Editor's Note :

For the past 4 or 5 weeks now, people on campus have signed petitions, made speeches, argued late into the night, made threats, asked questions, and generally, stirred the air of our peaceful little college. Whether or not you agree with all the arguments, requests, or demands, just about everybody has at least been bothered enough to pay some attention. I commend those members of the Senate, RSA, Union, and the various little ad hoc groups that focused some of their energy to make life more equitable here.

The trustee decision of two weeks ago did not defeat everyone. In fact, there has been a great deal of progress made. The Dean of Student's office has been once again pulled closely to the issues. A number of students have questioned the legitimacy of the resident student visitation program. People are becoming aware that the difference between what is official and what is operational is beginning to stick in their craws.

So what do we do? Do we redefine who closes whose eyes to what? Do we silently say 'what the hell,' study for letter grades four days a week and party the other three? We could. But we can also begin constructing new decisions, to update the ones that no longer apply. We can continue to discuss, and argue, and sign petitions, because slowly, we are changing the rules.

We're only here for four years. We Can't sleep through them.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

To the Editor:

Where was the "co-habitation"? Where was the "sin" and the "breakdown of the family tradition"? These questions kept going through my mind last weekend during which time I was visiting a friend in a co-ed dorm down at the University of Delaware.

The answers to these questions are probably already known to the student body of Albright. Co-habitation was no more prevalent there than on this very campus. People's attitudes toward each other were much less sex related. The girl or guy next door seemed to be just that. How many people actually go out with their next door neighbor at home? I'd venture to say not very many. After all, it is not the person you see everyday and know all about that you're going to find socially attractive. A friend, yes; a date, no.

Not all of Delaware's dorms are co-ed yet, though the trend over the years has been moving in that direction. When I spoke to girls living in a non-coed dorm, the response to my inquiries was often, "guys come up often to visit their girlfriends on the weekend. It's nice having them around."

People still get engaged and married. Life goes on. The atmosphere is just a little more relaxed and people can be at ease with each other. Parties were usually contained to individual rooms or suites just like Albright.

Probably the main difference between the two student bodies was that at Delaware I didn't come upon so many students considering transferring out as I do here.

The above trends were ones I have also seen at Duke University and the University of Pennsylvania.

So to the trustees who look at the student body of Albright with fear and apprehension, I say, go out to the schools near you that have co-ed living. It is your duty and responsibility as trustees of this school to make some personal surveys of co-educational living and see if they bare out your convictions, or if there is indeed some room for change. No student can help but feel oppressed upon returning to Albright after spending a weekend in a liberal school. And is it not the responsibility of the trustees to see to it that the student life at Albright is as meaningful as possible. After all, the happier the time I have here now, the more willing I'll be to donate money to this institution as an alumnus. But I will never give money to any organization that puts forth a code that I have felt to be personally oppressive and restrictive in relation to today's moral norms.

All persons who wish to be considered for next year's editorship of the 'Agon', 'Albrightian' or 'Cue' should make such request in writing to the Media Policy Board by Tuesday noon, April 8, 1975.

To the Editor:

Many students at Albright often have difficulty in finding a place that has an atmosphere conducive to study. Although every student has approximately the same amount of studying during the weeks of midterms and finals, there still seems to be a lack of places which personally satisfy students' studying needs. There is a place on campus, which is centrally located, excellent for studying, and appears to be unknown to Albright students. As a service for the student body, the Sisters of Chi Lambda Rho Sorority would like to extend the use of their sorority 'house' (the Belfry) for those students looking for a new place on campus to study.

The Belfry is located on the library side of Selwyn two floors above the Psychological Counseling Service. The Chi Lams are opening the Belfry during midterm and finals weeks, as well as other times throughout the semester, for any student interested in uninterrupted studying. Please feel free to make use of the Belfry as a study center anytime during Monday through Friday

Albrightian Faces Shutdown

by BILL WOODS

'There's a good possibility there won't be an Albrightian for the rest of the year,' Acting Editor Ogden Rogers said recently, commenting on the need for applicants for the student publication. Rogers will be stepping down from the position which he filled after former editor Mark Altshuler resigned in early February.

