

STATION D. I. R. T.

Well folks, here we are again with a fresh supply of stale news—what will you have—maybe you haven't heard some of these cracks, so here goes!

The Girls' Glee Club is back and recuperating. They expect to have gotten rid of all avoirdupois added over the week-end and other hang-overs, by getting pictures taken and other strenuous methods of exercise.

The Dominos have played their old favorites once more—and they actually promise it's the last time. The campus is glad to hear it of course but—those there plays are almost a custom by this time, we'll be sorry to see them go! Anyway, they were well done and that deserves commendation, and Myerstown liked them.

Tickets for the Quill "Social" are going like hot cakes. It looks like a big affair. Not so bad for the old school, what?

The kitchen and dining room staff is examined, whereupon the boarding students are saved from serious possibilities along the health line. We all feel safer now.

It's gotten to be a game. What will the Seniors do next. A play is still on its way—but you never can tell how the try-outs will turn out.

Now that the glove and ball are hitting it off with the bat so amicably, and the cinder track is all ready to receive those who want skinned knees and elbows as well as meals—mebbe V. F. Z. Spring.

Chess preliminaries and three ceds among those present—How long—how long? Anyway we'll soon see!

SYMPATHY

In behalf of the student body of Albright College, the "Albrightian" extends sincerest sympathy to Peter Foltz of Terre Hill, for the recent death of his mother.

Fraternity Notes

ALPHA PI OMEGA

Plans for the annual initiation banquet are now practically complete. The place will be the Daniel Boone Hotel, and the date has been set for Friday, April 25—a week later than usual in order that those members of the fraternity who are to make the glee club trip will be able to attend.

A large number of the Alumni are expected to be present and an unusually elaborate program is now in process of completion for the event. Frater Russell Kline spent a pleasant week-end as a guest of the fraternity.

BETA DELTA SIGMA

Over the past week-end Fraters Wolbert, 'Rube' Shifrin, Keller, 'Hyme' Shifrin and Hoey were among the many Albrightians in Philadelphia. Frater George spent the week-end in Lancaster.

This Saturday evening the second house party and dance for this semester will be held. Every effort is being made to make this affair as successful as its predecessor.

Plans are under way for a closed formal dance and an open dance for Albright faculty members and students. Dates and details will be announced later. These affairs mingled with several house parties will complete an envious social program.

PHI BETA MU

The sorority coming out party on March 8, was deemed a great success by all those present. The hall of the Iris Club was tastefully decorated with over a hundred balloons in the colors of the sorority. Punch and refreshments were always on hand, and the orchestra kept things moving at quite a pace.

Those present were: Edythe Eyer-man, John Fromm, Blandina Foster, William Burkhardt, Florine Wilkes, Lester Delbert, Eva Mosser, Charles Mosser, Flora Gross, Peter Foltz, Irma Stahl, Babe Odin, Flora Lobb, Charles Call, Dolores Marconi, Earl Shappell, Victoria Orbin, Charles Pell, Gladys Baker, Alan MacCarroll, Mildred Wissinger, Charles Stauffer, Lydia Shober, John Tucker, Emily Yocom, Robert Work, Geraldine Kershner, Richard Harner, Billy Krick, Ellsworth Hoffman, Janet Wanbaugh, Lee Conrad, Jeanette Eisenhauer and James Eisenhauer.

The sorority takes great pleasure in announcing that Miss Victoria Orban has attained full membership, formal initiation having been held Sunday, March 9, at the home of Mrs. Dorothea Stutzman. After a delightful afternoon, during which tea was served by the hostess, the girls took some pictures and the gathering dispersed.

Sunday, March 9, Miss Janet Wanbaugh drove to Philadelphia and Atlantic City with her mother and Lee Conrad.

The following members of the sorority accompanied the Glee Club to Philadelphia, the week-end of March 13 to 16: Misses Wilkes, Foster, F. Gross, Lobb, Marconi, Stahl, Orban, Shober, Wissinger, Yocom.

Miss Janet Wanbaugh spent last week-end in Harrisburg.

Sorors Eyerman, Foster, Lobb and Yocom went to Myerstown Wednesday evening, as the feminine leads in the Dominos productions, "Sweet and Twenty," "The Vaillant" and "The Pot Boilers."

DEBATERS SPLIT

This evening, Friday, March 21, our Affirmative meets Washington College from Chestertown, Md., in a return debate on the subject of our withdrawal from the Kellogg Peace Pact. The debate will be held in the chapel. Let's have a bigger turnout than ever before, and back up our team. So far this year we have had larger audiences than any previous debate season. Keep it up! Debating needs your support, as does any other college activity.

There are just four debates left on the schedule. Next Wednesday, Mar. 26, Waynesburg College will be here to engage Albright in a series of three debates. Three questions will be used, namely the Machine Age question, the Advertising question and the Disarmament question. The first of the debates will be held in chapel, Wednesday morning; the second at noon, and the last one will be held Wednesday evening in the college chapel. Full announcements will be made as to what question will be used at each time.

This team from Waynesburg College is making a three week's tour meeting such colleges as F. & M., Gettysburg, Wake Forest, Asbury, Virginia Normal and Temple. Needless to say, they have a very fine team and we expect keen competition in all these debates with them. Remember the date, next Wednesday, March 26.

FATE'S PUPPETS

knew that it meant desertion, which was punishable by death, but what had he to live for?

