3 Faiths Bared By Religious Leaders In Open Forum

Jew, Protestant,
Catholic Discuss Means
To Eliminate Prejudice

The Catholic, the Protestant, and the Jew met on the same stage in chapel Tuesday morning and discussed interdenominational problems with a great amount of frankness.

Characterized by such pointed questions from a Jew to the Catholic as, "Did the Pope tell you to vote for Al Smith in 1928?" the open forum discussion held the attention of a chapel jammed not only by students who had to be there, but by others as well.

Incidentally, the Catholic representative, Daniel McKenna, city clerk in Reading, told Rabbi Louis Wolsey, Philadelphia, that the Pope did not tell him to vote for Al Smith, or for any other president.

Tells Religious History

Herbert S. Seaman, New York City, field secretary for the National Conference of Jews and Christians, was the Protestant representative.

First to speak in the discussion, Seaman related the history of American religious freedom and then said the different religious groups must learn to understand each other. Conversion from one faith to another should not be their aim, he said. However, an individual in a democratic country can use his right to change beliefs if he so desires.

When McKenna asked Seaman how he accounted for the phenomena of prejudice of Protestants against other faiths, Seaman said it probably started when a predominantly Protestant America had its status threatened by an influx of Irish Catholics and French Canadians. Seaman said he had no sympathy for religious leaders who allow that prejudice propaganda to spread.

Business Students See Buckwalter's Movies

Professor Shows Shots
From All Parts Of World

Taking his audience on a hurried trip from Russia's Red Square in Moscow to the Carlsbad Caverns in New Mexico with many stops en route, Professor Henry G. Buckwalter presented an illustrated lecture, "Color Highlights of the World," during a meeting of the reorganized business club in the college dining hall Wednesday night.

Professor Buckwalter's color "shots" included camera experiences in Europe, Canada, Bermuda, and the United States. His 1,600 feet of film concluded with almost a thousand feet of pictures taken in this country.

Students To See Union In Session Tomorrow

Albright College students will get a chance to attend a meeting of the Oakbrook Unit, Branch 10, American Federation of Hosiery Workers, at 9:30 o'clock tomorrow morning in the social rooms at 120 Mulberry street.

The affair was planned by the college "Y" social action committee in conjunction with city Y. W. C. A.

Most Frosh Negative In Tuberculin Tests

Only 35 Per Cent Show Positive Reaction

Financed by funds raised through the annual sale of Christmas Seals, tuberculin tests which were administered to the freshman class at Albright College in September showed 35 per cent of the class reacting "positively" to the test, the Reading Tuberculosis Association announced this week.

Of the 133 freshmen tested, according to Dr. John H. Bisbing, medical director of the Berks County Tuberculosis Sanatorium, general chairman of the Christmas Seal sale, 46 students reacted "positively" and 87 "negatively." The positive reactions among men students was 4 per cent higher than among women students, Dr. Bisbing said.

The seal sale chairman explained that a positive reaction does not necessarily mean that a student, or anyone thus tested, has an active form of tuberculosis.

"It means only," Dr. Bisbing said, "that such 'positive' reactors have in their bodies the tubercle bacillus. It may or may not be active. There may or may not have been any damage done. To discover this, X-ray examinations must be given. Such follow-up work is now under way."

CHRISTMAS SEALS

Help to Protect Your Home from Tuberculosis

The tuberculin testing program at Albright College, under which freshmen are tested when they matriculate and seniors when they are about to be graduated, has been conducted for a number of years, with college authorities and the Reading Tuberculosis Association cooperating. Dr. Clarence A. Horn is in charge of the program for the college.

A widespread program of tuberculin and X-ray testing is conducted by the Reading Tuberculosis Association in the public and private schools of Reading and Berks County. The program is financed by the annual sale of Christmas Seals. The current seal sale, which opened November 25, will continue until Christmas. The goal has been set at $21,500.

Student Council Asks Faculty To Approve List Of Powers

Awaits Verdict On Resolution Given To Teachers

A request for power to control specific social and academic aspects of the college's life, was drawn up by student council at this week's meeting and presented to the faculty for approval.

Incorporated in a resolution passed by the student organization, the request outlined the present relation of the faculty and students, expressed a desire for closer cooperation of the two groups, and then asked for the specific powers.

