

DOMINOES PRESENT WAR-TIME MASTERPIECE; PLAY RECEIVES WORTHY COMMENT OF ALL

Channing Pollock's Play "The Enemy" Makes History in Albright College Dramatic Circle; Presented in Northeast Junior High School Auditorium

SPLENDID ACTING BY CAST

Much Credit Is Due Miss Ruth C. Shaffer, Who Directed the Fine Production

Albright's dramatic society, The Domino Club, presented the drama "The Enemy" by Channing Pollock, on Thursday night in the Northeast Junior High School Auditorium. It was well received by a large and appreciative audience.

The play, which had a successful run on Broadway a few seasons ago, has an anti-war theme. It is a powerful and fascinating story of the "whirlwind of hate," war, with all its puzzled victims. Contestants on both sides are stirred up by trivial happenings which are exaggerated and belived in. Men do not know why they are fighting. The story is of a promising young playwright, Carl Behrend, who becomes one of the war's victims, sacrificed to the cause of hatred and relentless power. Pauli, his wife, struggling through sorrow and hardship with fine bravery, loses both husband and child. The real "enemy" as Carl describes it in his successful play is hate, not people. The purpose of the story is to show Prussia's side of the war and we see ourselves through their eyes. The last great cry of the play is "No

Colonial Serenaders Engaged;
Large Crowd Expected

The Senior Class has again taken it upon itself to sponsor one of its unusually fine dances. Their second dance of the year is to be held on Saturday, May 28, in the beautiful Berkshire Ballroom.

From the reports of the committee it has all the indications of being the best dance of the year. Although the price of admission is low ($1.75 per couple) the committee has spared no expense for the essentials necessary to make the dance a great success.

The music will be furnished by Harry John and his Colonial Serenaders. This band has just finished a tour of many of the prominent eastern colleges. Along with the Mills Brothers and the Casa Loma orchestra they supplied the music at the Princeton Junior-Senior Prom. Incidentally this is one of their last engagements before the band goes to that Mecca of musical centers—Roseland on Broadway.

The committee has worked hard to make this dance a success, not so much from the financial but from the social standpoint. So look over your wardrobe, dress is optional, and prepare yourself for a great time at the Senior Hop.

EXPRESSION OF SYMPATHY

The student body takes this means of extending its sincere sympathy to John R. DeMoss in his recent bereavement, the death of his father, Thomas DeMoss.

Prof. Evans succeeds Prof. George W. Taylor who will not meet the business classes regularly next year, but will be retained as a special lecturer at the college. Prof. H. G. Buckwalter will continue to conduct his classes in the business department.

Mrs. Currier Talks in Friday Chapel

Gives Interesting Lecture; "Art as Expression"

"Art as a Means of Expression" was the title of the illustrated lecture given by Mrs. Currier, in the Science Hall, Friday morning.

Every people from all times have expressed themselves through painting, design, the minor arts such as pottery, sculpture and architecture.

In Egypt various designs and works of art have been found and were traced back as far as 1500 B. C. This served as one of the means of tracing the history of Egypt throughout the ages.

So with Greece and Rome. The former known for her purity and beauty in the form of her vessels and dishes. The latter in whose works of art and sculpture which started with pure, simple beauty and becoming more worldly and confused, expressed

The installation of the newly elected officers took place in the Social Room of the Theological Building on Wednesday evening, May 11. School Annual To Make Its Debut on Monday, 23rd

Originality Stressed in the 1933
Cue: New Feature Introduced:
Secure Early an Copy

This year's CUE will make its debut Monday, May 23. It promises to be one of the most interesting Albright has yet seen. Editor-in-chief Rudolf Shook and his staff have endeavored to make it a sophisticated and original annual.

"We have tried to give the 1933 CUE an individual note, which is no mean task," Mr. Shook said yesterday. "The platitude that every year-book is different is for too common, and too generally believed. Anyone who pages through a number of them can see that they are not; they have, at best, much in common. We have tried, in the 1933 CUE, to avoid the banalities that too frequently waylay editors and to make our book as interesting, and as complete and logical in arrangement as possible."