He said the student run newspaper is in fine shape financially, with the possibility of returning money at the end of the year. 'The trouble, he said, 'is getting people interested in print media on the campus. We wanted people to get involved...go creative, and witness their efforts on their local paper.'

Applications for editorship, to begin at the end of April, and run until April of next year should be submitted to Robert Smethers, Director of College relations, in the administration building.

*announcements in the public interest

To the Editor,

The United Nations General Assembly, by adoption of Resolution 3020, of December 18, 1972, designated 1975 as International Women's year. The objectives of International Women's Year (IWY) are: 1) to promote equality between men and women; 2) to ensure full participation of women in all aspects of national and international life; 3) to recognize contributions of women in the promotion of friendly relations and cooperation among nations and to recognize women's place in the world.

Firmly believing in these objectives, the Association of Women Students of Albright College has designated Friday, March 21, as Women's Recognition Day on campus. We are taking this opportunity to recognize all female employees for the contribution they have made to the Albright community. Without their service, Albright could not exist. So, instead of the usual

by SUE BRADLEY

There has been a great deal of interest and apathy, commotion and confusion about the Co-ordinate Housing Proposal. We have witnessed petitions, talks, rallies, and votes. This is an article to try to put into perspective the entire issue for people who may be confused or wish to know where it has led us.

I have talked with two people who have been instrumental throughout the year in promotion of the ideas of co-ord and co-ordinate housing. They are Christie Antinucci, acting as representative of Senate, and Kathi Wood, speaking for herself and Diana Leyden. I'll give some background on what they have been doing.

There are a few important events that are discussed by both views in this article:

1-The vote of the Board of Trustees on March 7th (13-12, opposed to the Senate proposal of co-ordinate housing)

2-A rally at 5:45pm on March 10th for students in the South Lounge.

3-A then proposed demonstration at the NCAA tournament, March 14-15.

4-A proposed open forum for Trustees and students set for April 8th.

Christie Antinucci has been working with the Senate proposal for Co-ordinate Housing for 6½ months. Christie said she is very apprehensive about any form of demonstration because she felt a demonstration will ruin all that the Senate has achieved and would cripple the newly found power of that body. This she said, is the first year that the Senate has really begun to move. It has never been such an impact on the Trustees, nor such an integral part of the policy-making power in the school. Any kind of demonstration will be a slap in the face to anyone in the system; faculty, administrators, trustees, and students—all will be hurt. A lot of people have put themselves on the line, professionally and personally.

She used as an example Mrs. Erdmann, one of the Trustees on the Senate, who really 'sweated it out' for the proposal on the floor of the Trustee meeting because of her belief in the Senate and its potential. Christie asks that students work with the system and not alienate the twelve trustees that are for the proposal. She says that the system is where our power lies. The power can be seen by the closeness of the vote on March 7th. A few years ago it might have been 24-1. The Senate has the potential to be a powerful agent in student affairs, she said. 'The issue of co-ordinate housing isn't as important as the issue of Senate being a viable avenue for student input.'

She also feels that this is a critical time for the Capital Funds Campaign. 'Any demonstration, peaceful or otherwise, may easily be misconstrued by the Reading-Berks community who are being contacted at this time for contributions to the Capital Funds Campaign.' The fear of loss of funds from a large proportion of contributors to this campaign is an important reason for the decision on Friday, March 7th.

The petition and discussion of the rally did not receive much support. The majority of listeners agreed with 5 option plan. However, most would not sign the petition until they were assured that the NCAA tournament would not be blocked.

The vote of the Trustees followed on March 7th.

