The much criticized documentary film "Operation Abolition" was shown last evening at 7:30 in Krause Hall. The film is concerned with "Communist led riots against the House Committee on Un-American Activities" which took place last year during hearings of that committee held in San Francisco, California, May 12-14. The film was accompanied and introduced by an officer of the V.F.W., a patriotic organization.

Following the showing of the film the group adjourned to the canteen where a general discussion was held, during which a recording, made by the students of the University of California, Berkeley, California, was played.

Propagandized

"Operation Abolition" has been attacked by the liberal press, by leading educators, by religious groups, and by many political leaders. Those criticizing the film have claimed that the facts were misstated and the film edited to propagandize one point of view.

One of the chief centers of controversy concerning this film is its presentation of the college students who participated in the demonstration as "Communist dupes."

Charles A. Raith, assistant professor of political science, in faculty comment on the affair, suggested that, "The H.U.A.C. exists to protect America. As a technique of Government, that is exposure by publicity, it is certainly questionable whether the H.U.A.C. is the 'American Way.' There are some who would place greater reliance in the determination of guilt or innocence in the traditional place, the courts of the land."

Marlow

Chaplain William R. Marlow said concerning the film: "This is a dishonest attempt to prejudice the nation against student opinion and a serious infringement of civil rights, a discredit to the government agency sponsoring the film, and a threat to the freedom of all others."

PAT's, APO's Claim Trophies With Winning Stunt Night Skits

The Pi Alpha Tau social sorority took the first place trophy in the annual Stunt Night last Friday. The event, held in Krause Hall, was sponsored by Student Council, with John Walsh, '61, serving as chairman. The Alpha Pi Omega social fraternity led the fraternities by placing second in the competition.

The winning skit, written by Bunny Williams, '61, Marsha Cisarik, '63, and Sharon Doey, '61, was titled "To Sea or Not to Sea." It depicted a society existing in a fishbowl. The intellectuals of the society desired to escape the pressures of fishbowl life and live alone in the sea where they could create. Because they failed to realize that their gifts were to be shared by Mankind, their world was literally turned upside down.

"Carnival Americanus" was the title of the APO presentation which

Business Course Revamped Curriculum Enlarged

Over the past five years collegiate business schools have been studying the role of higher education in business administration. Two three-year studies, conducted by authorities in the field, were published recently.

At Albright, these reports were studied and the new pre-business curriculum has been designed to include the pertinent findings of these studies. By the beginning of the next academic year, September 1961, the new curriculum will be in full swing.

Dr. Phillip Elkin, head of the business administration department, stated that "the whole direction of higher education for business is toward a broader and more theoretical training in intellectual processes with a liberal arts background. This trend gives Albright College a magnificent opportunity to lead in this area of collegiate education."

Carnegie Report

The Carnegie report pointed out that there is a wide range of jobs for which a broad type of education with limited specialized training seems appropriate. The logic of this approach to academic work in business is rooted in the needs and trends of modern society. For example, the role that science, technology, and mathematics play in the business system is broadening and ties with other countries are increasingly varied and complex.

To keep pace with the need for a wider perspective and understanding, the new Albright pre-business curriculum requires the business graduate to complete twelve credits in mathematics and statistics, six credits in natural science, and twenty-four credits in social science, all in addition to the professional course requirements.

Dr. Elkin

Dr. Elkin said: "I believe that business subjects should be taught as a social science. If the student has a comprehension of the analytic tools that are available to the firm, trade association, and government administrator, it is not unreasonable to hope that he may be able to see a larger picture than his early business assignment may permit.

"Many businesses," he added, "make great efforts to permit the employee to see the problems of the firm as a whole, but the great majority do not attempt this. My hope is that the Albright College business major will be able to keep his perspective of the firm in the economy and the competitive and governmental problems involved. Perhaps this motivation will help the new graduate survive the many lessons that he must learn from the mental tasks usually given him in his first job."

New Courses

The department is introducing three new courses: aggregate economics, which includes national income analysis, business fluctuation and growth; managerial economics, to expose the student to the increasing complexity of operations within firms; and the third, a course in international enterprise, as well as the required political science course in the area of international relations.

The bachelor of science degree in economics, awarded to business administration graduates, includes about seventy per cent liberal art studies such as English, history, religion, philosophy, and music as well as the social and natural science and mathematics requirements mentioned above, and thirty per cent professional education.

Members

The club's active members are all business administration majors at Albright. The executive committee will include representatives from each class. President will be chosen from the senior class, vice president from the junior class, treasurer from the sophomore class, and secretary from the freshman class.

College Holds Night Classes

The second semester of the evening school classes began last week with about 120 persons registered. These classes are held four nights a week and Saturday mornings.

All of the two semester courses begun will be continued; in addition, several one semester courses will be added as replacements for courses offered first semester. The new courses are: Religion 201, Psychology 304, Business Administration 316, and Physics 302.

