd Rightmire and vice-archeon Richard Guldin. Lee Garrigan held office as recording secretary; Sam Kissinger, corresponding secretary; Jay Miller, treasurer; Bob Liput, house manager; Larry Nester, chaplain; and Bill West, parliamentarian. During the year, the brothers joined with their alumni in sponsoring a fall dinner dance and presented a Christmas dance for the freshmen. With the Pat's they opened their house to the campus and entertained with the music of Lee Garrigan and his band. The Phi held its annual party for the Reading Orphan's Home in March. Jay Miller headed the committee of Gerry Knapp, Larry Nestor, Bob Wool and George Teitge. This year the house welcomed back veterans Harold Lightweis, Don Leo, Ray Rothenberger, Edward Hambicki and Frank Adshead.

Phi Beta Mu

The desire to uphold the aims and ideals of Albright College, as well as to provide an additional social outlet for coeds, characterizes the purpose of the Phi Beta Mu sorority. A close bond of friendship and consideration maintains the success of this sisterhood. A sense of cooperation enhances the growth of individual members and augments the spirit of the sorority itself. Varied activities engaged in are beneficial as far as enjoyment, participation and accomplishment are concerned. A sorority is not merely fun and prestige. It involves extensive responsibility and duty on the part of each sister to do her share by maintaining growth in the Mu's.

Pi Alpha Tau

Happy in the diversity of individualism, the sisters of Pi Alpha Tau move constantly and forcibly toward the strength and love of sisterhood. In this year's journey forward, the Pat's originated an African safari rush party, and a Show Boat cruise for their fall dance. Symbols of sisterhood appeared as the unforgettable pledge egg became a Humpty-Dumpty Home-coming float. Paddles and dinks decorated the Pi Tau and Kappa open houses. Flapper days, epitomizing Pat vivacity, enlivened the stunt night stage. Beyond the symbols and the fun of pledging, service projects, moon songs and basketball programs lies a depth of friendship which is the spirit of Pi Alpha Tau.

Pi Tau Beta

Under the banner of the Red and Black, the Pi Tau Beta Fraternity is bonded together by its common goals and dreams. As they enter their fiftieth year, the Pi Tau's are working more than ever for their house. Everywhere on campus the fraternal spirit of the Pi Tau's can be felt, whether in the Pine Room, in campus activities, on the athletic field, or at home in the Courts. Their outgoing friendliness was apparent at their Christmas Dance at the Goodwill Fire Hall and at the annual open house with the Pat's in the newly-decorated social rooms. Always working to win, yet placing more value on the quality of workmanship, the Pi Tau's produced for Homecoming a float depicting the sinking of the S.S. Flying Dutchman. Piece by piece, they build memories far deeper than even the pages of their Logos can portray. Lives become stronger for the brotherhood they have experienced.

Zeta Omega Epsilon

A powerhouse of energy and strength is compactly stored within the recesses of the Zeta house. The number of brothers who take part in varsity athletics is notable and the active participation of many in other campus sports shows their three U's. Zeta faces appear frequently at different meetings and activities offered by and for the students.

Within the bonds of brotherhood many men have learned what friendship can mean. Living in close relationship with others teaches them how to get along with varying types of people. Fraternity life in college can be preparation for community life after graduation. This year the Zeta's have created a notable portion of the social life at Albright.

Class of 1958

With the junior year, the Class of '58 assumed a position of great responsibility in the college community. From its ranks will be recruited the men and women who will be in charge of student life during the 1957-58 year. As a unit, the class went through the traditional orientation period—wearing dinks, buttoning, and cheering at football games. Its members pledged together, played together on teams, and planned together for campus events such as the Frosh-Soph Hop. The result has been an effective measuring of one another—and from this measuring will come the ability to elect as leaders those most competent to lead. This responsibility is central to the entire conception of democratic government.

Upperclassmen at last, sophomores claim this year is the toughest-"sophomore blues"-tests, tests, and tests! But sophomores do manage to find time for the annual "frosh beating" and socializing in the Sub and Pine Room. Fall found the sophomores busy with freshman counselorships and preparations for traditional social events, including teas, Homecoming, parties and dances. At mid-year, sophomores became famous for their wellknown cry for "quiet hours!" With second semester came the grades from first semester, which were either (1) better, (2) worse or (3) the same as expected. Sophomores threw themselves wholeheartedly into preparations for Stunt and Sports Nights. (Oh, those ping-pong and broad-jump practices!) Several members of the Class of '59 were honored by being elected officers of various campus functions. Approaching the half-way mark, sophomores anticipate increased opportunities for leadership and participation in the campus democracy.

Business Administration - Front row: J. Weil, J. Newcomer, R. Carlson, G. Morfogen, E. Dymek. Second row: clockwise: H. Zakrison, C. Noecker, D. Sallade, M. Gordon, W. Greenawald, J. Shaner, G. ## Class of 1960

New arrivals on campus, freshmen faced a fresh tomorrow. Immediately thrown into a whirl of activities, they began their college education-learning how to study and get along with people. First they had to obey those stern upperclassmen who dashed upon them yelling "Button frosh!" Then came the problem of how to study amidst all the distractions. The Ivy Ball, which closed the Orientation period, was greeted with much enthusiasm. Mid-semester tests then frightfully confronted the freshmen. Between Thanksgiving and Christmas, rush parties and dances added to frosh spirit. Next came mid-year-with tempers and sleep equally sacrificed to the god of 3.7. Second semester found the Class of '60 more settled and better able to brave the undertows of college life. Spring and the prospect of the sophomore year found it convinced that the rest would be downhill work.

Business Administration—Kneeling: R. Napolitani, D. Mazza, W. Protheroe. Standing: A. Stewart, R. Hartwick, J. Ream, A. LoSapio, R. Matthews, R. Green, H. Saunders, N. Hutchins, C, Kachel, J. May, H. Miller, J. Tucker, L. Wolf, R. Seip, B. Williams, R. Albright, M. Wixon, P. McFerren, R. Longacre, G. Bauer, E. Adams, J. Gombar.

May Court—E. Snyder, M. Lorchak, C. Smith, S. Schiavo. Missing from picture: C. Winner, M. Tims, E. Trevaskis.

"On a day each May set apart . . . " a tradition of beauty and ceremony holds high its place amidst the struggle of progress. College life is crowded with the debate of the intellect straining to fit textbook concepts to life and seeking the grounds of reality in a life cluttered with details. So it must be in the training grounds of a democracy that the pre-fabricated way is rejected for the self-chosen path. In the confusion of a democracy the simplicity and truth of beauty are often misfocused or pushed from consciousness. May Day is set aside to pay homage to the pageantry of tradition and the virtue of beauty. It is a time for the student to refresh himself through commemorating those qualities he so readily takes for granted. It is a time when he shares with his parents his acknowledgement that beauty is the sister of truth and that the love and gentility of life hold an equal place with its wisdom and strength.