On March 10th at 5:45pm there was a rally in the South Lounge. The rally didn't receive much support. 'The apathy was running thick,' says Kathi. There are only about 300-400 signatures for the petition. She concludes that the students are just not up for action. Kathi stressed that she and Diana want to represent the students, not force their own views upon them. They want to establish a moral code as the students want and see it. They wish to get legal sanction for what is already being done on campus.

Kathi Wood and Diana Leyden have been struggling with the Co-ordinate housing issue for a long time. Diana worked hard to bring forth the proposal only to be angered when it completely lost its purpose in the Senate. Kathi has been angered by the punishment of friends who have been caught doing something that nearly everyone does on campus, breaking visitation rules.

Four weeks ago, they distributed a questionnaire to discover student opinion on the issues of visitation and co-ordinate housing. There were two key questions. The first was a question about breaking visitation rules. 85-95% of the questionnaires received stated that they broke visitation rules frequently. The second key question was about the desire for the ability to re-evaluate the visitation code. 95% of the questionnaires said yes.

2½ to 3 weeks ago, they hand picked 26 people with good leadership from all elements of the student body and met with them in Kathi's room. Kathi and Diana told them their ideas and demands. One idea, which they were apprehensive about, was to attempt to block the recent NCAA tournament. In this meeting, the decision was made to publicize the proposed block of the tournament and put it to the students for their reaction. Thursday night, March 6th, these people went to the dorms to present the petition. This is an outline of those demands:

1-amnesty for all visitation violators.

2-a five option living situation from 24 hour visitation to no visitation to accommodate all life styles on campus.

3-less arbitrary punishment of offenders. This is a demand that guidelines be established and adhered to.

Needless to say, Kathi and Christie disagree in many areas of the issue.

Kathi feels that what is needed is a rally or demonstration. She thinks that the twelve trustees would be interested in student support for their stand. She feels that what is needed is a peaceful rally to determine student sentiment and locate student support. This is not meant to antagonize anyone. This is a democratic society, if it is harmful to voice our opinions, we should reassess the system. She isn't trying to step on any toes. She is just trying to show that the students really support those twelve Trustees. People should be able to speak up for what they believe.

She disagrees with Christie about the new found power of the Senate. She says, 'Senate has already been castrated when one vote can overrule the hierarchy of student government.' 'It might be understandable for the omnipotent Trustee hand 5 years ago when we weren't legal adults—but now we are. There is a college plan to move away from the role of surrogate parent but they are moving towards it or staying consistent with it.' 'If the Senate is viable, how can one vote negate all student desire and opinion. The only power we have is given to us by the Trustees and Administration. (The) Power granted isn't power at all, it can be taken away at any time within the present system. The Trustees have their choice if they want to listen. This is a question of influence not power.'

These are two opposing views of the issue. But where does that lead us now?

There is a definite plan of action at the moment. Out of the rally on March 10 came a proposal from Diana Leyden that met with strong student support. The proposal is for an open forum for Trustees and students on April 8th. This will be an attempt at demonstrating united student support and at communication. Both Christie and Kathi agree on this plan of action at present.

And that's the way the situation stands.

POLITICAL PERSPECTIVES

Illegal Ticketing

by STEVE SCHWARZ

An issue that has received a substantial amount of attention in the past few years centers around whether or not Albright College's security patrolmen have the legal right to dispense tickets to students who park on the 1800 block of Linden Street (alongside East Hall and Smith Lounge). Because of the fact that the issue up to this point has received many contradictory interpretations, I've decided to partake in some "investigating" in order to get to the truth of the matter.

First of all, by flipping to the bottom of page 15 in the Compass, one will note the following sentence: "Due to the residential nature and narrowness of the 1800 block of Linden Street, there will be no parking permitted at any time, on either side." All in all, that's a rather humorous sentence, considering the fact that Linden Street is not too "narrow" for the people who live across from the dormitories to park on. The major point to be considered, then, is the basis on which the college assumes it has the authority to enforce a regulation of this nature, which is clearly discriminatory and without legal backbone.

