The Project NAMES Quilt Comes to Albright Remembering Their Names

by Emily Ilana Losben

After eighteen months of planning the Quilting For Berks Coalition reached its goal, the largest display of the NAMES Project AIDS Memorial Quilt in Berks County. This display was without a doubt a huge success. It opened on Thursday, November 2, and was on display until Sunday, November 5. Not only did people have an opportunity to view over 600 panels of the quilt, but many other programs took place to help educate the community about the AIDS epidemic.

Friday, November 3, was Kids day at the quilt. Students from all over the Reading area coming to Albright College to view, learn about, and experience the quilt. There were students from elementary schools, middle schools and the high school present to learn about the quilt. The students walked away with a better understanding of the disease. More importantly, however, the students walked away with a better understanding of the people who died from the horrible disease. They saw the panels made for grown men and women, babies, and young adults their own age. The students were able to ask questions and get information in a setting other than the classroom. An activity designed especially for the students was a scavenger hunt which included finding panels for some of the famous people who have died of AIDS such as Pedro Zamora (of MTV's "The Real World"), Ryan White (AIDS Activist), Rock Hudson (Actor), Arthur Ashe (Tennis Star), Keith Haring (world-famous local artist), and more. The students also tried to find panels with their names and ages on it, thus making it easier for them to relate to the disease and its related issues.

Programs that were held on Saturday were also scheduled with the purpose of making it easier for many people to relate to the quilt and AIDS. People from all backgrounds spoke on such topics as "Living with AIDS," "Women and AIDS," "HIV/AIDS in the Latino Community" and many other pertinent topics. Peer educators, religious leaders, and people with AIDS were among the many that led these lectures. These lectures supplemented the experience of the quilt by providing many people with the personal information that can not be obtained from the panels alone.

The major event that was planned for Sunday, November 5, the closing day, was the dedication of panels. This was a ceremony where people from the community could bring panels that they had made for loved ones in order for these panels to become a part of the national quilt. That means that each individual panel will be sent away to San Francisco to be sewn together with seven other panels from the same region to make one 12-by-12 foot section of the national quilt. Once the sewing is complete, the panels will be ready to be sent around the world for display. Currently, all the sections put together would cover more than 18 football fields. These sections will be displayed again in Washington for a fourth time next year from October 11-October 13.

During this dedication ceremony more than 40 panels were released by their creator to become a part of the NAMES Project.

The NAMES Project is now in its tenth year. It was started in 1985 by a man named Cleve Jones. He wrote the name of his friend Marvin Feldman, who had died of AIDS, on a placard and asked his friends to do the same during a candlelight march for a slain San Francisco government official. By the end of the march, Jones had plans for a bigger memorial. He began to make the first panel and engaged others in doing the same. The first display of the quilt came on October 11, 1987 in Washington. At that time there were almost 2,000 panels. Currently, there are over 31,000 panels, with more being made every day. Unfortunately, the number of panels still only represents about 12% of all the people who have died of AIDS.

Many of the things that the Quilting for Berks Coalition and the NAMES Project wish to accomplish are the same. They include the following: increasing public awareness of the AIDS epidemic and HIV prevention, offering a creative form of expression for all whose lives have been affected by HIV and AIDS and to preserve the memory of those who have died as a result of the disease, and encouraging support and the raising of funds for people living with HIV and AIDS and their loved ones.

Thanks to all the people who visited the quilt at one time or another, these goals have all been met.

The AIDS Quilt Experience

by Emily Ilana Losben

When seeing the NAMES Project National Quilt, a person does not just view it, he experiences it. As an educator for children from the Reading area I experienced teaching the importance of remembering not only the names of the victims of AIDS, but their lives as well. I experienced a whole other feeling when viewing the quilt with two of my friends. Not only did I learn the importance of having good friends to share both the good times and bad, but I understood how difficult it was for the friends of people with AIDS to lose that friend. Another important lesson I learned from experiencing the quilt was the necessity to often take a step back to see the whole picture. When looking at one panel in particular, it was difficult for me to see that picture. However, when I looked at it from across the room I saw that it was a mother holding the hand of her child with the sun shining on them. From that one panel, I realized the importance of taking a step back to view the entire quilt. Up close each panel may be simple or intricate, but when all the panels are looked at collectively, a person can see the love that has been lost because of the AIDS epidemic. Though my feelings may be unique, everyone who viewed the quilt also experienced it. Here is just a few of some of Albright student's reactions to the display held here two weeks ago.

Megan Brady:

Although this was not the first time I had seen portions of the AIDS quilt, it was definitely the most moving. Sunday, November 5, I went to see the closing ceremony of the AIDS quilt display in Reading. At first as you're walking around, the magnitude of the situation does not fully hit you. Then, all of a sudden you just think "all these people are gone", and then you wonder why. There may not be a purpose for the loss of life, but there is a purpose for the AIDS quilt, and that is to remind people of the HIV virus and its seriousness. People need to remember that AIDS does not stop when you have a discussion or class on it. You have to remember everyday that you can help protect yourself by using common sense. This is the only way that we will be able to overcome this deadly virus.

Abass B. Kamara:

The AIDS quilt presentation at Albright was a very moving experience for me personally. I had the opportunity to view the closing ceremony. These closing ceremonies made the problem of AIDS very real and very concrete. AIDS, for me, is not a problem restricted to gays or drug users, but now a problem that can reach anyone. This really hit home when I saw average run of the mill families carrying blankets representing their losses due to AIDS. I am proud to see Albright take a stand.

Jemmell'z Washington:

Viewing the AIDS quilt was a moving experience. While I also looked at the panels, I noticed other things. I noticed friends gathering by certain panels to reminiscence about their loved one who is represented on the quilt. I noticed small children trying to understand what they were viewing and parents trying to explain the quilt to their children. How do you explain the panel of a child who succumbed to AIDS when you realize that the panel could have your child's name on it? I saw many people crying and one lady was so moved that she carried one of the available Kleenex boxes with her. The quilt coming to Berks County and Albright served its purpose--to make us aware that if we continue to close our eyes to the AIDS epidemic, a student in Albright's class of 2025 may soon be viewing a panel with our names on it.

