SGA amends constitution

At the beginning of each academic year, much of SGA's time is devoted to interviewing students and filling spots on SGA standing committees left vacant by seniors. But due to other situations which take priority over this (budgeting) and the chance for freshmen to get acquainted and involved, vacancies are not filled until the end of October. In the meantime, some committees do need a full membership for purposes of voting and decision-making. Due to this dilemma, the officers of SGA have passed a motion to amend Article 4, Section 5, Item 5 of the SGA constitution which now reads: "Each member shall be ineligible for appointment to any standing committee of the college, unless such SGA representative is required" to: "Each member shall be eligible for appointment to any standing committee of the college."

The time served by these appointed officers will only be until the vacant position is filled by a permanent member, if one is found.

Another amendment to the constitution would concern the opportunity for the SGA officers to appoint a recording secretary. This is essential during busy times such as budgeting and final's weeks. For this reason SGA has passed a motion to add an Article 4, Section 3, Item 7 which will read: "a recording secretary can be appointed."

These amendments, which have been proposed and passed by SGA, must be approved by a majority of voting students to be ratified. A booth will be set on a given date for the voting to take place.

WOOLSON LISTED CRITICAL

Douglas B. Woolson, 20, of Bridgewater, NJ., was severely injured Monday when he was struck by an automobile on North 13th Street just outside of the Albright Court Dormitory.

Reading city police said Woolson, a junior at Albright College, ran out from two parked cars and was hit by an oncoming auto.

Woolson was admitted to St. Joseph Hospital after suffering from a severe concussion, two broken legs, a broken arm and various internal injuries. No additional information was released until his parents were notified.

First on the scene was Albright security guard Jimmy Hines. Hines covered the victim with a blanket until the police arrived.

Police arrived minutes after the accident and dispersed a crowd of people that had gathered. No charges have been filed. Doug was reported in critical condition as of press time.

YOU CAN'T LOOK BACK

by Erin Foley and Maria Kirwan

A split second can alter the course of so many lives. A tragedy brings people together leaving them baffled asking the question why? and why not?

It's not the circumstances, but the horrible irrationality of the event that delivers such a tremendous impact. This impact will remain forever within the minds and hearts of those closest to Doug Woolson.

Everyday occurrences seem unimportant and meaningless when one is faced with the tragedy of such magnitude. One has an overwhelming desire to reenact the moment, thinking that it could have been avoided if only... But the cold truth is we are left realizing that fate is an overwhelming determiner of our lives.

Since we have no control over fate we are left clutching at secure lifestyle that is irretrievably destroyed.

One can't destroy the facts or reasons that don't make any sense and that defy our understanding. Rationality at times such as this, is fruitless. There are never any words to fully explain or to alleviate the painful feelings of those involved.

Life is a cruel test. It randomly sets the course and chooses its victims.

When tragedy falls upon us, it leaves us bruised and dazed, struggling to hold on to that erases the memory because there is nothing to say and no panacea.

A meaningless tragedy is hard to accept or even to understand.

One can never completely recover from this mishap, but the closest consolation is in the knowledge that there is compassion, love and support for all involved.

This concession is a slight comfort for the days ahead, but it is important and earnestly needed to forge ahead in our own fragile lives.

IS ANYBODY OUT THERE?

Every week, one of us on the editorial staff tries to come up with an intriguing editorial to present the paper's views on issues at Albright and around the world. This is usually a last minute activity, though, and the ideas don't come easily (hence, this "masterpiece"). There isn't a whole lot of controversy on campus, which is good as far as the pleasure of the place goes, but as far as writing editorials—it sucks. The World? Granted, we haven't written anything yet, but let's face it—a majority of you wouldn't know and, dare we say, wouldn't care what the hell we were writing about (unfortunately, some of our own wouldn't either). Apathy? No. Ignorance? Could be! We don't expect everyone to read the paper everyday; very few (too few) people do. Once in a while, we should all, at least, scan the headlines. Perhaps, then, you will be prepared to react to our opinions and write—LETTERS TO THE EDITOR!

We have gotten some letters, but they have been few and far between. We can not believe that nothing in this world is worthy of comment. The Albrightian is not only our forum, it's yours as well.

Because of fall break, we will not publish October 17 or 24. Two whole weeks to gripe about something, praise someone, or rattle some cages... on paper. We'd love to hear from you.

The Albrightian is published weekly by the students of Albright College except during vacation, holiday, and examination periods. This publication is printed by Windsor Press, Incorporated, Hamburg, Pennsylvania.