One can understandably wonder exactly how the college has been able to get away for so long with issuing parking tickets and collecting money for their "violation," actions that are completely outside of the college's legal authority. Two possible reasons come to mind: (1) the college has perpetuated the myth that they have an agreement with the city of Reading to issue parking tickets to students parking on Linden Street, and (2) up to this point, no student has vehemently complained to the college concerning the illegality of the regulation.

In order to clear up the myth that the college has an agreement with the city of Reading to issue these tickets, I recently visited Councilman Harold Brown, who did me the favor of calling up the Police Commissioner of Reading and asking him whether or not the college had such an agreement; as expected, the Commissioner clearly confirmed the fact that no agreement exists between Albright and the city. Thus, the college has absolutely no legal grounds to issue tickets to students for parking on Linden Street.

In conclusion, the college must be well-aware of the fact that if a student took the college to court for enforcing a parking ticket issued on Linden Street, the college would have no legal grounds to substantiate their usurping of a power that is delegated only to the city of Reading. In light of this, the college should immediately cease issuing tickets to students for parking on Linden Street, and furthermore, the college should refund all the money that has been collected up to this point due to the issuing of tickets in the past.

HEALTH: Towards A Definition

SLEEP

by SUSAN STEELE

One of the most controversial factors in health for college people is sleep. We do know that fatigue is a natural reaction of the body designed to protect us from over work; sleep is our way of "recharging" the body.

The amount of sleep necessary varies with each individual, however nearly everyone needs 5-9 hours per day. The best way to find out your personal needs is to set a definite schedule (try this one during the summer break) over a three week period Go to bed at the same time (before midnight) each day and do not use an alarm to wake up. The average amount of hours your body takes for itself is what it really needs.

Sometimes, we could argue, we need a certain grade more than a day's sleep. Introducing the all-nighter! The effectiveness of consistent all nighters is questionable, however. Forcing ourselves to do mental work that we don't really want to do (if you're that enthusiastic about it, why didn't you jump on it three days ago instead of watching that movie) uses up a helluva lot of good energy just trying to concentrate. The only way to stick to Faulkner after 2 am is with a pot of coffee, a box of No-Doz or some speed. (The latter is expensive, illegal, and your body doesn't like it all that much, but we'll discuss that later.) Caffeine will get you thru the night and thru the exam, but don't be surprised if you lose some of your coordination, get a headache in the middle of the blue book, or feel very nauseous all the next day.

Cut yourself a break once in a while and study during the day. If the thought of an impending infection like mono or the threat of varicose veins from sitting all night, every night at the desk aren't enough incentive, imagine going back to the dorm, pulling a soft blanket over your chest and letting visions of whatever turns you on dance in your head.

BLUTE

by BOB BLUTINGER

When I heard that the N.C.A.A. Division III Championships were going to be here at Albright I thought that we would see some of the finest basketball the collegiate game could offer. Well for once I was right. In two nights some of the best basketball that the George C. Bollman Center has ever seen was played.

In the 1st game Friday night who ever expected Glassboro State to pull out to that 22-2 lead? Then to watch Brockport State cut that 20 pt. lead to just 1 pt. Sheer excitement was the word!

Bobby Newman the junior guard from LeMoyné-Owen was one of the most colorful players I have ever seen. Those 35 ft. shots he was taking were amazing. Newman was enrolled at Tennessee State his freshman year. However the coach wanted him to be a playmaker. Not happy he transferred to Le Moyné-Owen where he scored 20 pts. game and shot an amazing 51% from the field (considering the type of shots he takes). He very deservedly received the Most Valuable Player Award in the Tournament here.

The most sensational plays in the two nights were definitely the blocked shots. Players such as Monroe McTaw of Brockport State, Willie Parr of Le Moyné-Owen and Bruce Hamming of Augustana had just so many spectacular leaping rejections.

A hardy congratulations has to be offered to Dr. Will Renken for a job well done. Although the Bollman Center was not at capacity they couldn't be unhappy at the turnout. There must have been over 1600 people if not more Saturday night. (Not bad considering that only 200 tickets were sold in advance as of Wed.).