Advance views seem to indicate that the staff's wish for originality has been realized.

The 1933 book stands in striking contrast with those of the past few years. Vibrant with color, and with a new worldliness and humor, it is a smart volume. Its divider-pages, especially created by a Reading artist, are

Gospel Team Ends Successful Year; List Year's Work

Team Assisted Pastors in Revival Services; Hornbeck Leads Club; Good Experience

The Albright College Gospel Team has closed a very successful season. Ten week-end trips were made to nine different churches, one church asking for a visit from the team a second time.

Perhaps an explanation of the purpose of the team would be in order. This is the close of the third year of activity since its reorganization. The team had been active several years ago but had gone thru a period of non-existence until September, 1929, when it was reorganized under the captaincy of Robert Hunsberger, '31, who served as its captain for two years. The captain this year was Harold Hornbeck, '32.

The Gospel team is organized for the purpose of assisting pastors, over week-ends, in their evangelistic activities, whenever it is invited to do so. It is an auxiliary of the Y. M. C. A. with the captain appointed by the President of the "Y". The team is composed in addition to the captain of men whom he may ask to accompany him on these trips. Eleven different men were used this year.

During this past year trips were made to the following churches, all of

The students reached the asylum at 3:00 o'clock and then made a tour of the buildings and grounds. Among interesting industries visited were the farm, the printing room and the weaving room.

REVERENCE

It has been said that reverence is the true mark of a gentleman and to complete our field we might add, lady. Scoffing attitudes, would-be sophistication, indifference to and disregard for religion, faiths practices, creeds and doctrines, and other similar reactions come under our general head of irreverence. We agree that any show of lack of reverence precludes the possibility of highest gentlemanly or lady-like conduct.

Conditions are present on our campus which make this thought applicable. First is the matter of grace in the dining room. The brief return of thanks requires about ten or fifteen seconds, yet how many students maintain a reverent attitude for this short pause? How often does some nit-wit indicate his irritation by sliding his chair, laughing, jingling silverware, etc. Visitors to our campus frequently notice and comment on this incident in the dining room. The clanging of the bell to let everyone know the prayer is finished does not help matters at all. Hence we make the appeal for a more reverent reaction to the brief expressions of thanks given in the dining hall.

The lack of anything that resembles a religious atmosphere in our chapel services has often been decried by speakers and students. This is the outcome of the prevalent lack of reverence on the part of students. We recognize that compulsory chapel attendance introduces a psychological factor but we believe its importance is overrated. Compulsory chapel works a hardship on no student and the chapel service can be used advantageously by every attendant. In conclusion we ask, "Is it impossible for a college student to lay aside other daily activities and give himself to the chapel service and maintain a reverent frame of mind through its duration?" —Editor

SCHEDULES

The publication of the catalog makes the following suggestion timely if not acceptable. The Junior or Senior without schedule difficulties is an extremely fortunate individual. We believe most schedule mistakes are made in the Freshman year. We know many students who wasted valuable time by taking courses which they later find useless in their field of study. The catalog explains class schedules, majors and minors, etc. satisfactorily to the students who have been in school a year. But the incoming Freshmen annually enter college and almost blindly arrange a schedule without a proper knowledge of the three year's follow-up work and plan. Every year at the end of the first semester we hear the poor Freshies bewail the fact that they are taking a course which they will not need and should have taken a required course in their line of study. In addition is the cry of the first year man who has been instructed or advised to take a science course and finds himself better fitted for a business study. One day for registration is not enough time to allow for each student to interview the head of his department and plan a schedule. We recall our own first college day when we dashed here and there trying to register and all without any competent help. We see the yearlings repeat this performance each year.

So we suggest a system of upper-class advisors. After three years in college there are at least a dozen Seniors who are sufficiently acquainted with the plan of a college course to explain its details satisfactorily to an incoming Freshman. This should reduce the schedule difficulties of college students both in their first and succeeding years.