Among the most important items on the list were power to regulate the dining hall, freshman orientation, dances, special affairs, student elections, and granting charters to student organizations.

The resolution is an outgrowth of numerous discussions by the council members. In an attempt to secure some solid footing for its future progress, council made the request for an outline of its powers. The council constitution is rather vague as far as specifying powers is concerned.

Lists Powers Wanted

The principal part of the resolution in which are enumerated various functions over which council wants control, follows: "The power to regulate dining hall, general student conduct on campus, freshman handbook, freshman orientation program, work in the interest of student organizations . . . sponsor dances, parties, fellowships, dinners, and special occasions such as Dads' Day, and Mothers' Weekend . . . to sponsor a chapel program per month, Freshman Induction Ceremony, Founders' Day, ushering at school functions, book exchange, and granting of charters to clubs and organizations other than fraternities and sororities, elections, Who's Who.

Football Team Picks All-Opponents

Lebanon Valley Grabs
3 First Team Posts

Now that the football season's over and most of the bumps and bruises of competition on the gridiron have disappeared, Albright's pigskin toters gave some serious thought as to whom they considered the best enemy players.

Lebanon Valley's squad, trimmed by a narrow 3-0 score by the Lions, rated three positions on the first team. Franklin and Marshall dominated the second string performers.

The teams:

German Club To Stage Christmas Play, Dec. 15

The German Club will present its annual Weihnachtsspiel in the college chapel at 5 o'clock Sunday afternoon, December 15. The production is directed by Dr. Gerritt Memming.

Bobby Protects Home Ec Girls

By Margaret Hollenbach

Don't look now, but there's a man in the home economics practice house. The newest arrival on campus is really the head of the house, too. Every morning at six-thirty he awakens and howls for his breakfast. His nurse, who is Edna Bialek this week, hustles to get his bottle. At eight-thirty, the young king demands orange juice, then his bath. By ten-thirty, he is hungry again. This time he eats Cream of Wheat (and we don't envy him). Another bottle at two-thirty, followed by an hour or two of freezing on the porch of Sherman Cottage round out the afternoon. At six-thirty, after a hard day's work, Bobby has another bottle and goes to bed. He wakes up again, though, for a midnight snack at ten-thirty.

Bobby spends his day trying to roll over (one of these days he's going to make it, too). Literally, every time he opens his mouth he puts his foot into it. His favorite trick is eating his toes. One would think that five meals a day would be enough for a young man! Except for the meat he gets from his toes, he gets no solid food. He's getting cereal now, and he'll soon graduate to strained vegetables. The nurses have been looking eagerly for a tooth. Someone thought land was sighted last week, but it was only a false alarm (not a false tooth).

Bobby is the fourth baby the home economics department has imported for the practice house. On December tenth, he will have reached the ripe old age of six months. The day before Christmas, vacation, he will return home and the home ec house will be without a man again.

Editorial

The annual sale of Christmas Seals to raise funds to finance a year-round, nation-wide fight against tuberculosis is now under way and students at Albright College can find no better way of doing their share in the public health movement than by supporting the sale—by buying Christmas Seals to decorate their Christmas mail and gift packages.

There is an especially valid reason why Albright students should support the sale, buy seals. The reason can be found in the free tuberculin testing program which the Reading Tuberculosis Association has conducted among freshmen and seniors at Albright for a number of years.

The testing is designed to discover active cases of tuberculosis, help cure those who have it, and prevent the spread of the disease to healthy students. Accordingly, each cent an Albrightian spends for Christmas Seals means an investment in the health of his own college community.

Christmas Seals really do save lives. Albright College students have an especial reason for supporting the Christmas Seal sale.

BOOKS AND BETTERS

By ROBERT L. WORK

Occasionally this column reverts to the purpose for which it was begun and dishes up something that may be taken as a suggestion for reading. The last list of titles herewith submitted evoked an editorial cognizance of the fact that a play in the final stages of rehearsal had had some blighting influence upon a wordy pen and that it WOULD have to be during a dearth of copy. Now another play is about to hit the boards but there is a better reason than that for this week's matter.