Jessica Hartley:

The AIDS quilt was very disturbing to me. While it was beautiful piece of artwork constructed by the families and friends of those who have died from this terrible disease, it was also an exhibit of just how many people have been affected by AIDS. Seeing the number of patches hit me pretty hard emotionally, but it was not until I read all the messages and signatures on the patches that I began to cry. AIDS does not only hurt the person infected, it also hurts everyone close to that person, and we need to find a cure to this disease. In the meantime, we must educate people about the dangers of this disease to stop the spread of it.

To combat AIDS we must all play a role. We can not just turn our backs. Now is as good a time as ever to help end this horrible disaster. There are numbers to call and people to go to. Currently there is also a group trying to get off the ground in order to promote AIDS awareness at Albright. Please get involved. Right now education and awareness is the only way to prevent your name from being placed on the quilt.

Study Abroad Web Site Kicks Off with Contest

Each year more than 100,000 American students study abroad. Students interested in study abroad programs now have a wealth of the most up-to-date information just a mouse click away. Studyabroad.com, a complete online resource center, makes its official debut on November 1.

The official launch of studyabroad.com will be celebrated with a contest featuring dozens of prizes. The grand prize is a round-trip ticket to anywhere in the world that British Airways flies. Second prize is a two month Eurobus pass. Students can register for the drawing online.

Studyabroad.com can be accessed on the Internet by pointing a web browser to <http://www.studyabroad.com>. The web site contains listings for more than 500 institutions which provide international education opportunities. Many of the institutions have their own web sites which can be accessed by way of links from studyabroad.com, providing students with a one stop online resource tool. Programs are organized by destination country with subdivisions for summer programs and intensive language programs.

Studyabroad.com is also home to the Study Abroad Forum, a venue for the discussion of study abroad topics. The Forum is a moderated outlet which accepts submissions from students, educators and administrators wishing to share their experiences, opinions and advice on topics relating to study abroad. The Forum will also publish press releases regarding study abroad programs. Anyone interested in submitting articles or news releases to the forum can E-mail them to forum@studyabroad.com.

Studyabroad.com is a solution to the problem of tapping the wealth of information which exists on the Internet. While there are countless thousands of pages of information relating to international education available on the Web, it is a daunting task to locate the information. Studyabroad.com brings much of this information to one location, providing a single resource with many links. The site is organized so that students can select their country of interest and view and download listing of all of the institutions offering programs in that country. Many program sponsors have provided links to expanded information on their programs which are accessible from the list. Users can also browse and download full lists of all of the institutions in the study abroad database.

Another portion of the Web Site allows users to shop for services and products related to studying abroad such as travel services, health insurance, related merchandise and financial aid information.

Studyabroad.com is a service of Liberty City Promotions, Inc., a campus marketing firm based in suburban Philadelphia, PA. (Fax from Mark Landon, Studyabroad.com.)

Auerbach's book discusses consequences of evil

by Allison Larkins

While many of us at Albright are busy worrying about courseloads, upcoming finals, and registering for the spring semester one of our own has stepped into the literacy limelight.

Dr. Bruce Auerbach, who took on the roll of an Albright professor only two years ago, has managed to write and publish a book called Unto the Thousandth Generation. Having just been published, Dr. Auerbach's book is expected out in the bookstores very soon.

Unto the Thousandth Generation is an in-depth study of the philosophy of how today's generation is acting unjustly towards future generations. In simpler terms, it makes a study of the effects of the evils of our generation on our descendants (our great-grandchildren). When Auerbach's book talks about evils, it is referring to toxic waste, pollution, nuclear warfare, and other earth-shattering issues that are being fought today.

As Dr. Auerbach put it, "Future people may be harmed by toxic waste created by our use of nuclear energy. How do we dispose of it? There's no warning we can print to be a fair warning to those in our future."

The major issues in Unto the Thousandth Generation deal with the paradoxes and difficulties of answering questions pertaining to our justice towards persons of the not-so-distant future. As Auerbach explains, "Our actions today determine who will exist and how many will exist." Auerbach continues the valid point of this philosophy when he adds, "If we render half of the planet inhabitable, and half of the planet declines, have we acted unjustly?"

In light of all of the difficult philosophical issues presented in Auerbach's book, it is safe to describe it as a search for the meaning of man's actions towards a remote generation and how sometimes evil can be hidden in our actions.

This evil is what prompted Dr. Auerbach to write his book. According to Auerbach, evil has been long-standing in the American Experience. An example of this would be the near-extinction of the American Indians. In his book Dr. Auerbach observes how this evil continues into our generation today and how it will probably carry over to future generations. As Dr. Auerbach concludes: "Evil is often banal, we often ignore the affect of our actions because we assume so much."

As a Professor of Political Science and the Pre-Law advisor for Albright, Dr. Auerbach has an impressive background in his area of concentration. He graduated with a B.A. and a M.A. in Political Science from Drew University and to end out his academic honors he received his Ph.D. in Political Science from the University of Minnesota.

As for his teaching experience, it is as well-rounded as his academic career. He started out at Moorehead University for one year. After Moorehead he moved for a six year stint at Wilkes University. Then in 1994 he graced Albright's campus with his presence and has been teaching Political Science courses and advising expectant Law students ever since. With the publication of his book, Dr. Bruce Auerbach is definitely making his mark at Albright putting the College on the map again as well!

Interdenominational Services Provide Variety in Worship

by Lisa Zimmerman

We are halfway through the fall semester and services have been sufficiently advertised so most Albright students are aware that religious services are offered on campus. However, only four percent of the student body utilizes these services. Therefore, it would seem as though there is a lack of knowledge as to what exactly is available to students. Aside from the Catholic service offered at 8 p.m. on Sunday evenings, there are two interdenominational Christian services, one on Wednesday at noon and the other at 10:30 Sunday mornings. The Wednesday service only runs for about 30 minutes so students can get to either class or lunch on time. The Sunday service goes no longer than 50 minutes. Although the number of students who are present for these services is not staggering, Chaplain Steve Ohnsman concerns himself more with the availability of religious opportunities to students rather than just the student turnout.

