It's happened. The roseate hue which Albright athletics had tended to reflect of late, with the appointment of Clarence Munn as coach, and with the bumper crop of frosh hopefuls ready for 1935-36 harvest, has been flecked with dismal black. A lengthy streak of frosh victories, piled up on football gridiron and bas-ketball court by green brawn and brain, has been knocked for a couple of loops by the grimmest specter of intercollegiate sports, Old Man Ineligibility.

What seems anomalous to us, at least, is the fact that the several players who appeared to be playing the smartest basketball are the ones who are waging the worst classroom battles. The aged dogma that brains and athletes don't mix has long since been upset. The magnifi-cently paid hero, who flourished in the reign of said dogma, disappeared simultaneously with it.

Today's athlete stands side by side with his fellow collegian. He will not be eased through countless courses so that he may more easily be immolated for dear old Squilf.

And here is the golden opportunity for an ancient institution to prove its worth-the fraternity. Fraternities have scholarship committees, we are told. Let them show their devotion to their Alma Mater, not by cheering as their own frater shoots a basket, but by lending time and energy to keeping the silent stalker-ineligibility—deep in the shadows.

Otherwise, we may be receiving heated epistles of this sort, sent to one of our rival papers.

"I'm tired of supporting athletes.

Not so much athletics, but the pigheaded, stupid men who come to college in the name of Sport. I'm tired of seeing my $10 annually go into their pockets.

In the first place why should I be compelled, forced by the "Big stick" of convention and mass psychology to pay $10 to let 22 men take pleasant trips and get nice warm sweaters. I despise the short thinking indulged in by the campus "big shots' who try to cajole me into lending my financial, physical and spiritual sup-port to these "Lords of Creation."

Miss Eleanor Richards, with the aid of Annabel Farley, J. Donald Book, and Forrest Rehrig, is planning for the social evening. Jeanette Shelly and Betty Straub are on the refreshment committee. The cast of characters for "Taking Father's Place" is as follows: Henderson Edwards, a merchant, Paul Woodcock; Charles Edwards, his son, Martin Musket; Mr. Grabbit, a customer, J. If I don't want to see a battle of brain and brawn played by 10 men on a basketball court, why should I have to support the system which makes it possible?

Why shouldn't we spend a few dollars so that a few dozen more could enjoy tennis, or why couldn't we buy a bulk student membership at the golf club, or why shouldn't you, all of you, pay that haughty eagle every fall, buy a fine set of golf clubs? I'm sure it wouldn't cost more than $30.

As I said before, I'm tired of sup porting these social and financial parasites who often drop out after a year or so anyway, and so let the athlets go hang.

MERE WORDS OR POETRY?

As George Rylands states in his Words and Poetry: "The poet is an artist and words are his medium," so can we see in the works of three living poets, Edna St. Vincent Millay, Paul Engle, and Du-Bose Heyward, three different forms of art. All three have been hailed by criticis everywhere and all three have something higher to strive for.

Each one of this trio endeavors to recreate the feeling with which any important experience, actual or imaginary, has possessed him; a feeling of joy, perportant experience, actual or imaginary, has possessed him; a feeling of joy, perhaps, or reverence, passionate love, indignation, scorn, fear, or pity. Each one uses a different technique—different symbols in an interesting form. The re-creation, in each one's noble manner, of that state of feeling enables the poet to express the knowledge and truth, whether old or new, which has been the fruit of his emotional experience.

DuBose Heyward, in his Jasbo Brown and Selected Poems, deals with moods and pains of nature and of life. These delicate lyrics and ballads of southern scenes rank him as one of the best known poets of the New South. Robert Gar-and, dramatic critic of The New York World-Telegram, in giving his personal opinion of these verses, used four adjectives to describe his feelings—provocative, dramatic, relentless, and un-

However, Mr, Heyward's titles, being very common terms, give him away.

Miss Millay's and Engle's poems require some reading before a clue is given. Then, too, Heyward's short lyrics are written with utmost simplicity.

Edna St. Vincent Millay and Paul are written with utmost simplicity. Edna St. Vincent Millay and Paul Engle, with keen interest, weave picturesque word tableaux that live. Heyward has written several strong appealing dramas and novels. Personally, I be-lieve he would do better to stick close to that form of writing.

to that form of writing.

Paul Engle aroused the literary world several months ago with the publication of American Song. Here is a young Rhodes scholar at Oxford, writing with feeling and power that carry the reader into higher realms of vivid color. He alone climbs to pinnacles never reached by youth before. His poems have swing, vigor, and beauty. They are vivid and sensitive, lyrical voices of the American dream.

Mrs. Helen Farmer Page, by the Berks.

the American dream.