The faculty is composed of some members of our day school faculty and other qualified persons from the community. According to Mahlon H. Hellerich, dean of the college, there is a definite purpose in the choice of the faculty: "We want to use the services of qualified persons in the community (academically and professionally) whose full-time vocation is not teaching, but who, nevertheless, are interested in part-time teaching.

Faculty

The members of our regular faculty are Dr. Chih Teli Chu, Dr. Philip E. Elkins, Prof. Edward R. Gilbert, Mr. Thomas G. Kane, Mr. Lloyd W. Kline, Prof. Richard J. Kohlmeier, Prof. Thurman R. Kremser, Chaplain William R. Marlow, Prof. William M. Muthard, and the Rev. Theodore Pavlidis.

Additional members of the faculty are qualified persons from the community. The Rev. Dean A. Allen, a lecturer in English, is a pastor in the United Church of Christ. Rev. Allen, '40, has taught at Albright in the past.

James R. Butler, a lecturer in business administration, is assistant to the president of the Beryllium Corporation. Another Albright graduate, '58, Ray E. Feick, is a lecturer in mathematics. Mr. Feick is the head of the mathematics department of Pottstown Senior High School; he recently completed work for his master's degree.

Donald H. Gittelman, Albright '48, a lecturer in chemistry, is a research chemist at the Glidden Corporation. A member of the Mt. Penn Senior High School faculty, Richard C. Hamilton, is a lecturer in mathematics. Dorothea R. Thorne, a graduate assistant in English, is a housewife and mother of several children.

The members of these evening school classes, stated Hellerich, pay the same tuition fees as part-time students enrolled in the day school program.

Considerable critical comment was made by students last evening. Feeling on the film and the H.U.A.C. has been of increasing force on campus in recent months. Paul Duhamel, '61, charged that, "It appears that the H.U.A.C. is dictating what the individual should or should not believe... Is 1984 that far off, or are there signs of it now in 1961?"

Seighman

George A. Seighman, '62, queried, "When will the H.U.A.C. start investigating that fine group of 'American citizens' that stood spitting and swearing outside of the New Orleans schools? But, of course, they were 'dignified' adults, not 'unreasonable' college students."

Marianne Angstadt, '61, asserted that, "The victorious unprovoked attack of the police upon students, who for the most part resisted these police-state tactics passively, is frightening."

"These students," commented Mervyn Benjet, '61, are supporting a very worthwhile cause, and I believe they have been grossly mistreated."

Natale DeLuca, '62, had to say, "This committee does afford the Communists with an excellent propaganda weapon against our so-called free society."

Colleges and universities from the Middle Atlantic states, including a few from the New England states, will participate in this thirty-fourth annual affair. Albright College will represent the African nation of Ghana.

The six committees of which this model U.N. consists are Disarmament; Economic Development of Africa; the Congo Problem; Social and Humanitarian, which includes narcotics and the defense of society; Legal, which includes peaceful uses of outer space and diplomatic immunities; and the Problem of Southwest Africa.

Representatives

The following students will represent Albright in New York City: Mervyn Benjet, '61, George Reagan, '61, Arlin Haas, '62, Bruce Yeo, '62, Ernest Giese, '61, George Seighman, '62, David Watlon, '64, Harold Bailey, '62, Carol Richmond, '62, David Lombardo, '61, and Natale DeLuca.

The main purpose of this model U.N. is to give college students a better understanding of the U.N. and its work. Each delegate strives to have his resolution passed in his committee and to give a good representation of his college and the country he represents.

P.M.C. TOMORROW

Tomorrow night in the Albright Field House, the Lions will close out the home portion of their current season by engaging the Cadets of Pennsylvania Military College. The game begins at 8:30 p.m. and will be preceded by Junior Varsity clash between the two schools at 6:45 p.m.

Since this is the last home game, the "Albrightian" Sports Department is hoping that a large crowd is on hand to show the team and its coach the appreciation of the student body for the current championship season and also to wish them well in the upcoming play-offs.

Chatauqua Society, Dayton Professor Featured In Chapel

Chapel speakers will present insight in several areas on respective dates between Feb. 28 and March 9. Appropriate for the Lenten season, the emphasis of the March 2 and 9 programs will be Christian social action.

Rabbi Joel Y. Zion, a member of the Jewish Chatauqua Society, will be guest speaker February 28 under the society's plan to promote better understanding of neighboring religions. The Chatauqua Society sends representatives to Albright and other colleges annually.

On March 2, Steve Lipkins, '62, Agnes Oaks, '61, and Janelle Reed, '61 will help Mr. Cabinot, a director for Capital Fund, in the presentation of Capital Funds program to the student body.

This program will be followed by a presentation on the relativity of Christianity in choosing vocations. Dr. Harry DeWire, Dr. Quentin Lamsman, and Dr. Paul Price, of United Theological Seminary in Dayton, Ohio, will be the speakers. They plan to spend two days on campus using much of their time in personal interviews.

March 9, Mr. Chester L. Marcus, a member of the Council for Christian Social Action of the United Church of Christ, and a recent visitor to Africa, will present his views of recent developments in African nations, centering primarily on Ghana.