What exactly is incorporated into these services? Since the services are interdenominational, different styles of worship are explored. This month there was a Kristallnacht service and in December there will be an Advent service. According to Ohnsman, the purpose of these different services is to provide some variety in worship, but at the core of every service is the opportunity to "sing a little, pray a little, and read scripture." He believes students can benefit from these interdenominational services because "although everyone has their own peculiarities, the essence of what we do is the same, and most people realize that they need God in some way."

Everyone, even from the Reading community, and from all faiths and backgrounds are welcome to these weekly interdenominational Christian services. Also, if there are any students who have questions or concerns, they are more than welcome to talk to Ohnsman. Since he is only employed part-time at Albright, it is usually hard to catch him in his office; he enjoys being active on campus. He is also more than willing to come and talk in residence halls.

Dual Career Couples: How to Manage in the 90s

by Lisa Zimmerman

On Tuesday, November 7, a group of about 40 students gathered in the Campus Center South Lounge in the hopes of learning how to deal in the upcoming years with being in a dual career relationship. This experience event was presented by James R. Huber, Ph.D., a Marriage and Family Therapist, Consultant, and Trainer in the local area.

Dr. Huber, who stressed interaction in the group, started out the evening with a mixer. He then made the point that not just marriage is considered a dual career relationship; students at Albright who are dating must also learn how to juggle their roles as both a girlfriend or boyfriend and student. Couples in the group were asked to define their relationships as dual (a lot of fighting), dual (ideal), or do-all (preoccupied with individual activities). Dr. Huber then explained how it is important in a dual career relationship to listen to each other with patience and open-mindedness. Each person may also at times have to sacrifice a little, but these sacrifices should be basically equitable.

A panel consisting of alumni Patty and Mike Agia, and Professor Jeffrey Barker was available for advice on how they, as dual career couples, performed their roles in their separate careers, while still maintaining a partnership in marriage. Because many students on campus are either involved presently in relationships, or are graduating and may soon face the prospect of marriage, the advice and suggestions given were very practical and helpful.

Preparation is Underway for SIFE Team Competition

by Nicole VanCoeur

Reading, Pa., November 7, 1995 - Students from Albright college have formed a team to participate in the 1996 Students in Free Enterprise competition held annually for colleges nationwide. Students in Free Enterprise, or SIFE, is a non-profit organization dedicated to the cultivation of the entrepreneurial spirit and the understanding of how the free enterprise system works. The program has grown steadily since its creation in 1975, annually involving over 30,000 campus students internationally.

Under the direction of a faculty advisor, each SIFE Team will develop and implement a variety of projects that foster the principles of free enterprise while helping local businesses and the community. Gertrude Eguae-Obazee, Accounting Professor, has been named faculty advisor for the Albright College Team and has also been designated as a Sam M. Walton Free Enterprise Fellow in recognition of her commitment to the Albright College Team. Under the direction of Ms. Eguae-Obazee, classroom lessons will be reinforced in economics, management, marketing, and communications as students develop educational projects that teach fellow college students and their community a better understanding of current economic issues and encourage a greater appreciation for the free enterprise system.

The Albright College Team will have the opportunity to participate in one of eight regional competitions this April where they will present and explain their outreach programs to a panel of business executives and entrepreneurs. The teams are judged on the effectiveness of their projects during a 30-minute presentation and are evaluated for creativity and innovation, results of education programs, their success in utilizing resources, and how well they document their activities. Over 215 schools from 47 states are expected to compete in regional competitions this year. Top teams from each region will receive $1,500 and are then eligible to compete in the SIFE International Exposition held May 19-21 in Kansas City, Missouri.

SIFE Board of Directors Chairman, Jack Kahl who is Chairman of Cleveland-based Manco, Inc. said, "If we are to keep America competitive in a global market and preserve free enterprise for future generations, we must teach every American how free enterprise works. SIFE does that by stressing a hands-on approach to teaching current economic issues, principles of the American free enterprise system, entrepreneurship, and, most importantly, leadership."

For more information about SIFE or how to support the Albright College SIFE Team, call Nicole VanCoeur, President of the Albright College SIFE Team at 610-678-0847 or Professor Gertrude Eguae-Obazee, faculty advisor at 610-921-2381.

Windham Hill Artists to Appear at Albright

Jill Haley and David Cullen, two local musicians whose popularity with audiences is growing as their reputations have steadily advanced within the music industry, will present a concert Sunday, November 19 at 7:30 p.m. in Rook Hall.

Oboist Jill Haley has performed with Windham Hill Records founder Will Ackerman as well as with One Alternative, a trio of two guitars and oboe. David Cullen has released three recordings and is featured on the Windham Hill Sampler. He has been described in Guitar Player Magazine as "Eclectic... Refreshing." Together, Haley and Cullen present a unique blend of classical, jazz, and world music idioms. Their concerts feature interpretations of standard works and improvisations on their own compositions.

Cullen and Haley's Albright performance will include J.S. Bach's Suite for Lute; a collection of folk songs from the rural south entitled Mountain Songs, by Robert Beaser; and Birdland, by Joe Zawinul, as well as some original compositions.

Pi Kappa Phi receives Master Chapter Award

The Zeta Chi Chapter of the Pi Kappa Phi National Fraternity at Albright College received the Master Chapter Award at the Fraternity's biennial leadership conference for their efforts in maintaining a well-run chapter both locally and nationally.

This award is one of the highest distinctions given to undergraduate chapters, to recognize those chapters that excel in chapter programming, record keeping and perfect attendance at Pi Kappa Phi leadership events.

The award was presented at the Fraternity's national leadership conference, Pi Kappa College, in mid-August. The conference is held at the College of Charleston in Charleston, South Carolina, and is intended to create a learning environment for undergraduate leaders in the Fraternity. Issues such as alumni involvement, philanthropy, recruitment and member education are just some of the topics discussed at the conference. Chapters from all across the nation are asked to send their top leaders to the event for the purpose of continuing their leadership education.