As usual two men who work their butts off for 3 weeks don't get the credit that they deserve of course I'm talking of Harrie Burdan and Don Rider. The program which they assembled in one night (all night) was just one example of their work. Not to mention calling the countless number of newspaper and radio stations with the results of the game. And those stats and running play by play that all the media received. Don and Harry we appreciate it.

The only complaint possible is that student turnout was poor. However $3.50 is too much to ask out of the college students. Possibly a reduced ticket rate should have been available to students. I'm sure quite a few would have come out if the games cost only $2.

The Tournament was very well controlled and good sportsmanship was shown by all involved. All teams played like perfect gentlemen for the most part. The only derogatory aspect was that some of the Brockport fans angered by one officials call informed him that his call had something to do with a bull.

The only unfortunate injury of the tournament came to Brockport's sensational 6ft. 6in. sophomore Monroe McTaw. Going up to block a shot late in the 1st game Monroe injured his shoulder. This kept him on the bench for most of the way the following night. McTaw can do it all Jump, shoot, dribble and play defensive. He is definitely All-American material in his next two years at Brockport. He had one of the most exciting plays of the tournament when he cleanly blocked 6ft. 11in. Hummings layup attempt Saturday night.

One of the more exciting players of the tournament was Glassboro's Greg Ackles. On the first night he scored 14 pts. and had 8 steals. He played just as well in the championship game even though he was saddled with foul trouble. Not bad for a guy who has half a thumb on his shooting hand.

At halftime of the championship the 3rd and 4th place awards were given out to Brockport and Augustana. You could see the look of disappointment on all the players faces as they accepted their placks. of course they wanted that National Championship. But in a couple years those players will look back on this tournament and those trophies and say to themselves 'Hey, I played on a team that was 3rd in the nation'. That's when the true value of collegiate basketball sets in.

Often times I get in arguments with people concerning professional basketball compared with collegiate. In my mind there is no way the pro's can even compare with collegiate. The excitement generated by this tournament alone surpassed that of 25 progames.

Overall the tournament was a tremendous experience for me to broadcast as well to watch. It was a great thrill and in my mind a tremendous success and it's hopeful that the tournament will return to Albright in the near future. A tremendous job done by all involved!

Le Moyné-Owen Takes Championship

by NICK FOGNANO

They came a long way with only a handful of rooters, but the small Tennessee College of 900, LeMoyné-Owen, overcame a tough New Jersey team to capture the 1st NCAA Group III

Basketball Championship, downing the Glassboro St. Profs, 57-54 here at Albright. The Magicians of Coach Jerry Johnson got some standout performances from junior guard Bob Newman, who was named the NCAA Group III Most Valuable Player, and junior forward Clint Jackson, who was named to the Group III All-Star Team with Newman.

The games were all fairly close and hard fought as all four teams came in with excellent records and high spirits. In the first game of the semifinal round, Glassboro jumped out to a quick lead over Brockport en route to a 76-68 victory. The Profs opened by blowing Brockport right off the court taking a 22-2 lead as they took advantage of 16 Brockport turnovers and opened up with some hot shooting. The Golden Eagles came back to cut the margin, trailing 35-21 at the half. The second half saw Glassboro again start quick but Brockport fought back the rest of the half to come within a point of the Profs, but some clutch baskets by soph guard Greg Ackles and some accurate foul shooting preserved the lead and the game was as Glassboro put it, 'as good as gold'. The Profs of Coach Jack Collins were able to decide the game at the foul line as they hit 15 for 15 for 100% at the line in the second half and this seemed to be the margin of victory, since they held Brockport State to 3 for 4 at the line the second half. While Glassboro hit 49% from the field, Brockport warmed up to hit 53% from the field (61% in the second half), which was the best in the series.

The Profs outrebounded the Golden Eagles 33-29.