All submissions to the Albrightian become the property of the Albrightian and the Editors hold the copyright. All opinions expressed in the Albrightian reflect those of the author (columns, letters) or the editorial staff (editorials) or portions of the editorial staff (point-counterpoint) and not necessarily those of Albright College, its faculty, staff or administration.

The Editors of The Albrightian would like to inform its readers of the policies regarding the submission of material for publication.

Material for the Opinion page must be submitted by the Wednesday of the week before the issue desired, with the sole exclusion of Letters to the Editor. For example, something that will appear in the February 14, 1986 issue must be submitted by February 5, 1986. Letters to the Editor will be accepted until noon of the Tuesday before publication (February 11, 1986, following the above example).

There are three categories of material for the Opinion page:

- 1) Editorials are written by members of the editorial staff of The Albrightian and represent the majority opinion of the editorial staff. They do not necessarily represent the opinion of Albright College, its administration, faculty, or student body.
- 2) Columns are written by members of the general staff of The Albrightian (i.e., staff writers, photographers, etc.). They represent the opinion of the author(s) and not necessarily that of The Albrightian, Albright College, its administration, faculty, or student body.
- 3) Letters to the Editor are written by those who are not on the staff of The Albrightian. Opinions expressed in Letters to the Editor again represent the sole opinion of the author(s) and not that of The Albrightian, Albright College, its administration, faculty, or student body. Letters on any subject are welcome, although the Editors reserve the right to edit letters for clarity and decency. We also reserve the right to decide the fitness of any letter for publication. All letters must be signed and accompanied by a telephone number or a box number for verification purposes. The practice of withholding names is discouraged.

Material for the Campus Information page follows the same schedule as that for the Opinion page. Any campus organization is welcome to submit information for this page.

Any and all Editorials, Columns, Letters, general articles, photos, and any other material submitted to The Albrightian becomes the property of The Albrightian and the Editor-in-Chief (or Co-Editors-in-Chief) become(s) the copyright holder(s).

The Editors of The Albrightian hold regular office hours, which change on a semesterly basis. Check the window of the office or the Campus Center Desk for the current office hours schedule. We will be glad to discuss any problems during those hours.

Dr. Sholevar has composed a list of rights for parents when commenting on the lives of their children. He says parents have the right to see and observe. They have the right to be heard, and they have the right to further exploration and discussion of the issue.

Dr. Sholevar suggests this approach: "Say to your child, 'instead of getting mad at me or trying to shut me up, please listen to me courteously. I hope you will take what I am saying seriously, then draw your own conclusions.'" Actually, this seems like an excellent way to offer suggestions to anyone—man, woman or child.

Letters To The Editor

Dear Editor,

I realize that sometimes it seems that people take The Albrightian for granted. However, this year I've noticed a steady improvement in the appearance of the paper. The difference is easy to see and definitely a plus.

First of all, each edition seems to contain more and more art work. This makes it attractive as well as showing the creativity of the staff. Ads do not seem as boring and unimportant either. Students should take advantage of advertising space to alert the campus of upcoming events.

Features such as "Little Baggamusic", "Sports", "Opinion", and "Healthbeat" also add to the paper. They are not only well written but very informative.

Keep up the good work!
Monica DiNatale

When Children Grow Up...

intervention. "Nagging, lecturing or trying to take over just won't work. Even if you are right, by treating the grown-up man or woman as an adolescent ~~you~~, you're forcing him to reject your suggestions just to prove he is an adult. It's very destructive. The adult ~~child~~ is forced to fight back because the parent is taking away his authority."

On the other hand, a "hands off" attitude is also an ineffective policy. "After all, parents are in the best position to know when their children are in need of help. Holding back may deprive them of the most valuable guidance they can get."

According to Dr. Sholevar, "Your relationship with a grown-up child should be an adult-to-adult relationship. Offer your point of view with the understanding that he is an adult and must judge the accuracy of your advice. Then your child can accept it or reject it, and parents must accept that decision."

"Make sure you are coming from an equal or parallel position and you have the best chance of being heard," Dr. Sholevar advises. "And bend over backwards not to sound critical or authoritarian."

VOGUE - CREATIVE EXPRESSION

by Melody Honchar

One of the newest organizations recently recognized and continuously increasing in membership on the Albright campus is the fashion organization, Vogue.

According to vice-president, Tracy Clark, Vogue is "a chance for someone to express themselves - a chance for them to be creative."

Presently, with approximately twenty members, Vogue hopes to attract new students who possess what Christie Kelly describes as "that flair for fashion." Membership is not only limited to fashion merchandising and textile majors. Anyone who is interested in fashion is encouraged to join.