LIVES AND LETTERS

By Rudolph Shook

"Loads of love from Bessie"—that was the way she signed her letters. "Good old Bessie! If she was in the middle of earth-quake and hurricane, Bessie would send her love!" her distracted friends said of her. As it happened she was often in the middle of them. She blundered about in her own amiable way, jovially spoiling things, and she always ended by picking up the broken Spode and saying contently "Oh, gee, I'm sorry. Always breaking things."

Such is Bessie Plummer, the genial mess who is heroine in Anne Parrish's latest novel, Load of Love. Bessie is one of those people who are all too numerous but who are, alas, never as entertaining in the life as in books. She goes to picnics, her face gets red, she likes children, she says people are "awfully nice," she wears middie and bloomers and shouts "we don't bother to be stylish here," and she says "Let's all sing," and "Gee, this is a slow crowd. Doesn't anyone know a ghost story?" To her, amusing people are "screams," and the pinnacle of mirth is reached (naturally enough) when one "nearly died." "She is so kind that she is painful but in the end one likes her in spite of the fact that (if not because) she is a trial."

Miss Parrish has created an inimitable person and one that only a woman could so devastatingly analyze. Her Load of Love is an exceedingly presentable novel and one that shows that keen sense of the ridiculous that is so characteristically feminine. It has delicious satire, but it is not inhuman. It is a commentary on what Mabel Paterson calls "the utter blarney" of living. The dinner-party in Chapter Three had me in the aisles.

This author is not afraid of using "horseface" without quotes, but she is never cheap. Her novel is nicely written, with an admirable pancy of words and a mixture of satire and sympathy that is irresistible, and several times I found myself muttering, not too benignly: If only—and—could read this!

Query to Prof. Gingrich: Paging thru my New Yorker a week or two ago, I came upon, in Alexander Woollcott's amusing "Shouts and Murmurs," the following admission: "But I confess myself afflicted with indecision when I ponder certain instances of understatement which one comes upon in Holy writ. I am reluctant to believe, for instance, that any part of the Gospel according to St. Matthew was written in waggish mood. Yet it is difficult otherwise to account for the second verse of the fourth chapter. Rushing to the roccoco table where rests the family Bible beside the patriarchal album, I read:

"And when he had fasted forty days and forty nights, he was afterward an hungred."

Model Assembly Delegates Report to Int. Relat. Club

Pres. Sidney Hoffman Presents Valuable Suggestions Received From Other Schools

The International Relations Club held their regular meeting Tuesday evening, May 3. The representatives of the club who attended the Model Assembly at Syracuse gave their report to the club. Mr. Sidney Hoffman gave a report of the International Relations valuable suggestions which he received from other colleges. At present there are three hundred International Relations Clubs in the United States and approximately one hundred other clubs in other countries around the world. This last year the Carnegie Endowment has spent $20,000 for the benefit of these clubs.

Professor Hamilton read another letter by Miss Amy Heminway Jones, Executive Secretary of the International Relations Club in China, and when she wrote the letter she was on her way to Hongkong from Shanghai. Miss Jones described the conditions as she saw them in Shanghai. She said that much she saw there was the customary result of any war, although it seems to be generally accepted that the Japanese have been needlessly cruel.

The Universities in Shanghai are closed, but the members of the International Relations Clubs, who are now wounded men, Red Cross workers, relief workers and refugees, assembled at a meeting to talk with Miss Jones. They felt the only solution was to continue the work they had begun and they are anxious to take up their work again when the crisis is over.

The Chinese students in their long gowns present a strange contrast to the military uniformed Japanese whom Miss Jones mentioned in her last letter. The Chinese are not fighters. The soldier is not much respected. The students protest but do not enlist.

Miss Jones did finish her letter until she had been to Hongkong and Canton. Here the feeling is not so intense. The students go out among the people and encourage boycott against Japan. However, there is not much national unity.

Miss Jones says the world must be educated to a scientific understanding of the need for international combination and co-operation. This must come through just such movements as the International Relations Clubs.

There will be election of officers for the coming year at the next meeting on May 7. All members are urged to be present.