Pi Kappa Phi is a National Fraternity initiating over 71,000 men since its founding on December 10, 1904. Pi Kappa Phi is a leader in educational programming; sponsoring national, area and local events every year.

SGA Bulletin

October 30 - SGA Minutes

Call to Order:

The meeting of the Albright College Student Government Association was called to order at 7:05 p.m., Monday, October 30, 1995. The following were in attendance: Natalie Famous, Deirdre Diener, Chris Patrick, Derek Zbyszinski, Lisa Calvert, Abha Datwani, Paula Fay, Jonathan Hodgson, Carissa Kolb, Warren Metzger, John Passero, Keima Sheriff, and Ozzie Sims.

There was no treasurer's report given.

Vice president, Deirdre Diener, reported that Dean Brooks and Patty Martinez are moving toward installing telephones and door bells at the Albright Woods.

The Curriculum Committee's report was given by Nicole Anderson. She reported that students will be surveyed regarding the possibilities of moving interim from January to May.

Famous reported that interim was discussed at the student life meeting. Dr. Sydney White Crawford reported that while the Curriculum Committee realized the students are in favor of interim, it is still being discussed.

Don DeHart reported on new improved marketing techniques for Albright in the College Advancement report.

Vince Natale said that he was disappointed in the Housing and Resident Life Committee's inability to make decisions.

The AAC and ISA reported that the ISA dinner was a huge success.

AAS will be sponsoring Amateur Night on November 16. It (participation) is open to the entire campus.

Old Business:

Strat will color-code parking permits for the different lots at the Woods.

Natalie will send out another questionnaire regarding an open forum.

New Business:

Bill Stahler addressed the quality of incoming and accepted students at Albright. He said that the SAT is not the best predictor of students' ability levels. Rather, high school course selections and grades, recommendations and essays are better and more important predictors.

Concerns were raised over lowering standards for scholarships and the possibility of athletes being granted more financial aid than non-athletes. Paul McCracken asked what happens to the scholarship money of those who fail or drop out of Albright.

Respectfully submitted,
Christopher Patrick, SGA Secretary.

November 6 - SGA Minutes

Call to Order:

The meeting of the Albright College Student Government Association was called to order at 7:10 p.m., Monday November 6, 1995. The following were in attendance: Natalie Famous, Deirdre Diener, Chris Patrick, Derek Zbyszinski, Lisa Calvert, Abha Datwani, Paula Fay, Jonathan Hodgson, Carissa Kolb, Warren Metzger, John Passero, Keima Sheriff, Ozzie Sims.

The treasury has $26,356.92 in it. Zbyszinski, treasurer, questioned the vitality of certain groups and said that the funds of all defunct groups will be put in the SGA account.

Vice president Diener said that she will contact all of the heads of those committees that have not yet met.

AAS will not attend their national conference, but are hoping to attend a local one. The organization also urges participation in "Amateur Night."

The AAC and ISA have no business to report.

Old Business:

Due to the lack of compliance of parking regulations at the Woods, Strat will be meeting with all residents on Wednesday, November 8.

Sally Miller proposed a plan to help raise academic standards for student-athletes. The plan includes mandatory study halls and probation/suspension for those athletes who fail to maintain the specified minimum GPA.

Discipline reports will soon be published in the Albrightian without the names of the wrongdoers.

The AIDS Quilt display was a success. Diener will publicize the SGA radio show.

New Business:

Diener proposed class officers being allotted funds per classmate in order to generate an account for a graduation class through its four years.

MDA volunteers are needed.

Paul Gazzero will come to a meeting to discuss the Gate Loan Program that Albright offers.

Famous reported that Strat is unhappy with local residents being allowed into parties up at the Woods. Party hosts are urged to check for Albright identification.

In regard to new policies implemented by Dr. Hicks, the SGA took issue with student organizations having to report all monies taken through sales in the Campus Center (ie. T-shirts).

SGA is requesting a copy of the law regarding raffle policies. It is also requesting a copy of the law regarding movie copyrights. Respectfully submitted,
Chris Patrick, SGA Secretary

It Isn't All Greek To Me Berks Coaliton Thanks Albright

To be quite honest, it never ceases to amaze me about who and what the students of Albright often concern themselves with. Since I arrived here over three years ago, it appears that the student body often has had nothing better to do than to bitch about the Greek system. I find this to be especially ironic since the topic itself is not even worth all the attention it receives, particularly when there are far more compelling issues facing the college, and the student body as a whole. In fact, I find this most recent outburst of Greek controversy, to be, well, quite hilarious.

First, let's set some things straight. The sign posted in the campus center congratulating those who chose to be independent was not Greek bashing, it was simply expressing pride about a certain group of individuals without disqualifying any other group or organization. As for Heather McKay's letter in my section, I could see how it could have been offensive, even though I feel it did hold a few valid points. What amazed me even more was how hypocritical Marija Tesic's and Kerri O'Malley's article was while they were trying to maintain at the same time how unbiased and objective they were toward the Greek system, which they state ridiculously by saying, "If we are really Greek bashers, would our friends be Greek? Would we date Greeks?" If they were truly unbiased, why would they write, "The reason they dropped was not because they couldn't handle pledging, but because they saw what Greek life is really like..." and "...we are proud to be independent. It takes more strength to stand on your own than in a crowd, to look for a new table or outfit each day instead of having one chose for you?" This, my friends, is called bashing, which this opinion article was supposedly against. This article was hypocritical again concerning the term "exclusion." ALL campus organizations are exclusionary in some way, just that sign in the campus center alone was exclusionary. How many names on that sign were Greek who may have wished to support their independent friends? None? I know I would like to have seen my name there. If anything, Greeks have become nearly as open as any other organization on campus. Most parties are open, many parties open after mixers, all Greek organizations support philanthropies and some even help sponsor campus events, and not just Greeks sit where the Pi Kappas, Crows or Phi Mu's sit. The bashing and disqualifying undertones exhibited in both of these opinion articles was entirely inappropriate, and the effort it takes me to read or hear any type of bashing is a waste of my time. Especially when there is no need for it, except, of course, when both sides are trying to put down the other, which happens all the time.