The main goal of Vogue is to assist other groups already established on campus. The members hope to make their creativity available to the Domino Players in arranging the stage for their plays, and intramural teams in designing sweatshirts or jerseys.

"We want people to come to us for help," says Tracy Clark. "We want a chance to assist groups with promotional and creative needs."

Other activities the group has planned are designing a window for the Homecoming window-painting contest, and a trip to New York to visit fashion industries.

Meetings are held bimonthly with Vouge's faculty advisor, Connie Heller-Horacek, head of the fashion merchandising

Clark stresses the importance of new, younger members to keep this group active and expanding. She says, "Hopefully, due to our organization, the awareness of the fashion department at Albright will increase even more."

DR. ALBRIGHT...

Dear Dr. Albright,

I've been swimming since I was four years old. I was wondering why Albright has no pool.

Gill

Dear Gill,

Keep wondering.

Dear Dr. Albright,

Help me! I'm being watched by the F.B.I. - I think! I don't feel safe. Everywhere I go I look over my shoulder. Often I see this guy with this phony smile pasted on his face. He has been trying to talk to me since the beginning of the year. I know he's watching me - the back of my neck crawls everytime I walk by him. What can I do? He's making me nuts! My suspicions were confirmed the other day when I found a note on my door signed, "Big Brother". And I thought that was only in a book!

Frantically,
Fred Freshman

Dear Fred,

You read too much. I hate to tell you this but the only thing you are a victim of is the B.A.S.E. Program. That's the BROTHER AND SISTER EXCHANGE, Fred! The guy with the smile who has been trying to talk to you is not the FBI, CIA, or Rambo. He's an upperclassman who has been assigned to be your Big Brother for the year. He's there to be your friend and help you out in any way he can.

Mellow out,
Doc

Dear Dr. Albright,

Judy & I studied straight through dinner. The dining hall is closed and we're starved. What can we do?

Signed,
Hungry

Dear Hungry,

If the two of you are in the mood to cook, you can walk down to Giant or Weis Supermarkets. If cooking was never your strong suit, you can go to the Sub (below the Campus Center), to Pizza Italia (14th & Union Sts.), or to Arner's Family Restaurant (a few blocks west on Exeter St.). In addition, you can phone Domino's (921-8117), Four Star (374-0822) or Pizza Italia (372-3905) for quick hot pizza delivery. Your other alternative is to skip dinner, but only if you feel up to it. Beware the Freshman Ten.

Dear Dr. Albright,

I am a senior applying to medical schools. The application process is driving me crazy! If I see one more form that needs filling out I will definitely, positively scream! The bands that perform and the parties that go on outside of my apartment don't help my headache either. What can I do to ease the pressure?

Desperately,
Schizo-senior

Dear Schiz,

Have a six of Stroh's and dance at Stopper's 'til the morning.

Keep cool,
Doc A.

Dear Dr. Albright,

It's really kind of humiliating to turn on WXAC and hear, "High atop Merner-Pfeiffer Hall of Science, the 219 watt power station, WXAC fm Reading", especially after hearing WMMR's "High atop the PSFS building, the 2900 watt flame-thrower, 93.3 WMMR, Phil-a-delphia!". I mean, be real. Who are we trying to kid? For the past three weeks we've had a total of ten watts. Boy - I'm impressed. If we're going to imitate WMMR, let's at least do a good job.

Sincerely,
D. J.

Dear D. J.,

I agree that if WXAC imitates WMMR it should at least do a good job. However, it is not trying to imitate WMMR. WXAC does a very fine job. Anyway, College Sports : Fraud, Drug Abuse, Payoffs?

Big-time college athletics is mired in scandal. Top high-school athletes are lured by recruiters with under-the-table payments. Players who can barely read or write are admitted to well-known colleges, then kept academically eligible just so they can compete in sports. Coaches, alumni and school boosters regularly band and break the rules, all in the name of victory.

The bottom line is cold, hard cash, reports the October Reader's Digest. Winning guarantees income. Football alone can generate up to $10 million a year in bowl games disbursed over $40 million.

Schools will often do almost anything to ensure success. The NCAA revealed this last year that the Texas Christian University boosters handed over cash payments of $49,025 to one student and $37,500 to another. In New Orleans, Tulane University abolished its varsity basketball team following disclosure that players were paid to take part in a point-shaving scheme.

As if all this were not enough, the specter of drugs hangs over American athletic programs. At Clemson University, in South Carolina, three former coaches pleaded guilty to illegally dispensing steroids and phenylbutazone an anti-inflammatory agent. At the University of Maryland, Len Bias, No. 1 draft choice of the Boston Celtics, died in June of cocaine intoxication.