E. P. C. Ball League Admits Albright

Smith Expects Move to Awaken Interest in Baseball

Coach John Smith announced Monday that Albright has been accepted as a member of the Eastern Pennsylvania Collegiate Baseball League. Franklin and Marshall, and Gettysburg were also admitted to the league. The meeting of the League was held at Dickinson, May 9. Griffith of Bucknell was elected president; Swartz of Juniata, vice-president; and Stevens of Drexel, secretary and treasurer. The loop will wing into action in the Spring of 1933 with the following teams striving for the cup: Albright, Bucknell, Drexel, Franklin and Marshall, Gettysburg, Juniata, Lebanon Valley and Ursinus.

The news of Albright entering this League was received with great joy by the baseball lovers on the campus. This will mean more home games with better teams than we have been enjoying during the past two years. We will play four league games at home each year and with a better brand of baseball being presented it should awaken more interest in the national pastime. On top of this comes the announcement that we will play two games with Lebanon Valley and Ursinus, and the possibility of playing two games with another League team. Only one of these games will count in the League standing but it will give the student body a chance to see more first class ball.

The formation of these Leagues are a great help to collegiate athletics. We all know the strong feeling of the student body during the basketball season and we are sure that the same feeling will prevail during the baseball season. Coach Smith and Graduate Manager Howard recently made trips to Gettysburg and Dickinson to see about Albright getting into the Football Conference. They have no statement to make concerning the acceptance of Albright. The Lions should be accepted into the Conference this year. When we are admitted to the Conference it will stimulate the student body with more school spirit and will attract more fans to our games. If it only stimulates school spirit we will find something that mysteriously disappeared three year ago.

DeFranco and L. Hatton Lead Batsmen with Extra Base Bases

TEAM COLLECTS 13 HITS

Hino and Orr Make Snappy Fielding Plays

The Albright College nine registered their sixth straight win of the season on Saturday, by overwhelming the tossers from Temple University, of Philadelphia.

Albright collected 13 solid bingles at the expense of a big right-hander, Len Gudd, while the Lion ace, Luke Wenrich settled down after a shaky start to hold the Philadelphia Collegians to only 6 base knocks. Luke set down 5 Owls by the strike-out route.

Radio DeFranco led the assault on Gudd by driving in four runs on three hits, two of which were three-baggers. Larry Hatton got two doubles, while Captain Cruttenden performed his lead-off role admirably by tallying four times.

The home team Keystone duo, Stan Hino and Jake Orr, snatched the fielding honors for the day. The Shenandoah flash handled seven difficult chances flawlessly, while black-haired Jackie made the best individual effort of the day when he pulled Wenrich out of a hole in the seventh inning by starting a twin killing on Clouser's screeching liner.

Temple's lone scores of the day were made in the first stanza—Gavuzzi and Clouser singled, Larry Hatton's throw to second was not covered, and Lorne Johnson hit a long fly to Conway.

Larry Hatton's long two-bagger over leftfielder Clouser's head, with Cruttenden and DeFranco on base, evened matters up at 2-2.

Gudd and Wenrich kept all bats silenced until Albright's half of the fifth. Singles by Hino, Conway, Wenrich and Cruttenden, mingled with Orr's walk and DeFranco's long triple, enabled the Red and White to tally five times.

"ELECTRIC BULLETS"

THE result of exhaustive wind-tunnel tests of conventional trolley car models revealed that at speeds of 70 and 80 miles per hour, 70 per cent of the total power was consumed in overcoming air resistance. Streamlining saves approximately 20 per cent of the power.

When the Philadelphia and Western Railway Company decided to replace its cars with faster and more efficient equipment, it chose "electric bullets"—new streamlined cars—each powered by 4 G-E 100-hp. motors. The cars, constructed of aluminum alloy, with tapered noses and tails, are much lighter in weight and capable of greater operating efficiency.

In developing transportation apparatus, college-trained General Electric engineers have conducted extensive tests to improve operating conditions. On land, on sea, and in the air, to-day's equipment is safer, swifter, more dependable, and more comfortable.

more hate! No more war!"