What I'm really trying to say is that it is time that both Greeks and independents grow the hell up. Independents all too often stereotype Greeks and make blanket statements, which is inappropriate when the system they attack is made up of several different organizations that are not responsible for each other. A specific argument cannot be made by making generalizations. Greeks could also use a new perspective concerning their respective organizations. Personally, I'm a member of Pi Kappa Phi. My fraternity is not my religion, and the so-called sacredness of brother or sisterhood is not above friendship. Not everyone in any Greek organization gets along, and anyone who tells you different is lying. For this reason, there is no need for Greeks to act pretentious about the relationships they have with themselves. The ritual and secrets that supposedly bind fraternities and sororities together is often a formality, sincere friendship is not.

The Greek system has come a long way since I was a freshman. There is more unity, tolerance, cooperation, and openness now more than ever, and I sincerely hope that this trend continues. I see members of different Greek organizations interacting in beneficial ways that transcends boundaries created by whose wearing what letters- and this was hardly the case only a few years ago. But the Greek system must also realize that it is far from perfect, and it must continue to work to correct such problems in order to better themselves, and the college community as a whole.

It's time for a dose of maturity and objectivity. Who the hell cares what letters I wear on my chest or what organizations I belong too. This should never be a primary concern that leads to division, especially when there are so many more credible issues that truly affect the students of Albright. Thank you.

Dear Editor,

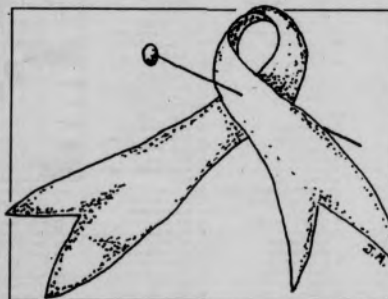

The Quilting for Berks Coalition would like to express thanks from the heart to all of the members of the Albright community who helped to make the NAMES Project AIDS Memorial Quilt Display possible. We were all moved by the power of the Quilt, and by generosity of all who volunteered and attended.

Special thanks to President Hurwitz,

Gratefully,
Sylvia Kane
Volunteer Coordinator
Quilting for Berks Coalition and Director of Lifelong Learning to Sally Miller and her wonderful staff, to Howard Holden and the grounds crew, especially Doug Sultiff and Jim O'Brien, to everyone in the Public Relations Office, and finally, to Harrie Burdan for understanding how important this event was to me and all Coalition members.

We will always remember your kindness, and we hope you will "remember their names."

Better Policy Needed for Campus Center Signs

Dear Editor,

I was appalled to discover that the managers at the campus center could just arbitrarily censor posters without consulting the artist. This was brought to my attention when a poster that I made was not displayed because the night manager thought it was in bad taste. My poster was as follows:

TO ALL MY SISTERS
THINGY UP!
LOVE YOUR SISTER!

The phrase "Thingy" is a term used like thing-um-a-bob, when you can not remember something. Apparently, the night manager, and others, thought that the poster alluded to an obscenity. I only wish that I could have been alerted of this misunderstanding so that I could retrieve my poster before it was discarded. Perhaps when we sign in for the paint, we could put our extension numbers so that we could be notified if our posters will not be displayed. I do understand the need for censorship so that defamation or profanity will not be displayed in the public lounge. However, perhaps a phrase has a different meaning in another culture than in America. Being that Albright claims to be a culturally diverse school, perhaps sign makers could be alerted to the connotations when they hand in a poster. It only takes a few minutes to read a sign.

GNEISS (75 Across), pronounced "nice," is a metamorphic rock made up of bands that differ in color and composition. Martin Landau (61 Across) won an Academy Award for his portrayal of BELA Lugosi in the 1994 film "Ed Wood." In logic, REDUCTIO ad absurdum (40 Down), literally "reduction to an absurdity," is the refutation of a proposition by showing it would lead to an absurd conclusion. TID (44 Down) is the Latin abbreviation used in prescriptions for "three times a day."

From Billie Holiday to Kurt Cobain, it seems that you kids just can't keep your hands off the ol' "H"! I don't know if that's because of all of those hollow, condescending "Just Say No" slogans (rendered moot by giving everything from aspirin to crack the same "drug fiend" status) or whether you all really do just want to kill yourselves. Ultimately, the choice is yours, but as the old cliché goes, "Those who remain ignorant of history are doomed to repeat it." So step right up and meet some folks who might help ya make a bit more of an informed decision before, pardon the expression, taking the plunge. I like to lovingly refer to them as...

Migraine: When It's More Than Just a Headache

Millions of people suffer needlessly from migraine because they don't know that they have it. College and university students, in particular, should be aware of migraine symptoms because their age group represents a time when their lives are filled with the factors and conditions that can "trigger" migraine attacks. A leading headache specialist offers advice to students who may be suffering from migraine.

You've just made it through another week filled with all-nighters, caffeine fixes, junk food, mid-terms and loud music. The weekend is finally here, and you're ready to kick back and relax. Suddenly, your head seems to explode with throbbing, pounding pain, so intense that all you want to do is crawl in bed and not deal with anything or anybody. This isn't fair — free time is no time for a headache.

Chances are, what you've got may be much more than "just" a headache. It may be migraine, a disease that can cause pain so intense that many sufferers have wished they were dead during an attack. Unfortunately, the symptoms of migraine are often discounted as not serious, especially in this age group. Though migraine typically strikes more often after the college years, it can occur earlier in life. A study of headaches among adolescents and young adults indicates an average of 77.8 percent of women and 57.8 percent of men between the ages of 18 and 29 reported that their most recent headache occurred within four weeks of participating in the study.