Hurt most by schools looking the other way are the student athletes themselves. Bias's death was followed by the revelation that he had not passed a single academic course last spring. In 1982, basketball player Kevin Ross confirmed the shocking story that he had played four seasons for Creighton University even though his reading and writing ability was no better than grade-school level. Only a minute fraction of these student athletes ever become professional athletes. Once their college eligibility is used up, most are left to fend for themselves as best they can.

Without a doubt, reform in college sports is sorely needed, and the NCAA is making a start. This year the NCAA began phasing in a significant rule change affecting academic eligibility for athletes. Known as Proposition 48, the measure is scheduled to be fully implemented by 1988. At that time, for athletes to be eligible, they must have achieved a 2.0 (C) high-school grade-point average a core curriculum of 11 academic subjects, as well as a minimum combined score of 700 out of 1600 in the SAT, or a composite score of 15 out of 35 in the ACT Assessment Program. The NCAA has also approved drug testing at football-bowl games and at selected NCAA championship events.

have you ever tried to fit "Reading" into the end of WMMR's slogan? I can hear it now. "The 219 watt flame-thrower, 91.3 WXAC, R...R... Reading".

Sincerely,
Dr. Albright

Dear Dr. Albright,

I think that it's really a shame that there are so few black students on this campus and the rest of us are still so white that we can't tell them apart! I'm referring to the picture on the front page of the Albrightian about three weeks ago, in which one student's name was given under the picture of another student.

Sincerely,
S. L. B.

Dear S. L. B.,

I agree that the mix-up was an unfortunate mistake. However, after having spoken to the editor involved, I am able to see that the mistake was not based on any type of prejudice. The editor simply did not know the name of the girl in the picture. Because we do have so few black students on campus, the choice was narrowed down to two people. After having checked the freshman "mug book", this editor didn't think that the student in the picture matched her pic in the book. So, without looking up the picture of the other student, the editor put the name of the second student under the picture. An honest mistake.

Sincerely,
Dr. Albright

Changing Your Body's Internal Schedule

Benjamin Franklin, early to bed and early to rise, was a lark. Paul Revere, of midnight ride fame, was an owl, if only for one night. While most people are larks, there is some hope for owls who wish to reset their internal biological clocks, according to Karl Doghramji, M.D., assistant professor of psychiatry and human behavior at Jefferson Medical College and Director of the Sleep Disorders Center at Thomas Jefferson University Hospital.

When someone falls asleep or awakens is determined by that person's circadian rhythm, a 24-to-25-hour cycle of hormonal and temperature changes controlled by a chemical-releasing pacemaker found behind the optic nerve in the brain. A separate biological clock governs dream sleep.

"No one really knows what causes a person to be an early or late riser," says Dr. Doghramji. "It's widely believed that family training and background have an effect, as does a person's lifestyle. Waiters or actors with a more demanding night schedule, for example, have trained themselves to stay up later."

Given a non-alarm clock situation, the majority of people will fall asleep between 9 and 11 p.m. and rise between 7 and 9 a.m. Owls may have problems adjusting to this early morning regimen.

"Late risers tend to be less productive in the morning hours," said Dr. Doghramji. "But they can be helped by not sleeping late on the weekends. To improve daytime alertness, it's important to keep earlier bedtimes and to maintain the same wake up time every day. However, when you go to bed doesn't count as much as when you get up in the morning."

The quality of sleep is also important. Stimulants such as caffeine or amphetamines delay the sleep-wake cycle. Caffeine, for example, is absorbed very slowly by the body, and may be present at night when a person is ready to fall asleep. The effects are cumulative, and may show up weeks or even months later as grogginess or sleepiness during the day.

"Caffeine alters the sleep pattern so that a person is not getting as efficient a sleep," said Dr. Doghramji. "I would recommend no more than one to two cups of any caffeinated beverage before noon."

How can you tell if you're a lark or an owl? The best method is to chart your temperature every half hour for a period of 24 hours. The body temperature dips slightly when you're sleeping or supposed to be sleeping. That is why, if you have ever stayed up all night, you may recall feeling slightly chilled.

Owls tend to have a delayed sleep clock. However, if you consistently go to sleep and wake up three to four hours later than everyone else, you may have a more serious condition known as physiological delayed sleep phase syndrome. "This is a condition that will not be amenable to changes such as getting up early on the weekend; it may need special treatment. But for the average person, who's an owl type because of poor sleep hygiene, a readjustment of the weekend sleep cycle should be sufficient to get you back on a normal, daytime schedule," said Dr. Doghramji.