On Monday evening, Feb. 27, Rabbi Zion will join Chaplain Marlow at his home for an informal discussion. All interested students are invited to attend.

Rabbi Zion received his B.A. degree from Roosevelt College and later received his M.A. degree at Columbia University. He was ordained at Hebrew Union College.

At the present time Rabbi Zion is spiritual leader of Temple Israel in Lawrence, Long Island.

RILW Plans Are Released

Pearsall Hits 1000 Points

Tom Pearsall, leading scorer on the varsity team added several more pages to his basketball career during the past week.

Last Saturday night, he hit 22 of his 27 foul shots to wipe out the mark of 19 set by George Conrad against Scranton in 1955. At the same time, he set another school mark with 17 consecutive conversions as the Lions trimmed Lebanon Valley 61-48.

On Monday night at Bethlehem, he extended his consecutive foul performance to 25 straight in scoring 26 points to help the Lions maul Moravian 81-48. With those 25 points, he became the eighth Albright player in history to score 1,000 or more points. His current total stands at 1,013 while the record for most points scored by an Albright player is held by George Conrad with 1,776.

Pearsall received still another distinction last week when he was named to the weekly All-East small college basketball team of the Eastern College Athletic Conference for his performances of the past week.

Distortions

Sheriff Matthew Carberry on KQED-TV does not bear out such statements. He testified that the students gave attention to and complied with the requests of the law-enforcement officers and stated further that "There was no act of physical aggression on the part of the students." Unedited sound tapes substantiate his statement and show that before the hoses were turned on, no order was given for the students to disperse.

("Operation Abolition" shows Sheriff Carberry talking to the students just before the fire-hose scene, but the scene has been edited. Actually he spoke to them an hour and fifteen minutes before the hoses were turned on and tape recordings show that what he said was that they could remain in the building.)

In addition to such evidence, the Life magazine photo in the May 23 edition shows graphically the real situation that existed before the hoses were turned on the students. The students are shown either sitting down or moving away from the barricade, clearly showing that an attack on the barricades did not take place. Incidentally, the song, "We Shall Not Be Moved," which the commentator says is "lifted" from an old Communist People's Song Book is actually a Negro spiritual well-known to people acquainted with folk songs. The song con-

From The Ursinus College "Weekly"

The following article was printed in the Ursinus College "Weekly" and concerns the recent Albright-Ursinus wrestling match at Collegeville, Pa. The "Albrightian" staff members felt the article and particularly the style in which it was written would be of interest to all Albright students and wrestlers.

B. J. P.

"Victory is so sweet and never were truer words spoken—just ask any Ursinus fan who say the Bears' grapplers upset Albright's highly touted wrestling team.

The Albright match started out badly for U.C. as Albright, always strong in the lower weights, built up at 13-0 lead at the end of three matches. . . . Jeff Clark, a newcomer to the wrestling team, then faced John Paulos (Poulos) a 137 pounder whose build closely resembled that of a truck. Paulos used a ride constantly and finally pinned Jeff in 4:50 with a half but not before Jeff could show some fine moves. . . . Dale Kratz at 157 faced Dave Dantier (Duane Gautier), also known as "Mr. Haircut" to many Ursinus spectators. Kratz wrestled his best match of the season and it couldn't have come at a better time. He really tightened up in the last period and pinned his opponent at 8:36. Jim Riddell then took on a cocky Bill Vogt and Vogt was in for a surprise. In a hectic see-saw match, Riddell finally prevailed 7-5, as his bull-like strength made the difference.

Bill Slesbenson then dropped a tough decision to Jack Roessner 3-2. The match ended with the Albright man constantly backing away.

The final match found Will Abele facing Roy Templeton. Templeton's orders were plainly to stay away from Wilbert, lose the match on points, and Albright would have a 16-16 draw. . . . Undersized Templeton crawled, ran, squirmed, and did everything but try to wrestle. However, Templeton finally rushed in to wrestle and was immediately pinned by Will for an 18-16 Ursinus victory."

tains no Communist doctrine or propaganda.

One of the ugliest parts of the film shows the unsavory Archie Brown joining with the demonstrator's chant or "Open the Door," but the film fails to mention that one of the reasons for the demonstration was the refusal of the Chairman of the Committee to consider a petition which said, "We petition this arm of the United States Congress either to move to a larger hearing room or to open its doors on a first come, first served basis."

HUAC, Film Targets For Criticism

From The Editor:

Many and averse have been the comments in recent months concerning the House Un-American Activities Committee, and the film it sponsored on "Communist-led riots" against the committee by California students last May. The Albrightian is running this special six page issue as a service to the Albright community in order to do what we consider an adequate treatment of the situation.

We think that those who were at the IRC meeting last evening, will be interested in the reaction of other citizens, students, and papers across our nation with reference to the H.U.A.C. and the film. We hope that those many who were not out to see the film will find this supplement beneficial in explaining and clarifying just what is behind this avalanche of comment and criticism.