Recently, in connection with the celebration of BOOK WEEK, the National Council of Women of the United States circulated a poster with this heading: "Books are weapons for democracy." This bulletin lists twenty books that were burned by Nazi Germany for supporting democracy as well as twenty other books that are building American democracy for us today.

Hitler has, perhaps, given the greatest impetus to the reading of good books that the world has seen since the first interdictions of the INDEX EXPURGATORIUS. He kindled a very famous bonfire

GEORGE'S GOOFY AB

Daffynitions from a New-found Diction-airly

During the Bore War, I was stationed at a railroad depot in southern Africa. It was my duty, as General Disorder, to burn all waste paper brought in by the natives for five cents per three thousand pounds. One day as I looked through the literary mountain of rubbish (in search of a recipe for making tissue bath tubs for African elephants), my gaze fell open a little brown volume that attracted me because of its similarity to a chaw of tobacco. Upon further investigation, cependant, I found it to be an ancient word-book of the Kokomokomoko Tribe which inhabited this section of the continent.

Me and my baggage left Africa a year later (in that order), and among other things, I brought back with me that ancient dictionary of the Kokomokomokos.

From this invaluable masterpiece, I have taken a few excerpts:
alone—when you give someone a quarter.
blow—opposite of above.
country — going against someone, i.e., being country.
creek—a course taught by Dr. Gingrich.
day-bell—a piece of furniture with four legs.
eyes—frozen water.
friars—conflagrations (pour on water).
grudge—a building to keep cars in.

gun—contraction of "Go on."
mummy—the wife of poppy.
nose — current happenings (in the nose today).
notice—a sign a housewife puts in window when she needs no frozen water.
path—to wash oneself.
place — dramatic presentations.
praps—maybe.
singc—something easy: "it's a singc."
shudder—window protector.
"Close the . . ."
stink—what a bee does to you.
tense — cany structures that Boy Scouts sleep in.
the five senses—a nickel.
traffic—something colossal.
"It's tencle."
twoc—a means of transportation: cars drawn by an oxine—on twacks.
white—opposite of narrow.

These are but a few examples of the wonderful material in this aged book. This rare material will stand in the dusty ages of literature as a monument of irrelevancy to the great Tribe of the Kokomokomoko (who incidentally are closely related to the Okokomokomok Tribe of Tibet).

And now, dear reader, if you'll pardon me — I'll return to my padded cell. Hello!

- Marie Antoinette, by Stefan Zweig.
- Confessions, by Jean Jacques Rousseau.
- The Revolt of Modern Youth, by Benjamin Barr Lindsey.

This may be a bit out of our line, but we have been asked to make a comment upon that surprise "holiday" that was so generously and surely in all sincerity thrust upon us poor unsuspecting "suckers" last Friday. A real holiday is truly usually welcomed by students, however, they don't like the idea of not being informed about it until the day is practically gone and useless. We wish here to point out just a few small facts which you may not have known. 1—At least 30 students were unaware of the "holiday" until so informed upon their arrival on the campus. 2—Over 200 miles and approximately ten dollars were used in vain. 3—One professor, who should have been in bed, came to school unaware of the schedule change. 4—Many boarding students could have gone home on Thursday evening. Please do not misunderstand us, we appreciated the efforts of the faculty, but we would like to be informed of the facts in due time.

On Tuesday evening, December 3, the Alchemist club was entertained by Mr. Albert Reid, chief chemist at Bowers Batteries, Inc. Mr. Reid presented films on the operation of the Bowers plant and the manufacture of batteries. The Bowers plant produces 3000 batteries per day during the busy season. The plant was started in Fleetwood in 1922 by Mr. C. P. Bowers and has grown into the fine plant now situated in Reading. Mr. Reid explained the operations of the blast furnace, casting of the grids, pasting, drying, insulating, assembling, and boosting the batteries. The Bowers plants ship batteries in 28 states.

Do you know that "Pocahontas" Dunkelberger was on the warpath with a bow and arrow on Tuesday morning, gunning for a certain professor? Looks like a good feud, eh what? The professor, not to be outdone, retaliated with a volley of ping pong balls. His aim, however, was poor and he missed the adversary—oh gee!

The Skull and Bones society will be entertained on Monday evening, December 9, by a representative of the Philadelphia School of Osteopathy. All members are urgently asked to attend as the talk will be quite interesting for all biology students.