Mrs. Helen Farmer Page, is the Berks County literary magazine, the Galleon, presented Paul Engle as a poet from whom the public will hear as time goes on. She goes on to $\varphi_{\overline{\chi}}$" it is most refreshing to read of healthy, normal, hopeful ambitions after countless other books of interspective, abnormal, cynical reactions. Here is a particularly appealing note, one that illustrates the life and passion and hope that surges in the opet's breast:

America, turn in and find yourself. Not a continent, but eternity is ahead, Over the far prairies and the hills Where no trails lead, out to an end un-

I agree with the Galleon reviewer when she asserts: "Stephen Vincent Benet says, 'Here is somebody walking in America in proud shoes.' There is no better way of saying it." Engle's verses have fire, thought, music and the galgantry. Could we want anything more? Edna St. Vincent Millay has startled the reading public so many times that it remains a mystery as to how she continues to do so. In her latest volume, Wine From These Grapes, she has set a new pitch which will be hard to reach for others. Continuing in her own fascinating style and color, the New York poet soars nearer her goal of mastery. Her themes follow no set pattern; yet they keep the reader conscious of universal experience. Her sonnets are brilliant masterpieces dealing with striking personal, as well as social, truths.

As one critic has said, I say: "She still chiesel lines of poetry in color and imagination that are full grown."

The "Y" Column

In carrying out the theme of the regular Vesper services, "Greater Things," the cabinets of the Y. M. C. A. and the Y. W. C. A. have taken several facts into consideration. They are attempting to present programs which will be of worth to the students in their daily contacts. Anybody can profit by intelligent and kindly criticism. This, the "Y" cabinet members want from the student body. To benefit by the criticism which is neither intelligent nor kindly, that ill-natured variety, popularly known as knocking, is a little harder.

Before criticizing, we would wish the Before criticizing, we would wish the students to take into consideration the following thought: "If your backbone is weak, if your self-confidence is based not on what others think about you, then systematic knocking is likely to bring about defeat. If you have pluck and persistence, and the power to estimate your ability fairly, then a knock may provide the incentive for doing your best."

On Thursday evening and Friday evenings, February 28 and March 1, the campus will be honored with the presence of Dr. Paul S. Mayer, head of the Evangelical Missions of Japan. Dr. Mayer will address the student body at the Fellowship supper on Thursday evening in the college dining hall. The same evening he will meet with the cabinets for a devotional meeting. On Friday, Dr. Mayer will co-operate with the various professors in the classes on social problems and religious teachings in Japan.

Take It From Me ...

At present the Lions, by virtue of a close win over the Ursinus Bears, hold undisputed possession of fifth place in the Eastern Pennsylvania Conference. Last minute word has come that the game with the Nevonians has been cancelled, so the Red and White will not go to work again until tomorrow night, when they clash with Drexel in a return game at the "Y." A victory over Drexel will put the Lions in a position to climb into fourth place or a tie for that position. Certainly if the Smithmen end the season in fourth place, it can be considered a fair season after the disastrous start which marked the beginning of the current campaign. of the current campaign.

The Ursinus game indicated that the Lions had plenty of fight as well as the ability to play good defensive ball. A look at the record indicates that they put up a remarkable defensive exhibition in holding the Bears to exactly four points in thirteen minutes. Not only is that remarkable, but the team had enough scoring power to come from behind and finally nose out the Bears on Captain Bob Shipe's field goal. Besides scoring the winning bucket, Shipe led the local marksmen in scoring eleven points. Dick Riffle, Sophomore sensation, also played a fine defensive game at guard, holding down Cliff Calvert, the Bears' main scoring hope. The Ursinus game indicated that the

Last Saturday saw the Lions go down fighting before the obviously superior Gettysburg Bullets. There is no doubt that the Bullet team which performed here is the best aggregation seen on the local court this season. Their speedy and smooth passing attack label them as the best club in the loop in this writer's mind. The perennial Cico, teamed with Fish at forward, put up a remarkable exhibition of what can be done on a basketball court when you are really serious about it. With MacMillan at center, and Morris and Kozma at guards, the Bream coached quintet has the best balanced team seen in this league for a long time. The fact that they dropped one league decision to Johnny Utz's Mules is hard to reconcile with the lacing they handed that same club only last week.

Incidentally, the reception that was awarded to Cico last week leads us to believe that a number of the people at the game let their sentiments rule their reason when they gave Cico the bird on every possible occasion. Certainly Cico is no shrinking violet, nor is he the best liked player in the league, but his personal characteristics hardly prevent him from being one of the most valuable players in the conference.

Saturday night, as you already know, the Lions will clash with Drexel in the final game of the year. The Albright lineup will probably be changed considerably in an effort to beat Drexel and climb into fourth place.

Bill McClintock, who led the Lion scorers against the Builets, will start at forward with Bill Becker. Captain Doc Shipe will be back at his old post at the pivot position in an effort to control the tap. Red Woods will pair at guard with Dick Riffle. With this lineup, Johnny Smith hopes to see the Lions finish the rest of the season with no more than one loss, if any. If the boys can continue their present brand of offense and defense, they should avenge some of the defeats suffered earlier in the year.