They quietly stole out through the door and entered the public square. It was growing colder, as winter was almost upon them. Messana went back to the palace and picked up an old tapestry to use in covering the scanty gown which Paula wore. Then they started for Paula's home.

The next day when they were well on their way, Nero discovered the absence of his favorite dancer and the palace was in tumult and confusion. He refused to sing and play upon his lyre, he flogged the dance master; he ordered the search of the countryside to find the dancer and the deserter. However, the arrival of a large roast of beef soothed his irate frame of mind, and the soldiers, who were as indolent as their emperor, forgot his orders to enjoy a feast themselves. The timely arrival of a new beauty a day later caused the dull mind of Nero to become entirely void of any other slave's attractions.

Paula and Messana plodded on until they reached the town where she had lived. Here Messana left her. He went on his way, and she went to the home from which she had been carried more than five months ago.

Paula went to the house and found no trace of Claudius. The place looked as though it had been uninhabited for years. Upon inquiring she learned that Claudius had left with his flock, and in his despair he had gone to a village far to the north to forget. Now she was alone. There was not even Messana to comfort her.

But it was still afternoon and she decided to start for this village in the north. She took the road by which she had seen Messana depart, and walked hurriedly in the hope of overtaking him. She felt sure that if she could overtake Messana, he would accompany her. She walked faster now to keep warm, for the sun was sinking very rapidly. Her feet were tired, but she went straight ahead as though she had just started out.

When darkness finally enshrouded everything, Paula was still plodding on. Then she came to a kind of shed where horses might have been kept. It was on the outskirts of a small town where, perhaps, Messana might be staying for the night. She went into the crude shelter and nestled into a corner to bear the cold and the night as well as possible.

The next day she saw Messana in the streets and she rushed to him to again state her plight. Again he assisted her by offering her his piece of dry bread and some wine.

The fishing village where Claudius was supposed to have gone was reached at last, and at the water's edge they searched in vain for the missing husband. An old mariner asked them what they sought, and they stated their mission.

"Yes, he was here," he said, "but he did not like the sea. He felt the call of the mountains and the sheep and he planned to return to that life. But the day before he was to have left, he was out in a storm, and all lives were lost on board the ship save one old man who told of the event."

The search was ended. Paula was alone. Messana spoke, at first slowly. "Paula, I know that you are a grief-stricken and I do not want to add to your discomfort, but . . ."

There was a still and dreadful silence. Messana continued . . . "but from the first I have loved you, and if you wish I will marry you and take care of you. I know where your heart is, but if you will only consider me as a friend, I am sure . . ."

He could not go on. Then Paula spoke. "Thank you," she said. With an understanding that is surpassed only by love, they started out to begin life anew.

comedies, heart-breaking tragedies, and pleasing dramas. The club is fully organized now, and soon, with everybody co-operating, the upper-classmen will be privileged to pass judgment on these enterprising Frosh (a judgment that we hope will be very favorable).

At last a name has been chosen for the club by a committee, consisting of Janet Wanbaugh, Jack Reynolds and Stanley Brookes. Several valuable suggestions were placed in the hands of these students to be voted upon. Their final decision was "The Little Theatre Workshop," by which name the Frosh will hereafter speak of their club.

Campus Luminaries

PAUL I. HANGEN

Hangen's four years at Albright has been marked with success scholastically and socially. He took active part in extra-curricula activities during this time. His plebe year is marked as probably the most outstanding, serving as president of the freshmen class, business manager of the 'Y' Handbook, and varsity tennis team.

In his Sophomore year he became a member of the Students' Governing Council, secretary of the Athletic Association, and again on the varsity tennis team.

During his Junior year Paul was elected vice president of the Students' Governing Council, and served on the Speculum Staff, also played on varsity tennis, basketball and football teams.

This being Paul's fourth and last year, he already served as football coach for freshman team and will be counted upon as a star player on the varsity tennis team which will soon be organized.

Hangen belongs to the Z. O. E. Fraternity. His major subject is history and in June expects to receive his A.B. degree.

PROF. HORN SPEAKS

the weaknesses of mankind and the dreadful results of dissipation, and the backward trend of civilization from some of these human weaknesses.

Syphilis and Gonorrhea were the two principle diseases spoken upon. The history, causes, progress and course, symptoms, prevention, cure, and effects of these dreadful diseases were truthfully explained and illustrated to the boys.

The one main thought behind it all being to educate the boys on questions which will affect them in later life. Professor Horn stressed the point that an ounce of prevention is surely worth a pound of cure. Constantly he brought to our minds the appeal for clean, wholesome living not only for ourselves, but in consideration for those all about us, our relatives, and families, our children, our posterity, and for the future greatness of our country. A nation is only what its people make it, so let us keep this in mind.

At the close of the lecture, Professor Horn let himself open to questions from the floor. Many interesting questions were asked and answered; every one gaining exceptional benefit and knowledge from them.

We wish to thank the S. & B. Society for their efforts and wish that we may again be privileged with another talk from Professor Horn in the near future.

CAMPUS FLASHES

We heard certain old Albrightians got homesick for the school when they were in Myerstown Wednesday night. And that Joe Shober and Bill Maier are the best stage managers in the business.

Big Fellowship Dinner Thursday evening—Albrightians making merry melodies, everyone making whoopee and John enjoying himself.

Prayer Week's next week. A good speaker is coming, and the whole school is preparing to support this worthwhile effort on the part of the 'Y's.'

Girls' Basketball squad is planning a banquet. We say they deserve it, and a lot more for not losing a game.