Dr. Doghramji suggests these simple, self-help measures for owls who wish to increase their time efficiency:

1. Maintain a regular bedtime.
2. Limit caffeine intake; avoid caffeine after noon.
3. Avoid alcoholic beverages in the afternoon and evening.
4. Abstain from stimulant drugs.
5. Keep your bedroom surroundings as quiet as possible.
6. Get out of bed at the same time every morning, no matter what time you went to sleep.

"If these steps are followed, owls should soon be feeling more alert during those crucial early morning hours," said Dr. Doghramji.

Dealing With Grown-Up Children: What's A Parent To Do?

With a young child, parents are expected to participate actively in a child's decision making by setting down rules, offering advice and stepping in when things go wrong. Later, as the child becomes an adult, however, parents are often confused as to what their role should be when they see their grown-up offspring making poor choices.

Should parents interfere when they see their adult children "messing up" their lives? This is a very common question, according to G. Pirooz Sholevar, M.D., clinical professor of psychiatry and human behavior at Jefferson Medical College of Thomas Jefferson University. He outlines three difficulties which frequently frustrate parents of grown-up children.

"First, there's the young man or woman whose life does not seem to be going anywhere," says Dr. Sholevar. For example, Andrew's parents have sent him to a prestigious school for a desirable degree, but he cannot get or hold a job. He is not dating, not participating in sports, not going for further education. "His parents feel they didn't spend their money for this, but they don't know how to express their feelings without starting a family war," Dr. Sholevar notes.

Problems can also arise when parents feel their grown-up child is making the wrong marital decision or is not handling the marriage properly. Thirdly, things can really come to a head when parents become grandparents and believe their own child is mishandling the lives of the grandchildren. "The grandparents often feel their child is either too permissive or too strict as a parent. Sometimes they feel the grandchildren are neglected, but they will also worry if they see their own daughter caring too much for the grandchildren and not caring enough about herself or her marriage," he explains.

So what's a parent to do? Dr. Sholevar advises against direct

College Students get more Credit

This year, 83 percent of all college students have joined the 90 million credit card holders in the United States. To educate consumers on how to select and use these cards, the United States

Office of Consumer Affairs and the American Institute of Certified Public Accountants (AICPA) have published a new brochure, "Choosing a Credit Card. These 25 Tips May Save

You Money."

The brochure suggests that consumers look for hidden credit card costs and shop for the best finance charge before acquiring credit cards.

Credit card fraud may reach $1.13 billion by 1990. To avoid credit card fraud, keep a running list of credit card numbers and issuer's phone numbers in case of loss or theft.

Before acquiring a credit card, be aware of finance charges that will be imposed if the balance is not paid in full. Students may not be aware that it is illegal to send an unsolicited credit card in the mail. If a student receives a card and doesn't want to use it, the card should be destroyed.

These and many other useful tips, plus a glossary of credit card terms, are included in the brochure.

Any student wishing a free copy of this useful brochure may write to: "Choosing a Credit Card," Consumer Information Center, Pueblo, CO 81009.

The AICPA is the national professional organization of CPAs with more than 240,000 members.

Pretzel Bowl and Homecoming Events

by Barb Sonsa

There will be a Pep Rally at the Apartments to honor the Varsity football players and cheerleaders. A bonfire and pig roast are planned; plus, there will be a special surprise!

The Pep Rally is sponsored by the Lion Diplomats. Free food and drinks will be available. Come out to the Pep Rally at 8 P.M. Friday night and help the team get psyched for the Pretzel Bowl!

Another event that is coming up soon is Homecoming, which is also sponsored by the Lion Diplomats. Points for Spirit Semester will be awarded for floats and window paintings, so make sure your dorm gets involved. There are many other activities planned for Homecoming as well, so come join the fun on October 25th.

Scholarship Drive Goals Set

Grace Black, Maryann Kelly, and Jamie Kane have been selected as chairpersons for the Class of 1987 Scholarship Fund.

Tom Chaves, Annual Fund Director, recently announced the assembly of the class of 1987 Scholarship Fund Team Organization. Senior Campaign Coordinator is Maryann Kelly, who will be assisted by Chairpersons Grace Black and Jamie Kane. Both chairpersons will recruit five team captains who will, in turn, each recruit five team members. Each team member will seek five-year pledges from classmates to obtain the fund goal of $30,000.

For the past seven years, the senior class has given a gift toward a student scholarship as a way of showing their appreciation to the College before leaving the campus. The scholarship fund is given to students who are sophomores, juniors, or seniors who require exceptional scholarship considerations and are actively involved in more than one leadership position in campus student organizations.