FROSH STREAK OF NINE WINS ENDED BY UNION COLLEGE

Scholastic Ineligibility Halts Green Onrush; Revamped Team De-feats Wyomissing, 40-19

After maintaining a hot pace of winning nine consecutive games, the Albright Frosh basketball team dropped its first contest of the season to the Union County, New Jersey, Junior College quintet by the score 35-21 last Saturday night in a preliminary contest to the varsity encounter on the Central Y. Ed McDonough, forward and center, injured earlier in the season, returned to action and saw service in the New Jersey game.

Owing to an extra period victory over

Owing to an extra period victory over Ursinus and a defeat by the Gettysburg quintet, the Albright College varsity basketeers are, at present, holding down fifth position in the Eastern Pennsylvania College Conference.

On Wednesday, February 20, playing on the Bears' home floor at Collegeville, the Lions displayed a fine passing attack which enabled them to chalk up their second conference victory, 37-35. The game was a thriller from beginning to end, with Ursinus leading most of the way. They seemed to have had the game won in the second half when they enjoyed a fourteen-point lead. Led by Bob Shipe, who tallied eleven markers to lead the scorers for the evening, the Red and White hoopsters knotted the score at 33 all when the game ended.

During the extra period, Ursinus again led by two points, but were unable to hold it, and when the final whistle sounded, the Lions had a scant two-point margin.

That same evening the Gettysburg team, last year's pennant winners, shellacked the undefeated Muhlenberg quintet, which was up to this time leading the league. The final score was 54-38. This tied the two teams for first place.

On Saturday evening, playing on the Y. M. C. A. floor, the Lions were defeated by a high powered Gettysburg team, 54-32. It was a complete rout for Coach Smith's boys, who were simply outclassed. Bill McClintock was high outclassed. Bill McClintock was high scorer for the Reading collegians with a total of nine markers. Captain Shipe was held to one lone tally. Coach Smith, following his policy of the Lebannon Valley and Ursinus contests, used practically all of his squad. Eleven Albright players saw action in this game.

John Cico and Jacob Fish were the Gettysburg flashes, accounting for 22 points between them.

The Snooper

Warning is hereby served on all love-birds, Don Juan et al., that from now on the policy of this pillar is to be of an expository nature. No secret shall be deemed too holy to be revealed. All names will be mentioned, and nothing will be concealed.... Charley Gabriel, as you have no doubt noticed, is back in school and pursuing his old affairs where they were broken off. The blonde local whom he escorted to the last bas-kethall ame is named Ardell Bright. local whom he escorted to the last bas-ketball game is named Ardell Bright, address unknown . . . . Charley's brother Ken, a persistent faller in and out of love, is too frequently seen with a mousy Frosh, one Annabelle Farley by name . . . . The Phillip Morris cig-arette propaganda is now in the hands of your correspondent. This week packs of fifty P. M. butts will be given to Ken Erdman and Dave Fields of the Junior class for their high scholastic ratings, and to Stosh Hino, coach of the Frosh basketball team. Red Woods has been nitting the high spots of Reading's night life, they tell me. He also seems to be having his troubles keeping his local affair with one Dorothy Dautrich a secret at home . . . . Charley Barnard local affair with one Dorothy Dautrich a secret at home . . . . Charley Barnard and Charley Hinkle had a big night last Friday with Curley, the milkman, if rumors that reach my ears are to be believed . . . . Mouse Fittipaldi and Jean Boner seem to be getting serious about it if I don't read the signs incorrectly . . . . the same goes for Bill Moffett and Nancy Bertolet, although not to the same degree . . . Lots of people wanted to know who the two blonde blimps were at the game last week. Stosh Hino should be able to tell you, although he were at the game tast week. Stosh Huo should be able to tell you, although he probably won't . . . . Lovey Danford insists that Camden is not a mere resi-dence for undesirable Philadelphians. I, however, insist that it is. Otherwise how could you account for the fact that Johnny Muller and Al Oslislo doused him with weater... Bill Becker and Helen Fox seem to have developed an acute case... The scoffers would like to know if Charley Moravec got himself that publicity in the local papers the other day... I wonder (Pil bet you do, too) if Cecil Knox and Helen Teel really mean it?... Incidentally—what a name for such a bruiser—Cecil, tsk, tsk... Andy Lund, who reads Wild West stories by the gross, is said to follow the activities of Snuffy Smith with avid interest. There's a connection to joice the activities of Shayy Shills with avid interest. There's a connection there . . . . Both Adam Levengood and some Frosh, Musket by name, are trying hard as far as Ruth Yohn is concerned. She, however, so they say, is absolutely ice. Brr, brr . . . . That's all