What's worse, however, is the number of people with migraine who don't seek a treatment plan. Of those who participated in the same study, an average of 85 percent of men and 68 percent of women who reported having one or more headaches in the prior year had never consulted a physician about their headaches. These facts are consistent with the results of a recent national survey of physicians that showed that the typical migraine sufferer waits an average of 3.5 years before consulting a doctor for treatment for their headache. That's years of needless suffering!

Migraine Symptoms

Migraine is characterized by multiple symptoms including severe, recurrent pain, usually on one side of the head and often accompanied by one or more of the following associated symptoms: nausea, vomiting, and sensitivity to light and sound. Migraine attacks can last from four to 72 hours.

"The pain is often aggravated by routine movement or physical exertion," said Dr. Glen Solomon, head, Section of Headache at the Cleveland Clinic Foundation. "Frequently, the sufferer has to lie in a dark, quiet room until the attack passes - a coping mechanism that is not often a practical alternative in a busy lifestyle," he said.

"Unfortunately, many young adults suffer needlessly from migraine because they do not understand the disease and the options for relief from pain it causes," Solomon said. "One of the first steps in understanding the disease is knowing some of the basic symptoms, which are different in each sufferer."

Until very recently, the cause of a migraine attack was largely a mystery. Many scientists now believe that migraine is caused by a sequence of events that cause blood vessels in the brain to tighten, then relax, resulting in the throbbing pain of a migraine. Although there is no cure for migraine, much has been learned to manage the disease, including effective treatment programs.

Finding the Route to Relief

"The first step is to see a physician for a proper diagnosis and treatment program," Solomon said, noting that diagnosis should include a thorough evaluation of the headache to ensure it is not a "marker" or indication of any number of serious problems. He also emphasized a review of a family medical history, particularly because there is about a 75% chance of having migraine if both parents are migraine sufferers, and about a 50% chance if only one parent has migraine.

"One of the things we notice in young patients is that when they shut off the stereo, they have a terrible headache," he said. "They become extremely sensitive to sound, which can trigger a migraine attack." The patient plays an important role in treatment, Dr. Solomon said, adding that learning to recognize and control the signs and "trigger" factors common in the lifestyles of young people is essential. Examples of different triggers include:

- Irregular sleep or insufficient sleep
- Dietary factors, such as skipping meals, dieting and consuming foods and beverages with caffeine, alcohol, MSG, or nitrates
- Environmental changes including changes in atmospheric pressure or temperature as well as cigarette smoke, bright lights, and loud noises - even music
- Certain medications, including over-the-counter pain relievers and analgesics, such as aspirin (Many of these medications also contain caffeine, a known migraine trigger)
- Hormonal changes, associated with birth-control pills or menstrual cycles
- Motion from riding bikes or cars, eyestrain, irregular workouts or even a lack of exercise
- Emotional changes, including fatigue, depression, anxiety, anticipation, or stress

"Because migraines commonly occur where there is a let-down after stress, weekends, vacations, and holidays are common times to get migraine headaches," said Solomon. He also adds that, just as migraines can be triggered by stress, they also add stress to a person's life, thereby creating a vicious cycle of pain for migraine sufferers.

Migraine is a difficult disease to diagnose, treat and live with because it affects people differently, with symptoms and triggers varying by individual. However, relief from migraine pain is possible, and early diagnosis and treatment will help lessen the impact it will have on sufferers' lives now and in the future.

Ace Ventura: When Nature Calls

If you liked the first one, you'll love the second one - and I'm not just saying that because I worship Jim Carrey. He still has the crazy flowered shirt and the cool big hair, but now he's more of a mellow person. This new "mellowness" can be attributed to his meditation to find his spiritual self.

This time, Ace is in Africa on a mission to find a sacred bat (sort of ironic with the whole Batman - Riddler thing from this summer). This special white bat could unite two tribes, but if he doesn't find it the tribes will go to war.

This is where the hijinks begin. He uses his normal lines such as "Like a glove," "Reeeaaaallly," "Alll righty then," and even adds the new clutch phrase "Spank you" (that's "thank you" for you Ace illiterates).

If you don't mind witnessing Ace's secret pleasure (you have to go see the movie to find out) or seeing lots of guano (bat droppings), and you want to laugh a lot, you will really enjoy When Nature Calls.

Q: Dear Esmerelda,

My good friend is ... how can I say this nicely. - A SLUT!! She sleeps with so many guys that she doesn't remember their names. Her behavior is driving me crazy!! I have tried reasoning with her but her hormones just won't stop! What can I do to make her see the error of her ways?

Patty the Prude

A: Dear Patty,

Find a chastity belt for this girl!! Doesn't she realize that this is the nineties and women who don't sleep around get more respect than those that do? I suspect the problem is deeper than just nymphomania. Try telling her that guys will like her for herself not just her sex. JUST SAY NO!!!!

That Milk Crate You "Borrowed" Could Cost You $300 Or 90 Days In Jail.

Sorry, you'll have to make new arrangements for your books, albums, plants, etc. If you're using company-owned milk crates, that is.

A new Pennsylvania Law (Act 37, Laws of Pennsylvania, 1987) makes it illegal to possess store- or dairy-owned milk crates.

Violators of this law face a $300 fine or a 90-day jail sentence. Not to mention the embarrassment and a possible criminal record.

But don't panic. You have until December 6, 1987, to return them without penalty to the dairy or nearest store.

The misuse or loss of milk crates costs PA's dealers millions of dollars each year. A cost regained only by raising milk prices.

Basketball Shoots New Coach Brings Out Best In Wrestling Team for Good Season

Senior Ken Crilly will be called upon to provide leadership for the men's basketball team.

by John Hatchett

Albright will hold the first home basketball game of the season on Tuesday. It will mark the beginning of a new era in the history of Albright men's basketball.

The Lions will be led by new head coach Ken Tyler, who was an assistant to Lefty Dressel at James Madison University before being hired by Albright last spring. He has made an immediate impact on the sports scene at Albright. His expectations for the young men playing basketball at this school have been higher than anything in recent memory.

"It's been more difficult, but I think that is good for us, especially after the situation we had here last year," said senior Ken Crilly.