During the first five years, Albright College will award a scholarship grant in honor of the class of 1987. After those five years, contributions to Albright will automatically go to the Annual Fund which is used for financial aid for Albright students in years to come.

The Team Organization encourages all seniors to make a contribution to the Class of 1987 Scholarship Fund. They suggest an amount of $250 to be pledged by each classmate over the next five years ($50 per year) in order to achieve their goal of $30,000.

Is Liberty Worth Writing For?

THE FIRST AMENDMENT

CONGRESS shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or abridging the Freedom of Speech, or of the press; or the right of the people peaceably to assemble, and to petition the government for a redress of grievances.

Our Founders Thought So.
And We Think So Too.

Announcing the first annual Philip Morris Magazine Essay Competition:

The First Amendment, those few carefully crafted phrases appended to the Constitution of the United States, placed religion outside of government, assured uncensored speech, and protected peaceable assembly.

It guarded us from those who would impose their religious convictions; those who would muzzle town meetings; and those whose admiration for free speech ends where their prejudices begin.

The First Amendment has been a preoccupation of writers and scholars, journalists and politicians for the last 200 years. It has also drawn the grateful attention of business leaders because it promised that the flow of information about legally sold goods and services would not be infringed upon by government.

The men and women of Philip Morris believe in the principles set forth in the First Amendment and rise to defend its long-standing application to American business. We believe that a tobacco advertising ban, currently under consideration in Congress, is a clear infringement of free expression in a free market economy.

Philip Morris U.S.A.

The Philip Morris Magazine Essay Competition:

Submissions

To write an essay of 2500 words or less that explores and questions censorship of expression, in any sector of American life; that defines and defends the First Amendment's application to American business; and that specifically questions the ramifications of a tobacco advertising ban on the future of free expression in a free market economy.

All entries should be submitted to Philip Morris Magazine, 120 Park Avenue, New York, NY 10017 by January 1, 1987. Essays must be typed on plain 8 1/2 x 11 paper.

Awards

The essays will be judged by an independent panel of distinguished writers, editors and journalists.

The decisions of the judges will be final and cash prizes will be awarded as follows:

FIRST PRIZE $15,000.00

SECOND PRIZE $ 7,500.00

THIRD PRIZE $ 5,000.00

FOURTH PRIZE . . . $ 2,500.00

AND FIFTY STATE PRIZES
OF $1,000.00 EACH

Rules

Eligibility: Entrants must be 21 years of age or older and residents of the United States or its possessions and territories. Entries become the exclusive property of Philip Morris Magazine which shall have the right to edit and publish any or all parts thereof. As a condition of entry, all prize winners understand that they will be required to complete and sign affidavits of eligibility and release entitling Philip Morris Magazine to use their names and/or likeness or essay in publicity regarding the contest. Prizes will be forfeited if winners are unwilling to execute said documents. The competition is not open to employees or their immediate families, or Philip Morris Companies Inc., Philip Morris Magazine or any of their advertising agencies or affiliates. All applicable taxes on prizes awarded are the sole responsibility of the winners. Prizes not claimed for any reason within 30 days of Philip Morris Magazine. No transfer of prizes will be permitted. A list of names and cities of residence of the winners will be made available and may be obtained by sending a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Philip Morris Magazine. The competition is void wherever prohibited or restricted by law, license required or subject to tax (other than tax on the prize awarded).

LITTLE BAGGAMUSIC

UB40-Rat in the Kitchen

England's reggae kings return with a new batch of Caribbean crossovers. Rat in the Kitchen, following the success of UB40's 'I Got You Babe' remake with Chrissie Hynde, allows the band the luxury of appealing to a non-reggae oriented audience for the first time in their existence. Expanding upon their reggae roots, UB40 addresses their new-found fans with swaying tunes and infectious pop hooks. Sure, the band still laments about being on the dole (for which they first dubbed themselves UB40), global starvation, injustice against humanity, and the evil that men do. These concerns will always be in bounds to UB40. There are some things that just must be, and deservedly so. Creating an awareness of deprivation through music certainly qualifies.

Rat in the Kitchen boasts mostly of playful frolics and UB40's brand of humor. Song contents include everything from pesky rodents ('Rat in the Kitchen') to laziness ('All I Want to Do'). The former is actually a play on words; the rat being a traitor amongst a group of intimate friends.