Doctor Graham Cook wishes to announce that he has started to build his new home on Bern St.

Here's hoping dep't: Air conditioning for the H<sub>2</sub>S room or a "warm-up" room for the frozen patrons.

First Home Game Tomorrow

That Seton Hall will be one of Albright's best basketball opponents this season was illustrated last Monday night when the New Jersey school walloped our tomorrow night's opposition, West Chester, by the score of 42-19. The Lions, you know, play Seton Hall next Wednesday, away, and then Villanova, who also won their first game, 38-30, on next Saturday night at Northwest.

Tomorrow night's game with West Chester Teachers will be our first look at the new edition turned out by Coach Neal O. Harris. The starting quintet, composed of four sophomores and one senior, fear only overrating as they make their home debut. The youngsters hope to avenge two setbacks suffered by Albright last season at the hands of the Teachers. On December 18, last year, the score was 56-42 and on January 20, it was 41-27, both rather humiliating defeats.

Albright should have an upswing in basketball attendance this season. In fact, we predict the fans at the game tomorrow will outnumber the largest crowd last year which was 825 for the Franklin and Marshall contest. Why, you say? Because the varsity is now composed chiefly of local talent which will attract the Reading fans who thrive on the wide open game. And, the admission is very low, only 30 cents, including tax, for adults, and 10 cents for children. This puts the admission fee within the reach of every Reading basketball fan. In fact, our prices are even lower than Reading High's. So look for a large turnout, comes tomorrow night.

Speaking of prices for athletic contests, we want to express our dissatisfaction with the admission price setup for football. We heard many a Reading fan take the school over the coals because it jacked up the prices when the good teams played. And these same fans told us they didn't attend those games because the prices were prohibitive. We still say, as we did last year, a partial solution to the whole football problem lies in the reduction of prices. If we can do it in basketball, we can do it in football just as well. There's no doubt that the football problem is fast reaching a crucial point and something must be done if the sport is to be continued, as we believe it should be.

Kutztown and Bucknell, the first and last teams to be played this season, will hold the same spots on Albright's grid schedule next season, according to the 1941 line-ups as announced this week by the both schools. Albright's complete football setup has not yet been announced by Coach Bill Dietz.

Well-Oiled Lion Quintet To Meet West Chester In Northwest Palestra

With win number one in their hip pockets, wrapped in pieces of flesh clawed from Wilson Teachers of Washington, D. C., on Wednesday night, Albright's flashy Lions spent all day yesterday sharpening their claws for what appears to be a fight to the finish with West Chester State Teachers tomorrow night on the Northwest Junior High court.

Living up to expectations, the boys really went to town Wednesday night, not only beating the pedagogues from the nation's capital, but administering a sound thrashing, 73-47.

Siege guns of the onslaught were Bob Rhoads and Dick Shollenberger, former Regar's Sweet Shop aces, former Reading High Stars, former National Y.M.C.A. champs, who between them accounted for 42 of the Red and White markers. Raymer Kent, Birdsboro flash, came through for 11.

Whipping the ball around on hell-bent-for-election-style, the sophomore combination of Shollenberger, Rhoads, Hopkins, and Kane, assisted by McKinney, and later by Kent, put on an exhibition of scoring in the last half that left the teachers hunting for the nearest oxygen tank.

During the first period, the Lions had nothing to brag about, leading by only one point, 16-15, when the whistle blew. They left the floor at half with a 33-27 margin. The third canto ended with the Harrismen on the long end of a 51-41 score. And the finale read: 73-47.

After see-sawing back and forth in the first two periods, the Lions opened the steam valves in the third chapter with Shollenberger, Rhoads, and McKinney doing most of the work.

The final episode was an exhibition of dipperoo ball handling if there ever was one. Sam Sehl grabbed two buckets and a charity conversion. Shollenberger monopolized the basket long enough to chuck four one-handed tosses through. And Kane, Red Sheffer, Rhoads, and McKinney held the fort until the customers started to go home for the night.

Court Loop Stumbles In Opener Attempt

Advance Initial Tilts To Wednesday Night

The inter-fraternity basketball league opened with a bang on Wednesday night. The bang, ladies and gentlemen, occurred when the initial night's schedule collapsed. The games were played, but not for the records.