Some may ask why we go to all this trouble over such an 'unimportant' event as this. We, in turn, must take issue with such a comment. This seems to us to be an area of vital concern to all college communities, in which freedom of personal belief, liberty of expression, and the right of criticism in at stake. It is an area issue whose repercussions may affect our lives several years hence. It is an opportunity for students to convert book theory into personal concern, to move out of classrooms into vital issues of government in the making.

For our readers, we would like to briefly spell our stand on the matter. To any reading this paper, the material may seem overly slanted in one direction. Yet this is because, of all the comments we found concerning the film and H.U.A.C., there was not one college paper which favored either. We ourselves do not say that a committee functioning such as outlined in the purpose of the H.U.A.C. could not be a proper part of our governmental process, but we do feel that the present committee is not fulfilling this purpose, and in fact is proving most detrimental to our democratic processes of government. Nor do we gloss over the possibility of a real Communist threat of incitation and subversion, but rather we claim that to call this particular filmed instance such a case is a misrepresentation of the facts. We do not object to any attempt to protect our freedoms, but rather we protect the sort of attitude which encroaches on our freedoms. As students, we have been subject to a public opinion created concerning the college student of this day as "conforming," "silent," and "apathetic." We present this page in protest to such a caricature.

On Other Campuses

(From The Comenian, Moravian College)

... Dr. John V. Machell, professor of sociology, charged that the film was "a tragic document" which purported to show that "anybody who opposes the Committee is either a Communist or a dupe."

... Dr. Otis H. Shao, associate professor of government, criticized it severely as "not being an effective documentation of the facts," because the film is "an incomplete presentation of a complex issue."

... the general consensus (of students) seemed to be that the Committee on Un-American Activities tried only to paint itself "white" and those who opposed it "black." Students called such action "ineffectual," since it provides intelligent, patriotic citizens with more reason to urge its abolition.

(From The Lafayette)

"... 'Operation Abolition,' sponsored by the House Committee on Un-American Activities fully typifies the committee and what it has come to stand for: guilt by association, the half-truth, and invidious implication ...

"Separate sequences have been run together to give a confused impression of mob action and very little else. The commentary continually stresses mob violence and physical aggression, yet even in the film itself, one actually sees little other than picketing, verbal protest, and passive resistance on the part of the students. After the demonstrations, the sheriff of San Francisco County said: 'There was no act of physical aggression on the part of the students.' ...

"Fifty-eight of the sixty-two persons arrested at this time, mostly college students, signed a statement in which was stated: Nobody incited us, nobody misguided us, we were led by our own convictions and we stand firmly by them ..."

(From Campus News, newspaper of the Pennsylvania State University, Ogontz Campus, in reporting on a meeting held at Swarthmore College concerning the film. Fulton Lewis III, research analyst for the House Un-American Activities Committee was present to defend the committee's action.)

"Lewis backed the contention that anyone subpoenaed by the House Un-American group was ipso facto a Communist. ... The committee has a job to call (accused of being) Communist, he said, but ... is infinitely careful not to step on innocent toes.

"Strong among accusations brought by Swarthmore students against the committee were that it often functions as a judge and jury or as a grand-standing theater of public exposure rather than as a vehicle of legislative inquiry, also that certain members had contributed support to a group dedicated to oppose peaceful racial integration moves by another group.

"Another student objected to use of the word 'dupe' to signify anyone who demonstrates peacefully or pickets in a cause for which Communists are also agitating.

"One student questioned Lewis' attribution of support for the abolition movement to the leftist press in citing an anti-committee stand by the Washington Post. 'I said Communist and pro-Communist press,' Lewis fired back."

A Letter

Dear Dr. Masters:

In yesterday's mail I received the Nov. 18 issue of the Albrightian. When I read the editorial entitled "A Plea From Students" I became very much disturbed. I had not seen the film "Operation Abolition" and decided that as soon as possible I would have it shown to my colleagues in the Office of Education in order to get their reaction.

But today when I read my morning's issue of the Washington Post I read the scathing editorial, which I have enclosed.

I am now ready to join the crusade against this film and wish to congratulate the editor of the Albrightian on this excellent editorial. I am sure there will be many similar reactions to this film. ... It is astonishing to learn so many prints have already been sold.

I am sure the editorial in the Albrightian and the one in the Washington Post can be used to combat this vicious propaganda against the college student.

Best personal regards.

Cordially,

Leonard M. Miller

A Description Of Distortions

(Ed. note: Concerning the severe criticism of "Operation Abolition" as misrepresented facts, many people have asked: "Just what is distorted, anyway?" We felt that the following article, reprinted in part, will clarify some of the major distortions. The article by a graduate English assistant at Lehigh University, is taken from The Brown and White.)