UB40 has a knack for overcrowding words into a chorus and still coming out on top. Try catching to 'I've got to be blatant in this time/Just like I know I+1 no make 9' without the lyric sheet. Yet band members Ali Campbell and Astro work this awkward verbalism into a contagious rhyme and central chorus to 'Tell It Like It Is.'

Although Rat in the Kitchen is filled with humor, UB40 is on the level when assessing the band's approach to life ('My life is like a joke but to me it isn't funny'), their aspirations ('I want to be a millionaire'), and their fears ('I'm scared to death of poverty/I only want what's best for me.')

Pop hooks aside, it is the abundance of horns on Kitchen that make it so infectious. Trumpets, saxophones, and trombones fill the air with breezy notes and beachside brass. Even trumpet great Herb Alpert is in for a guest shot on the title track, a lengthy pop hook highlighted by the horns. Another tune with both hook and horn appeal worth mentioning is 'Tell It Like It Is.'

Traditional UB40 anthems resound with intent on Kitchen. 'Watchdogs' keeps the faith alive, as well as the standout 'Sing Our Own Song.'

Rat in the Kitchen should prove both light enough to please new followers and traditional enough to satisfy reggae enthusiasts. UB40 succeeds in broadening their range without sacrificing their roots.

B-52s-Bouncing Off the Satellites

I'd like to say this is the B-52's most serious work to date, but with song titles like 'Theme For A Nude Beach,' 'Wig,' and 'Juicy Jungle,' my credibility wouldn't be worth Kate Pierson's beehive hairdo.

Seriously though, Atlanta's 'other band' experiments with romantic ballads and airy synth/dance numbers before giving way to their usual craziness. Laugh tracks and jokes are every bit a part of the B-52s as rhyme and reason. Perhaps pop music's cleverest band, the B-52s have pulled many rabbits out of the same hat for years before deciding to diversify. It has been well worth the wait.

The girls have stepped out from backing vocals to sharing lead duties with Fred Schneider. This move has resulted in two fine dance numbers, featuring airy vocals and light, bouncy synths. 'Summer of Love' and 'Girl From Ipanema Goes to Greenland' (despite the title) expand the band's instrumental range, formerly thought to be very limited.

Amongst all the new discoveries on Satellites, one shines brightest. Cindy Wilson's voice displays uncanny vocal ability for one who has not held the spotlight. Featured on the love ballad 'Ain't It A Shame,' her vocals sound more like Cyndi Lauper's than Lauper's do. The soft pop appeal of 'She Breaks For Rainbows' literally takes you aloft until Wilson lets you go, reluctantly.

Let's forget what the B-52s are all about, 'Housework' and 'Wig' call attention to the base and create fun extraordinaire. In the former, Kate Pierson's expectations of husbandly duties are revealed ('Don't need a man to treat me mean/I need man to help me clean'). Wig-talk from the later asks 'Do you know why/Freddie bought his hairpiece at the goods store?' Answer: 'Cause he didn't want toupee.' Laugh it up! This is fun stuff!

Classic B-52s fanatics will be appeased by 'Detour Thru Your Mind.' Finally something as weird as 'Rock Lobster.'

There is something for everyone on the new B-52s LP. The band has taken a giant leap forward into unfamiliar areas. Schneider summed it up best saying 'I need to leave my past behind/I need to leave my behind in the past.'

Last Week's Puzzle Answer

Intramural Football Action Continues

By Kevin Clark

Elroy Inc. has weathered all of its competition thus far and now owns sole possession of first place in the men's football league. Elroy rounded out their perfect week by beating co-leader A-Phi-O 18-0, and handing previous co-leader Sigma Phi Epsilon, their second loss of the week 29-0.

Round one of the Elroy vs A-Phi-O battle was a hard fought contest that truly was not reflected in the final score. Throughout most of the first half, A-Phi-O was able to move the ball up and down the field at will. Unfortunately, once they got the ball around the twenty yard line, Elroy's airtight defense suffocated any attempts to score on it. On the other hand, Elroy was unable to mount any kind of drive against the tough A-Phi-O six. It was not until the final two minutes of the first half that the defense set up the scoring opportunities for Elroy Inc. Gregg Wheatley and Paul Marrella intercepted errant passes deep in A-Phi-O territory, giving the offense its best field position of the game. On both possessions, Wheatley found receiver Keith Flannery alone in the endzone to give Elroy a 12-0 halftime lead. The second half was more of the same, and Elroy was able to strike only one more time, thus the 18-0 final score. Round two between these powerhouses should take place in the intramural championship game.