Pacing Glassboro's scoring was junior forward Dennis Flaherty with 18 points while pulling down 8 rebounds, while center Mike Smith added 17, guard Ackles had 16 points and 8 steals, and forward Mike Goode added 15 points. Brockport State was led by the Panaggio brothers, as Dan hit for 20 points and 9 assists and Mike added 15 counters while soph center Monroe McTaw pumped in 19 points and grabbed 10 rebounds while blocking 7 shots.

The second game saw the Magicians of LeMoyné-Owen advance to the finals by defeating Augustana of Illinois 84-71. The big story here was junior guard Bob Newman of the Magicians who hit 10 for 24 from the field and 12 for 12 from the line for 32 points. The big break in the game came at 11:45 in the first half with the score tied 14-14, when LeMoyné-Owen fired in 10 straight points unanswered by Augustana. The Vikings did come back to cut the lead to 7 as they trailed 38-31 at the half. The second half saw Augustana try to come back but the Magicians held firm and eventually pulled away at the end to the 13 point victory. LeMoyné-Owen hit 46% from the field and were perfect from he line on Newman's 12 for 12. Augustana hit for 46.5% from the field and were held to only 3 for 4 from the line. The Magicians outrebounded the Vikings 45-38, and turned the ball over only 8 times compared to 16 for the Vikings.

Besides Newman's 32 points, the Magicians also got 18 points from forward Clint Jackson, while junior forward Willie Parr added 12 points and 10 rebounds and center Milt Stevens netted 10 points and 11 rebounds. Augustana was led by All-American center Bruce Hamming, who hit for 18 points while pulling in 15 rebounds. Senior forward Mike Mickalski added 14 points and guarded Terry Lawrence hopped 10.

In the second round action, in the Consolation game, Augustana defeated Brockport St., 78-71. Bruce Hamming, the 6-11 center, again led the Vikings with 28 points and 13 rebounds while forward Dan Hillesland added 14. Brockport St. Coach Mauro Panaggio again got excellent performances from his sons, as Dan played a good all around game contributing 25 points, 7 rebounds and 9 assists while Mike added 19 points.

In the Championship game, both teams opened up quickly and the score was very close until Glassboro opened up a 7 point lead midway through the first half on the shooting of Ackles, Goode and Smith, but LeMoyné-Owen fought back on the shooting of Clint Jackson and took a 30-27 half time lead. The second half saw the Magicians set the pace holding on to the lead with the Profs staying close within striking range but were never able to tie the game and take the lead. LeMoyné-Owen never lead by any more than 7 points in the game, but they were able to protect the lead all during the second half. Glassboro did come within 3 (53-50) with 2:07 left in the game, but couldn't go ahead as they were in foul trouble and it took its toll on them, as they eventually fell 57-54. The foul trouble was one of the major reasons for the Profs defeat as lead scorer Greg Ackles was playing with 4 personals, (one foul of which was incorrectly given to him when the official scorer gave one of Dennis Flaherty's fouls to

"Yes!"—Enthusiastic fans look on as Bob Gingrich goes for his 1000 point in the Lion season final against Washington College.

Ackles), while their top ball handler and quarterback, senior guard Billy Wise (brother of LaSalle's Charlie Wise), was out of action much of the second half with foul trouble and did eventually foul out. Also, another reason for Glassboro's defeat was that they shot a dismal 37% from the field as compared to 47% for the Magicians.

Jackson paced LeMoyné-Owen with 17 points while Newman was held to 16 points and Willie Parr added 14 points and grabbed 12 rebounds. Glassboro St. was led by Ackles 17 points and 6 rebounds, while Goode added 11 points and 9 rebounds and Flaherty netted 10.

In the post game ceremonies, the All NCAA Group III All-Star Team chosen by the sports writers and officials were: Clint Jackson and Bob Newman of LeMoyné-Owen; Greg Ackles of Glassboro State; Dan Panaggio of Brockport State; and Bruce Hamming of Augustana.