According to Tyler, the expectations have three tiers. First, the members of the team are expected to be the best young men possible. Then comes the important of academics. Tyler said that his players must live up to high expectations in the classroom. Finally, they are to be the best basketball players that they can be.

These expectations lead to a work ethic for the team. They have been on a conditioning program since Labor Day. Then the team opened up formal practice with "Midnight Madness," which was a tremendous success. "They are working hard both on and off the court, these young men have done everything I have asked them to do," said Tyler.

The team is enthusiastic about the prospects for this season. Tyler is aware of the difficulty of the MAC and said it should be a good proving ground for the team and the state of the program as a whole.

Albright will be led by junior center and second-team MAC Commonwealth League All-Star Dwight Davis. He is the returning leading scorer (11.6 per game) and rebounder (7.4). Davis also paced the Lions with a 58.1 field goal percentage during the 1994-95 season. Senior Todd Smith and junior Shamar Graham will form the starting backcourt. Smith led the Lions in three-point field goals (33) and attempts (99). Off the bench, they add experience from some of their seniors--forward Matt Slocum, guard Marlowe Leibensperger, and Crilly at the swingman should provide leadership. Sophomore guards Brad Conners and Jamal Foster should provide additional support. The Lions are expecting first year students to make a significant contribution, especially Blake DeBooth, Damon Radcliffe, and Jai-T Randall.

Crilly feels that experience is going to be something the team will have to take advantage of to be successful. "The seniors have to help out by showing younger players how to work well together, communication is going to be important," he said.

Tyler feels strongly about the worth of crowd support. "We have a group of quality young men that will represent Albright in a positive way. Support from our fans is absolutely essential," said Tyler. In order to be successful long term, the team will have to win. Tyler said that Reading is a great basketball town, and that the school needs to take advantage of that. To tap that market, the team will do some community service.

A brand new coach, a strong returning lineup, and a group of talented newcomers are the ingredients for a great season ahead.

This season, unlike any other at Albright so far, has a complement of strong wrestlers and a committed coach. Joining the team this year is head coach, Steve Ohnsman. Although dedicated as a coach, he does not have any real expectations as far as the season goes. His hopes are, however, that the team will have a winning season.

"I have no expectations (for the wrestling team). I do, however, have the hopes that we will have a winning season this year," said Ohnsman.

The team this year is comprised of the following top Lion returnees: Bilo Bouab (118/126), John Ungarelli (134/142), Bryan Johnson (150/158), Chad Vosburg (177), and Dan Moser (190/Hwt.).

The tri-captains this year are Ungarelli, Johnson, and Vosburg. The freshmen this year who join them are as follows: Nathaniel "Nat" Carey (118), Justin Arguelles (134), Jason Alexander (167/177), and Kenneth Torres completes the team as this year's heavyweight. Much can be expected from Torres this year, who finished 5th in the PIAA state finals last year as a senior in high school at East Stroudsburg.

Ungarelli, however, does not believe that there is any one newcomer who stands out this year. "I think that all of the freshmen this year are decent. None of them stand out," he said.

Now more important than the material is putting it all together. The Albright wrestling team has not had a winning season for years now. Under head coach Ohnsman, the team will likely have a winning season. Also, expect to see great performances at the Middle Atlantic Conference meet held this year at Messiah College on February 10.

According to one of the tri-captains, Johnson, this year's team has a shot at a winning season simply because the conditions are better. "We have a lot of returning wrestlers and a couple of talented new freshmen. Also, our coach, Steve Ohnsman, has been running a disciplined program which is what we've been in need of," he said.

This weekend marks the seasonal opener for the Lion wrestlers as they tie-up with the Delaware Valley College for a home meet. It will take place at 1 p.m. in the Bollman Center on Saturday.

One year ago, the Lions were trounced by the Aggies. Will the results be the same this year. At least not likely, according to Ungarelli.

"No one can deny that we have a very tough match against Delaware Valley, but this year, we are a tougher team, so we should do better against them," said Ungarelli.

Swimming Ready for Gun

by Abe Antler

The swimming program at Albright has progressed at light speed since its inception several years ago. Last season they finished first overall during the regular season in the MAC and second in the tournament.

This past weekend on Saturday, November 11, both the men's and the women's team consolidated for the Middle Atlantic Conference relays. To say the team rose to the occasion would certainly be an accurate account of what went on. The team came in third, the exact same finish as last year. The only difference is that comparatively, the team did better this year according to sixth-year head coach, Jenis Frederick. "The team did well, especially when you consider that the team we had only consisted of half of the team," she said.

On Wednesday, November 15, both the men's and the women's team were disappointed when they began the actual dual meets with a loss to Lycoming College. The results, though not what any of the Lion swimmers wanted this early in the season, proved contrary to what one might think. Both team captains this year, Andy Smith and Juliet Ferri, were pleased with what they saw.

"Despite our loss, the times were surprisingly fast in this meet. For that reason, I am pleased with what I saw," said Smith.

His counterpart, Juliet Ferri, would agree that the times are what is important, not the result of the match itself. "I look forward to this season. The times were very good tonight (against Lycoming), and I'm sure that we will have a great season because of it," she said.

Certainly, there are a lot of freshmen who contribute to this year's team. Among the men are Mike Hanth (sprint freestyle), Jason Stumhauser (distance freestyle), Jason Hinkley (middle distance freestyle and backstroke), Nate Smith (sprint freestyle and middle distance freestyle), and Jack Miller (sprint and distance freestyle). The women standouts this year are as follows: Gabrielle Pezdirk (distance freestyle), Amy Steffenhauer (sprint freestyle/backstroke), and Angie Bretz (sprint freestyle/ breaststroke/ individual medley).

This weekend will mark the third race this season as the team travels down to Western Maryland College for a dual meet. Both Albright and Western Maryland should be pretty evenly matched, which will make for a close match either way. Their next home meet will be November 20.