The reason? First of all the teams didn't have enough time to get organized. Second, the age-old problem of getting dependable referees popped to the fore again. And third, many of the fraternity men cavorting Wednesday night weren't sure of their status with relation to the college varsity.

The bang was an agreed-upon bang. All teams recognized the facts, decided to play for the fun of it. They're going to make another attempt at opening the season next Wednesday night. Taking no chances on living through another bang, vendors will be on hand with a supply of cotton (for the ears, you dope!)

Here's the schedule:

6:45—Frosh Dorm vs. Pi Taus.

7:45—Kappas vs. Zetas.

8:45—A. P. O. vs. Day Students.

Fight Social Evils

Answering a question asking how various religions can get together, Rabbi Wolsey suggested a federation of strength to fight poverty, disease, crime, and vice. McKenna said work can also be done in the field of philanthropy, vice, and crime. He pointed to the Catholic Legion of Decency and the success it has had in improving standards of motion pictures and stage productions.

The discussion then moved into the war zone. Rabbi Wolsey made the statement that "War is with us because religion has been on the decline while secular influences have been on the rise. This process must be reversed if we are to fight 'fight'."

Suggests "Cultural Pluralism"

When asked how faiths can be reconciled without compromising convictions, Seaman said a "cultural pluralism" is the answer. That allows all groups to make a full contribution to American life, he said.

The conference closed with a suggestion by Seaman that inter-denominational discussion groups be organized on campus.

Ray Swett copped individual scoring honors in the interfraternity touch-football league with seven touchdowns in six games played. A Theolog mainstay, Swett was on the team that placed in back of the champion Kappas.

Sam Sehl and Nick Schneider, razzle-dazzle pass grabbers of the crown-toting Kappa fraternity, were runners-up with five scores each.

The final standings of the league are listed above. Below are the leading scorers of the loop:

|                             | G.P. | T.D. | T.P. |

Look!

Documents on Display In Theology School

Dr. R. W. Albright of the School of Theology recently placed on exhibition in the school display case many items of historical interest. Included are old books, seals, missionary collections, and autographed papers.

Of special interest are the books of the Rev. Solomon Neitz (1821-1885), who was formerly a minister in Reading. He was one of the foremost theologians in the early Evangelical Church.

About 40 books, representing the works of Evangelical authors, are on display. Most of them are on church history. Shown also are doctrinal compendium which represent the dogma of the church.

Centrally displayed is the seal of the Evangelical Church which at present is rarely used and probably is unknown to many members of the church. The one on display is a copy made by Marvin Runner from an old imprint. An explanation of the seal is also given.

Dr. Albright said the exhibition will be there for several weeks.

Student Council

"That this power be granted until the school year ending May, 1943.

"That any additional powers desired by Student Council and not herein stated may be put into effect after approval of the administration and the faculty."

Awaiting a report from the faculty, council took no action on the proposed all-college dinner-dance. The possibility that non-college students would be allowed to attend both affairs was considered.

Council also discussed the purchase of keys for council members, hiring of buses to take students to athletic contests, and the disorganizations and discontent in the college band.

Frosh to Elect Officers

A motion to hold a meeting of the freshman class to elect officers was passed.

Two committees named by President Vincent Rusbock were: chapel, James Brice and George Henry, and unit plan, Mary Klein, Olen Boyer and Winfield Morgan.

The Thanksgiving vacation was extended one day and the Touchdown Jamboree was allowed to continue until midnight last Friday through the efforts of Student Council.

Special Travel Rates Offered To Students

Money-saving round-trip fares will be offered to college students between December 25, 1940, and January 16, 1941 for travel on railroads of the nation.

In order for either students or faculty members to take advantage of reduced costs for travel, they must buy the "College Special" tickets in their home town. For that reason, railroad officials have advised purchase of a one-way ticket to go home over the oncoming holidays, and then buy a college special ticket for the return trip. That ticket would still be good for another trip home, either at the Spring vacation, the Easter vacation, or at the end of school.

We wonder if going with A. Duke will make Thelma Rebert a Duchess at the Phi Beta Mu dance.

It wasn't a track meet. It was only Ethel Mae running the Ertels at the Zeta dance.