... I would like to add several particular instances in which the film is misleading ... The H.U.A.C. staff carefully edited the news film of two San Francisco television stations. Particularly in regard to police brutality, is the film edited unfairly. All the scenes which show the police using clubs upon the students were deleted, in spite of the narrator's declaration that only incidents of a repetitious nature had been omitted. (See the San Francisco Chronicle for May 14, 1960 for an objective account of the particular brutality of the use of clubs).

Also, the film makes much of the fact that eight policemen were injured to the point that they required hospitalization, and the commentary mentions in an off-hand way that four students received minor injuries; but among the "minor" injuries was a ruptured eardrum, two head injuries which required several stitches, and a back injury which required an operation. In addition there were numerous other injuries which might more nearly be classed as minor, such as broken teeth.

In addition to these distortions, the film states that "Communist and pro-Communist" newspapers falsely asserted police brutality, but as a faculty member pointed out at the meeting, the film fails to mention that the San Francisco Chronicle and Senator Knowland's own paper also reported the action as unduly brutal. I would merely like to add the names of the New York Times and the New York Post.

The conduct of the demonstrators is also grossly distorted. The narrator remarks that attempts by the police to communicate with the students were "met by jeers and boos" and that the students invited the use of fire hoses by charging the barricades and attacking a policeman. But the public statement by

Editorial Comment

(From an editorial from Arrow, Hunter College, New York City)

"In practice, the investigations of the House Un-American Activities Committee have thwarted the very freedom which it claims to protect and preserve—freedom of assembly, of the press and of speech. In casting suspicion on people and organizations the Committee has unscrupulously violated the precept of due process of law by denying the accused the right to face his accuser and it has often indulged in guilt by association. It has violated the separation of powers by usurping judicial and executive powers."

(From an editorial, "A Dangerous Affair," from The Comenian, newspaper of Moravian College.)

"Of great concern is the fact that the film purports to show that the students participating in the demonstrations are themselves leftists, or are 'leftist-dupes,' who rightfully advocate dissolution of the Committee.

Besides being woefully bad logic, this situation is welcome fuel for the fire ... the real leftists in our society, casting a bad light on intelligent, well-meaning citizens, students included, who rightfully advocate dissolution of the Committee.

The points against the Committee's existence are many, and most are valid, but the major consideration of the moment is the extent to which the Committee has superseded the bound and threatened abrogation of individual rights and dignity."

A SHAKY REED TO LEAN ON

Just as the Senate had ultimately to take responsibility for the outrages committed in its name by the late Senator McCarthy, so the House is responsible for the action of Representative Walter's Un-American Activities Committee.

This is the fundamental point, as we see it, of Representative James Roosevelt's massive attack on the committee in a House speech a few days ago, reinforced by the American Civil Liberties Union's decision at its recent biennial conference in Chicago for a "maximum effort" to abolish it. Fortified by ample appropriations almost automatically renewed each year by the House, the committee pursues its heresy hunt, endangering constitutional guarantees in the process, weakening at home and abroad America's reputation as the land of the free—and all to what avail?

If the security of this nation were dependent on the kind of exposure for exposure's sake that the committee has repeatedly indulged in, whether investigating actors in New York or schoolteachers in California, then our country would really be in a dangerous condition. But few disinterested persons can any longer believe that this is where the real danger lies. It lies less in gumshoe subversion than in the corrosion of domestic complacency, less in the absurd handful of Communist doctrinaires who may still exist among us than in the unconscious tendency of many Americans to accept a second-place position in the world so long as it is cushioned in luxury.

There are dangers to the United States, emanating directly from Russia; but their true meaning is obscured rather than illuminated by the antics of Un-American Activities Committees. For such positive subversion as exists, the F.B.I. is sufficient. The United States no longer needs—if it ever did need—the aimless pursuit of heresy that has led to a present total of nearly forty "First Amendment" cases, of which four of the principals are actually now in prison.

Tuition Raise

To the editor:

There has been considerable talk, I understand, based upon wholly unfounded rumor that there would be further increases in charges to students beginning the next academic year. Both the Finance and Property Committee and the Executive Committee (meeting held Thursday, February 2), of the Board of Trustees, have taken to recommend to the Board of Trustees in March that there should be no further increases for next year. I cannot conceive of the Board of Trustees taking any action counter to the recommendations made by these two committees.

Sincerely yours,

Hofstra Praise

(Ed. note: This is excerpted from a letter received by our sports editor after the Hofstra game.)

Dear Barry,

Let me congratulate you. We have been following the Albrightian ever since it appeared that the Lions would have an undefeated football season. We were very thankful that you did because we didn't want Wagner College to lead the Middle Atlantic Conference. We have a little feud going, as you probably know.

When we finally did lose to the Lions in basketball two weeks ago, we lost to a very good team. It had to be, for we are listed as the number-two small college basketball team in the nation by UPI and the AP.

After reading the Albrightian's review of the contest, we were very impressed. Not overly impressed by the Lions because we had already known that they were a scrappy, determined team, but impressed with the Albrightian's handling of the story. As you must know, many school papers get carried away with big triumphs and make their heroes sound like Bob Coussys and Wilt Chamberlains, which they're not. We carried the story on the front page of the Hofstra Chronicle but we had to because it had snapped a 23-game winning streak and we just haven't lost very much in the past three years.