Football Set to Challenge for the ECAC Southwest Title

by Michelle Byer

What can be said about a team whose roster, at the start of the season, was compiled of perhaps not the most experienced, but some of the best all around players in the league, and then deals with the upsetting key losses of the injured or sick, and yet still pulls off an extremely respectable record and season as a whole? Well, just about everything.

The coaching staff has already proven that they have the tactics and strategies planned out to go up against some of the very best teams around, however it becomes evident, which teams will take their game to the next level from the output of the players. There should be no questions as to how hard these guys work. Since the start of the season, Albright has had players break school and conference records, been named players of the week, and receive other distinguished honors. Just recently junior Ed Baker and sophomore Sean McGinty were recognized by the conference (MAC) for their outstanding efforts.

Albright pummeled Susquehanna 47-14 a few weeks ago to bring their record to 7-2. Chad Eisenhower took charge in that outing and in addition to scoring the first three touchdowns, rushed for a total of 278 yards (breaking both the school and MAC records for most yards in a game). Wide receiver Eric Nemec and kicker Dennis Unger were also part of the scoring list. Nemec had two touchdowns in the third quarter and Unger connected on every field goal attempt and conversion point effort throughout the game.

This past week as the team journeyed south to play Catholic University, they nearly pulled off what most likely would have been one of their biggest wins of the season.

Despite some of the bonuses Catholic appeared to have over our team (the All-American players, home field advantage and no long bus ride), the Lions held on until the closing minutes of the fourth quarter, 16-10, when Catholic scored a touchdown and then got their extra point leaving the score 17-16. All in all, it was a great experience for the guys and they showed that they can accept a challenge thrown their way anytime and still play their hearts out.

When asked how he felt the season had gone so far and how the pressures have been affecting him, Eisenhower said that "everything is going pretty well. There were times that we let opportunities slip through our fingers, but we've been learning from our past mistakes and trying not to let them happen a second time. I think we're going to be (damn) near unstoppable next year and I look forward to playing." Senior linebacker Kip Scannell commented on how good the offensive line as a whole played these last two games and throughout the season as well. This being his last year at Albright and of college football, Scannell was glad to have been a part of the team that put Albright football on the map.

"Coach Kiesel has really turned the program around since I've been here. I've had a great time playing this year and I'm really happy for the guys who will come back because they're constantly improving, but I'm definitely going to miss it," said Scannell.

Albright takes to the road one final time this season to play Salisbury University (Maryland) in a single playoff game that will determine the ECAC Southwest Champions. The team is confident that they will do well and they are continuing to make some final adjustments to tune-up for this weekend.

by Dana Peterson

This year the women's basketball team, under the direction of second year head coach Sue Stuebner and assistant coach Corey Kemp, is a very young one. Consisting of only one senior, one junior, four sophomores, and eight first year students.

With only five returning players, the team looks toward the newcomers, including Alyson Simpson, a sophomore, to quickly step up and fill the positions that need to be filled.

Junior co-captain Jen Myers had this to say about the first year players, "All the freshmen seem to have a lot of potential. How well we do this year is going to depend on whether or not we can develop them into the players we know they can be."

Sophomore Jarra Rusnock agreed. "I am expecting a good season. The freshmen just need to get use to our style of playing and get over their initial jitters."

Rusnock has been selected as a pre-season All-American and considers this quite an "unexpected honor." As a newcomer last year, she scored over 400 points breaking Albright's record for the most points scored in a season. Rusnock was also named Rookie of the Year for the MAC Commonwealth League and was selected for the first team all-star squad at the close of the season.

The women played in a scrimmage versus Misericordia College November 10. This game, which consisted of two twenty-minute and one ten-minute segments, allowed the players to discover what areas of their game need work.

Myers feels that the strengths of this year's team will be due to the size of the first year players and a more balanced offense.

"We should have four players in double figures every game, and with the height offered by the three new post players, Jennifer Houser, Tara Farkus, and Kristynn Marshall, we should be able to out-rebound our opponents," said Myers.

Rusnock thinks the team needs to focus on handling pressure and shutting teams down points wise.

Both Myers and Rusnock are looking for a very successful season and are hoping to improve last season's record which was 7-16 overall and 4-10 in the league. Myers added, "This freshmen class is the first class that Coach Stuebner has recruited. I think they will be a building block that takes women's basketball somewhere."

The women leave November 17 for a two-day tournament in West Virginia at Davis and Elkins. They will then face Alvernia in their first home game Tuesday, November 21 as a part of a basketball triple header.

New Basketball Coach Asks for Help From the Students

An Open Letter to the Albright Community:

March 1, 1995 was one of the most exciting days of my life. On that day, at 10:00 a.m., I was named the head men's basketball coach at Albright College. In addition to fulfilling a professional dream, I was thrilled to be coming to a place with such a rich academic and athletic tradition. Our plan is to return Albright to its glory years of the 1960's, becoming a fixture on the National Division III scene. We have a program in place that pushes our young men to excel in three areas: as people, as students, and as basketball players. Yes, we demand time on the court, but we also demand time in study hall, campus activities, and community involvement. In other words, our players are much like you—working hard to graduate and get a good job, while pursuing an extracurricular activity they love.

To achieve the heights we hope to achieve, we need your help. People have told me that students don't come to games. I, however, think you will come if we show you a good product, on and off the court. Talk to our players, get to know them; I think you'll find that they are outstanding young men. They've been working hard and need your support. College basketball games, like all athletic events, can be great rallying points for a campus. Whether you are a hoops junkie or just need a study break, I can promise you that our games will be fast-paced, fun, and exciting. So grab a friend, a sorority sister, a classmate, or whomever, and take a careful walk across 13th Street. It will be worth it, and it is, after all, your team.

Ken Tyler
Head Men's Basketball Coach

Attention

As you can see this is the Sports Page of the Albrightian. We try to support the happenings around campus, but especially those of the varsity teams. Generally, all of the sports on campus are covered first. Then it is possible to move into other arenas such as pro sports and big time college athletics.

Anybody interested in helping out in any way in the Sports Section should stop by the office which is located downstairs in the Campus Center. We're right next to the mailroom.

Sincerely,
John Hatchett