Elroy rolled right into Thursday's game with Sigma Phi and had no intention of letting down; rather they turned it up and put an even greater distance between the two teams. From the opening kickoff to the final whistle, Elroy was able to do just about anything in totally dominating their weaker opponent. The victory pushed Elroy's record to 5-0, while Sigma Phi was dropped to 3-2.

Elroy is now the clear favorite to win the whole thing and possibly go undefeated. With only a few games left, most people's money is on Elroy, but the season is not over yet and anything is possible. Remember, A-Phi-O is tough and still standing in Elroy's way of a much wanted title - it will be a game to watch!

Highlights...

- Elroy's scored 112 points while yielding only 6 in their 5 games
- A-Phi-O rebounded from their heartbreaking loss to Elroy by beating up on Sigma Phi 20-6.
- The Cogs took both of their contests and moved into a tie for third with Sigma Phi.

Teamwork Brings Success

by Kevin Clark

Manager Laurie Nebel accurately described the volleyball team's play this year. She cited togetherness and superb teamwork as the major reasons for their success to date and feels they are capable of winning like this for the rest of the season. The Lady Lions are as good as Laurie thinks and have shown this by winning 2 of their 3 matches last week.

After their thrilling come-from-behind win against Delaware Valley last Tuesday, Albright went right back to work, setting their sights on Thursday's tri-meet with FDU and Allentown. This hard work paid big dividends for Albright, as they defeated both opponents with little problem.

Excellent all-around play was the story in the Lady Lions 15-1 and 15-5 sweep of FDU. Their sharp play, along with the use of only three servers in the first game, established the tone for the rest of the match. In the second round, they ran into Allentown and unlike the first match, Albright was up against a team closer to them in caliber. Once again, the teams composure and poise wore down their opponent, thus the 3-1 final score in games.

The hopes of sweeping all three matches last week were erased when the Lady Lions were beaten by MAC rival Dickinson on Saturday. While their taller foes were able to win the big points, Albright was unable to put together any kind of regularity with their scoring. As a result, the visitors were able to take the best of 5 match 3-1. The loss dropped the team's overall record to 5-6, but looks are deceiving. While they are 1 game under the .500 mark, their record truly does not give the correct account of the way they have played thus far; they are a really good team folks.

WOMEN'S X-COUNTRY

In an impressive effort, the women's cross country team lost to Haverford/Bryn Mawr Saturday at Haverford, 21-36. However, the score says little concerning the personal stats of the meet. Every Albright runner had her best time of the season for 3.1 miles.

Freshman Nan Berwind finished first again for Albright, third overall, with a time of 19:51, 47 seconds off her best time at the Lehigh meet. Sophomore Meg Shenk came in second for Albright, fourth overall, 1:09 faster than her previous best. Senior Amy Gehris ran for her highest placing this season, third on the team, over a minute faster than her time last meet, which was almost a minute faster than

by Melody Honchar

Albright's field hockey team experienced their first victory of a Middle Atlantic Conference Southeast League game at home against Widener University on Saturday, October 4.

The final score was 2-1, with co-captains Liz Davis and Donna Krause each scoring a goal. Liz Davis also had one assist.

Goalkeeper Nadra Nabulski, blocked seven crucial shots attempted by various Widener players.

As sophomore, Darice Anderson speculated, "Everyone was really pumped up after we lost our first three games. We worked hard because we wanted to win."

The team also played against Franklin and Marshall on Monday, October 6. F & M won by a single fluke goal which was deflected off the stick of an Albright player. Anderson commented, "It was the best game we played all season as a team. Everyone worked together as a group, instead of as individuals."

With a 1-5 record, coach Sally Miller has a hopeful outlook toward the rest of the season. She said, "Every game we've played we have been competitive in. We just need to get a little more scoring, otherwise it's really stressful on the defense."

The team members will continue their efforts this Saturday at home with Elizabethtown, and Monday at the University of Scranton.

the prior meet. Junior Eileen Finer, in a strong sprint, ran an impressive 56 seconds faster than her best time. Following close was Senior Betsy Roland, dropping 1:31 off her best time from the Lehigh meet. Senior Wendy Wilbur was only 10 seconds behind Roland and ran a personal best, knocking 52 seconds off her time.

Senior Kathy O'Neill was only one second behind Wendy, dropping her time 12 seconds. Sophomore, Tracy Walz, in a week sprint to the finish, dropped 33 seconds.

Coach Tom Bowersox explains, "The competition in this league has improved. Our record, 1-3, does not show just how good this team really is. This is the best team we've had and every performance is better than the week before. Everybody this week had a season personal best." Co-Captains Gehris and O'Neill sum it up: Spirit is definitely high!"