And so, Barry, we want to send our congratulations to a fine newspaper. We hope that Albright and Hofstra finish one-two in the league so that we will have another shot at the Lions.

Hoping to hear from you, us where it may." I would be taking the easier way out—throwing the problem's solution on subsequent generations. If I said, "Let's look for a compromise," I would be uttering the emptiest of all clichés.

Although I said I would not attempt a solution that does not stop me from offering a hint for one—this can be summed up in one word: education! Is it not true that all of man's inventions have been in some way corrupted or vulgarized by generations of users?

Education

This has all been due to a lack of education on the part of the public who are the eventual guardians of all men's works. As this disparity continues to grow, in this highly specialized age, between the inventors and the adaptors, the "scientific elite" and the mass of the world's population, our present, and dangerous attitude toward the use and misuse of science will continue to increase in direct ratio to the expansion of the gap between the man

"Sincere Albrightian"

(Ed. note: The initial portion of this letter was in the form of a protest calling for the reinstatement of the dining hall menu, which had temporarily stopped when this letter was received. Since then the posting of the menu has been resumed. However, after deleting that portion, we felt the remainder of the letter to be of sufficient value and interest to be published.)

... It has hardly been my purpose in composing this letter to merely call for the reinstating of the menu, however serious I may be in my doing so. Not a secondary purpose is that of employing this letter to support my contention that we as students of Albright have, in the main, been guilty of flagrant and excessive criticism of our college community. I do not mean to suggest that we have not had or do not have material grounds for criticism. Rather, I would imply that our so-called criticism has seldom, if ever, been raised above the level of opinionated grumblings. Rarely have our blubberings ever attained the distinction of what could be recognized as constructive criticism. Consequently even the combined product of our hot air has accomplished nothing.

Upperclassmen will remember the enthusiasm with which the student body lashed out at academic dishonesty on our campus in the fall term of 1960. Unfortunately the all-campus meeting was little more than a campus-wide airing out of personal opinions. Underclassmen will note the absence of any form of Honor Code on our campus.

Other topics which have come under attack have included Freshmen Customs, Greek pledging, and various other Mickey Mouse Club games. Chapel, beard censorship, the juke-box — cigarette machine clamor, campus publications, i.e., Albrightian, the "ad-ministers," Congressman Rhoades — these too have had their share of criticism. Yet, in none, with the exception of one, of these controversies was any genuine constructive criticism submitted in what might be termed a formal manner.

In the entire first semester of this year no more than three (3) letters to the editor were submitted to the Albrightian for publication. Is there any surprise that some have found the Albrightian dull and uninteresting. The life blood of any publication ensues from its contributors, but if its contributors be lifeless... The new editor of the Albrightian, Carl Schröder has declared his intentions to produce decided improvements in our school paper, but this does not include writing editorials and self-addressed letters to the editor.

It seems to me it is time we quit the self-ridicule of the "Sincere Albrightian" and begin to initiate a creative student version of the Albright Self-Study. Speak out Albrightian, the Albrightian is your voice!

on the street and the scientist in his laboratory. This is what the science fiction "prophets" are warning us to guard against. This is the challenge that we must meet and at present are not meeting! Are we to become mere cogs in a great and crushingly conforming, "outer-directed" scientific machine, or are we to become, through education, intelligent participants in the world's great scientific future?

In His Holy Temple

(Ed. note: This article was excerpted from THE GLEAM, newspaper of Westmar College, and written by Ray Zeisset.)

The Lord is in His holy temple; let all the earth use wisely the moments before chapel beginneth.

LET ALL INFORM themselves of the contents of the morning mail. Let all discourse upon the examination to be administered in the hour that cometh. Let all inquire of the welfare of their neighbor, roommate, or friend.

Let all learn of the social status of their companions, whether they be planning dates for the eventide or whether they hold anger in their hearts against their dates of the previous evening. For it becometh a foolish man to prepare his heart in silence for the service which soon beginneth.

The Lord is in his holy temple; let all the earth remain steadfast in conversation and study throughout the service. For only a foolish man pretendeth that the prayers, scriptures, music, and message containeth inspiration for him.

The Lord is in his holy temple; let all the earth discover and expound upon the mistakes of the participants of the service. For only a foolish man thinketh that he himself might have made the self-same errors.

The Lord is in his holy temple; let all the earth . . .

Warning Of Science Fiction

By BOB MATTHEWS

Recently I saw a film entitled "Village of the Damned." This film is concerned with the rather sensational development of a new species of child; physiologically, scientifically and technically superior to our own type. As the film progressed I became far more interested in the similarities of the new children rather than the differences between the "new" children and the other, more ordinary children of the town.

These "new" people were all born at exactly the same moment, all equipped with the same high degree of intelligence, and they all looked exactly alike. Whatever one child was taught all others learned automatically.