The characters were: Carl Behrend, the sensitive lover of literary creation, played by John Wyle; Pauli Arndt, his wife, by Sarah Varner; Bruce Gordon, Carl's American friend, by Richard Roeder; August Behrend, the dominating father of Carl, by Alan McCarroll; Dr. Arndt, a pacifist and father of Pauli, by Carl Gunther; Mizz Winckelman by Flora Lobb and Fritz Winckelman, her husband, played by Howard Mayer, both friends of the Behrends; Kurt, their son, by John Melcher; Baruska, the maid, by Dolores Marconi; Jan by Marshall Breneman.

An intense moment in the play was occasioned by the entrance of Jan who brought tears to the eyes of the audience by his stark realism of his presentation of the hell of war. Sarah Varner closed the scene with a most dramatic piece of acting which a professional interpretation could not have excelled. Howard Mayer later showed his ability in the representation of a shell-shocked veteran. Comedy relief was furnished by Dolores Marconi as the maid, Baruska. All the actors showed remarkable talent.

The coach of "The Enemy" was Miss Ruth C. Shaffer, who exercised great judgment in the casting of the play. Under her fine direction the production was a splendid success.

The patrons of the play were: Anna Benninger, Helene Blumberg, Professor H. Buckwalter, John Davis, Professor and Mrs. R. Feneli, Miss Elsie Garlach, Miss Margaret E. Gerberich, Charles Gordon, Pauline Gross, Professor and Mrs. C. A. Horn, Dr. Raymond Houck, Jeanette's Dress Shop, Sylvia Kins, Marie Kleppinger, Mr. D. G. Lubold, William Maier, Nuebling's Sporting Goods Shop, Mr. and Mrs. John Smith, Professor and Mrs. Lewis Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Miles A. Varner, Dean and Mrs. G. W. Walton, Al Wiederhold's Furniture Co., and Emily Yocum.

lovely. The departments have been rearranged and the fraternity and sorority pages placed in order of the dates founded. The athletic section, edited by Russell Bonney, ace of local sports-writers, is larger than ever before, and includes several interesting new features, including pungent remarks on the letter-men.

One of the most interesting features of this book will be its brilliant and witty comments on the fads and foibles of campus personalities. Mr. Shook offers a delightful and very amusing feature, and one never used heretofore, in his sophisticated These Charming People.

The 1933 CUE of Albright, as this year's volume is called, will appear in a limited edition. Since it is expected that more than half the number ordered will be purchased by Juniors, Seniors and under-graduates are urged to place their orders immediately, to insure getting a copy.

MRS. CURRIER'S TALK

to perfection the history of that great country.

Among the artists and sculptors referred to were:

Cezanne, the father of modern art, Michael Anglo, who had been forced to paint and who expresses his strength of character, and vitality in his work; Goya, who was not afraid to put the truth on canvas, and was famous for his expression of the underlying meaning of the history of Spain. Mastrovic, a modern sculptor of strong feelings and emotions, and known as one of the most expressive of all sculptors; Rablo Pecosio who expresses his life, work and self expression in his work. He seems to be a most versatile artist, representing the extreme modern times.

In conclusion Mrs. Currier said, "Self expression may be recognized in children when they stop crying for a pretty picture, in scribbles and symbols. Art is merely not representation, nor necessarily a representation of beauty. Art is so long as it carries an aesthetic message to some one. Art to be art must talk not only for its creator but for some one else to prove itself.

Modern artists try to confine that aesthetic emotion to a smaller area by the elimination of sentiment in the selection of a subject."

WILBERT A. PEIFER

Any Albrightian knows Wilbert Peifer as one of the leading student scientists of our college. This fellow's hobby is chemistry and he plans to seek a career in this field upon graduation. He will receive his B. S. degree in June. For three years he has served as an efficient assistant in the chemistry department. Members of Chemistry Club and Natural Philosophy Society and president of both this year. Takes to chess for pastime and served as president of the Chess Club this year. Peifer has also been active in the Day Students Club. Always a good student as is attested by his position in the Senior scholastic ratings.

Perkasie, Pa.—February 5, 6, 7, 1932.

All in all, the trips, were very beneficial to those who made them. Since all on the team are students who are expecting to enter the active ministry, a very practical insight into the ministry was gained both in pulpit work and in pastoral work.