Guiding Star

While science-fiction writing has played a minor part in my literary growth, I do know enough about it to be cognizant of a certain pattern of similar themes that run through the majority of stories: first, the name science fiction itself has come to represent all novels dealing with the proposed future. This is significant because it demonstrates an acceptance of science as the resolved guiding star of our society. This is, in itself, an advancement over the supernatural literature of the Nineteenth Century. It was not until the end of the century that H. G. Wells began to set the pattern for modern science fiction.

Having digressed a bit for background purposes I now return to my original concern: the regimented similarities of the future, as prophesied by science fiction.

The children in "Village of the Damned" were not, in the spiritual sense, "inner-directed." They were "outer-directed" by a Force which remained obscure throughout the film. Orwell's "1984," a political novel with science-fiction overtones, names the Force. He calls it "Big Brother," but in both film and novel we are confronted by a future, regimented, conforming to a Force or dictatorship of the total mind and spirit, with a cruelly antiseptic outlook, the goal of which is complete sterility of individual thought.

This theme of outer-direction by a supreme Force is evident in all science fiction writing of today from "1984" to Buck Rogers. I choose to call it prophetic.

For I see those writers as prophets. They are prophets in the same way that poets are prophets. Good poets should not be read just for the beauty of their verse pattern. Poets have a gift of seeing into the future; getting to the core of a problem, or, what is most important, allowing the astute reader a glimpse of the thing in its true perspective. To my mind, the science fiction writers are the prophets of the scientific future.

Solution

Above is the problem, and my theory concerning the right of naming it as such. But a solution is a different matter and I would not attempt one. If I said that the new scientific age we are entering is not worth the price of individual differences I would be echoing the reactionaries with whom I disagree. If I said "so what, let science take

IN THE LION'S DEN

Basketball Mania

By BARRY J. PARNEY, Sports Editor

Last week at an Albright basketball game, I found myself sitting in front of a group of Albright co-eds who, from all indications, knew nothing about what was going on down on the court. From their overheard conversation, they were more interested in figuring out who the boy was who just walked in, what they were going to wear at their sorority induction, and if it was true that Agnes was engaged to the star quarterback at Alaska Tech. They seemed to be completely oblivious to the fact that the Lions on the floor were battling their way into a possible berth in the MAC playoffs or that one member of the team was setting a new foul shooting record.

The incident reminded me of an article I read in a past issue of the "Delphian" of Adelphi College. I located the article and am reprinting parts of it here for the benefit of all those who, like the girls above, are in need of a more flexible vocabulary if they want to really enjoy the game:

TALL MAN—A player on a team that is playing against Albright.

FAST BREAK—A quick rush down the court while the defensive team thinks that time has been called.

REFEREE—The all-mighty official who does pretty well considering the fact that all the fans think he is blind.

COACH—The fatherly man who growls at his sons as they leave the game.

INTENTIONAL FOUL—The hip and elbow movement on every play.

UNINTENTIONAL FOUL—The ones that the ref sees.

HIGH SCORER—See TALL MAN.

TIP IN—Favorite shot of the TALL MAN.

PLAYMAKER—A short man who doesn't score much but passes the ball to the TALL MAN.

HALF—One-half of the game. This divides the slaughter into two convenient parts.

HOME TEAM—The team that brings its mothers to the game.

TIMEKEEPER—A friend of the home team coach.

TRAINER—A veterinarian gone bad.

PIVOT—A ballet half-turn before the arm gently stuffs the ball into the basket.

ANNOUNCER—The guy who makes you glad you can read about the game in the Albrightian.

GOOD HUSTLER—The short guy who gets into the game in the last two minutes if a slaughter is in the process.

FAN—A loud mouth who thinks he knows more about what's going on than the coach or referee.

SPORTS WRITER—A loud mouth who says in print that he knows more about what's going on than the coach or referee.

PRO BALL—The Valhalla of every TALL MAN AND PLAYMAKER.

REBOUND—Play that TALL MAN keeps from basket.

ATHLETIC SCHOLARSHIP—Cleaning the dining room every weekend.

ZONE DEFENSE—Method used by inferior team to keep TALL MAN from getting a TIP IN.

Wrestlers Conquer LVC Complete Season Tomorrow

Fordmen Maul Juniata 22-6

Led by pins turned in by veteran Mike Marino and newcomer Gary Sheeler, the Albright College varsity wrestling team defeated the Juniata Indians, 22-6, last Saturday afternoon in the Lions' Den. Coach Bob Ford's matmen now sport a four and five won-lost record for the season.

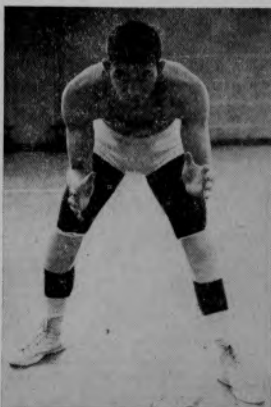

A starter at end for the Lion football squad, heavyweight Sheeler had only been wrestling three weeks before he pinned the Indians' Gary Berrier, who plays football for Juniata. The star Albright end pinned Berrier after 1:46 with a half nelson and a body press.

The Lions captured victory in each of the eight divisions except two to record their fourth win of the season. Red and White decisions were earned by Bob Melnick (130), John Poulos (137), Jack Roessler (157), and Bill Vogt (167).

Marino has to date won eight decisions in nine matches in the 123-pound class this season. Last Saturday he deposed of Bob Chew in 7:33 with a cradle hold.

The Juniata victories were by close margins as Irv Godboldt (147) lost to Harry Long, 6-4, and Dave Helsel (177) edged Roy Templeton, 4-3.

The Lions closed out this season with two matches this week. They met Muhlenberg at Allentown on Tuesday and Elizabethtown at home on Friday.

Hounds Bow 81-48 Lions Near Title

The Lion roared, and once again Albright was victorious in a Middle Atlantic Conference game. This time the victory was at the hands of Moravian, 81-48. In a previous encounter on Albright's home court, the Lions were also victorious by a 85-58 margin.

Coach Renken's Lions hit early and surely, not giving the Greyhounds much of a chance. Once again it was Tommy Pearsall who led the way with 26 counters. This brings Pearsall's seasonal total to 453 points. Ray Sommerstad was second in the scoring parade with 26. Captain Ken VanDine chipped in 12, all charity throws, and Norm Bautsch, with 10, also finished with double figures.

12-1 Record

This victory gave the Lions a 12-1 record in the MAC and virtually assured Albright of a playoff berth at Allentown on March 3-4.

The Lions hit an early 8-2 lead on two field goals each by Sommerstad and Pearsall. The Greyhounds pulled the score to 8-5, and that was as close as they came all evening. In the closing minutes of the initial half VanDine hit six-for-six from the free throw line. The Lions enjoyed a 39-18 lead at intermission. Tom Pearsall hit eight straight foul shots thus giving him a 25-for-25 record. The record started last week against Lebanon Valley when he hit 17-for-17 from the free throw line in the second half. Sam Preston, the fifth starter, played his usual good game in the back court.

Norm Bautsch

He constantly hounded the Hounds on their toes and he also scored three.

The Jayvees saw their eight-game winning streak snapped as they lost to Moravian's Jayvees by two points. Tim Maggee was high with 23 points.

L.V. Game

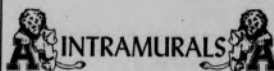

For the second time in a week, the Flying Dutchmen of Lebanon Valley fell to the hands of the sure-shooting Lions of Albright. This time the encounter was at the Albright Field House and the final score was 61-48.

Tom Pearsall led the way for the Red and White with 30 counters. He scored 20 of these points from the charity line. In the second half, Pearsall hit a record-breaking 17 straight foul shots. His only other points in this half was on a lone field goal. Ray Sommerstad hit seven field goals for a total of 14, and Norm Bautsch also hit double figures with 11. Ken VanDine and Sam Preston tallied four and two respectively.

The Flying Dutchmen opened to a 4-0 lead, but the Lions quickly

The second half, much like the first, was a nip-and-tuck battle all the way. With approximately nine minutes to play the Lions pulled a freeze. The main player in the freeze was Sam Preston. Preston's superb ball handling made possible a feed to Norm Bautsch who had maneuvered himself in the clear under the basket and tallied a field goal. After this the Lions built a steady lead, finally being victorious with a 61-48 score.

tied the score on Sommerstad's two field goals. Midway through the first half the Lions, on Norm Bautsch's three-point play, pulled the Lions to a 19-14 lead. However, Lebanon Valley also continued scoring and at half time the score was in favor of the Red and White by three points.

MAC Play-offs At Muhlenberg

It has been announced by Eugene L. Shirk, Director of Athletics at Albright College, that the play-offs for the College Division of the Middle Atlantic Basketball Conference are scheduled to be played on Friday and Saturday, March 3 and 4, at the Muhlenberg College fieldhouse in Allentown, Pennsylvania. The purpose of the play-offs is to select the Middle Atlantic representative to the NCAA preliminaries which will be held on March 10 and 11 at a site to be announced next week.

The competition at Muhlenberg will feature the two top teams from each division of the MAC. In the first round, the Northern Division champion will be pitted against the second place team in the Southern Division, while the runner-up in the Northern Division will face the Southern Division champion. The winners of the first round competition will meet on Saturday to determine the championship. It is most likely that a consolation game between the two first round losers will also be staged on Saturday.

Current Standings

The current Middle Atlantic standings show the Lions of Albright in first place in the Northern Division, followed closely by Hofstra in the second spot. In the South, Drexel College is assured of first place while the second place honors are still in contention between Franklin and Marshall and Haverford College.

Because of the competition, the Albright-Bucknell game which had been scheduled for next Saturday night in the Lion's fieldhouse has been canceled. There is a possibility that a substitute game will be played at a date to be announced in the future.
