PREFACE

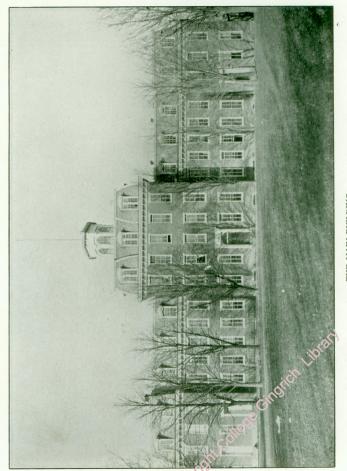

3 HE staff has tested the famous German sentence: "Aller Anfang ist schwer," and has found it especially true in this endeavor. We have tried to give to the students, to the alumni and to the friends of our beloved institution a mirror (speculum) which will reflect adequately and worthily the character and spirit of Albright. Wherein we have failed we have inexperience and lack of precedent to offer as excuses.

We sincerely hope that as the years come and go the speculum will become brighter and better and thus be a means of helping Albright College to her rightful place among the institutions of this State.

THE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE

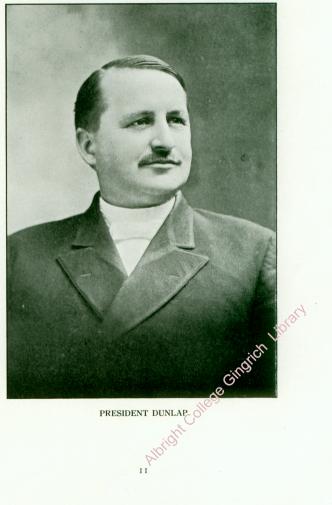

THE FACULTY

John Francis Dunlap, A.M., D.D.

is a native of York, Pa. After persuing an academic course at York, he took a course at Northwestern College, also Union Biblical Institute, of Naperville, Ill., from which institution he graduated in 1889. The Degree of A. M. was granted him by Central Pennsylvania College.

He was licensed to preach in 1888, and entered the active ministry in the Central Pennsylvania Conference in 1889. Twenty-one years of continuous service ended with his term as presiding elder of Williamsport District.

Albright College Cindich Libral He was elected President of Albright College in June, 1909.

Clellan Asbury Bowman, A.M., Ph.D.,

was born at Dauphin. He took a preparatory course in Berrysburg Seminary. Graduated from Millersville Normal School. He subsequently took special courses in Wesleyan University, Psychology at Harvard University, and Sociology and Economics at the University of Berlin under Paulsen, Simmel and Wagner

He taught in a good high school four years, organized what is now Dallas College, Ore., and took part in the re-organization of Albright College, and its consolidation with Central Pa. College He has been alternately President and Dean of this institution since 1897.

Aaron Ezra Gobble, A.M., DD.,

was born near Manheim, Pa. The educational advantages of his youthful days prepared him to matriculate as a Sophomore at Franklin and Marshall College, from which institution he graduated as Valedictorian in 1879.

He was elected Professor of Mathematics at Union Seminary, New Berlin, in 1879, and served as Principal from 1880 to 1887. The curriculum was revised, and the Seminary chartered as Central Pennsylvania College, Dr. Gobble serving as its only President from 1887 to 1902.

Since 1902 he has occupied the chair of Latin and Hebrew at Albright.

Walter Joseph Dech, A.B.,

was born at Bethlehem. His early education was received in the public schools, and Swartz's Academy of that place. He graduated from the Lehigh Preparatory School, and later entered Lehigh University, from which institution he graduated in 1893.

After graduation he taught in the public schools of Bethlehem for one year, and he also taught three years at the Lehigh Preparatory School.

Since 1898 he has been at Albright, as Professor of Greek Language and Literature, and German.

William Phillips Winter, A.M., Ph.D.,

was born at Galion, O. His course of instruction in the Public and High Schools was followed by two years of College preparatory training at Oberlin College Hethen entered Ohio Wesleyan University, from which he was graduated in the Classical Course in 1887. The greater part of his time since graduation has been spent in College teaching, in Ohio, Indiana, Louisiana, and Pennsylvania.

Dr. Winter spent several years at John Hopkins University and a summer at Cornell University. He received his Ph.D. degree from John Hopkins in 1904.

For the past nine years he has been Professor of Physics and Chemistry at Albright.

James Palm Stober, Sc.M.,

was launched on his educational career when he received his diploma as a graduate of the public schools. He then attended Palatinate College, and also is a graduate from Millersville Normal School. In the fall of 1894 he entered Bucknell University, from which he graduated four years later as valedictorian. Since 1898 he has had charge of the department of Biology and Geology at Albright.

During the years spent here, Prof. Stober has spent three summers at the Marine Biological Laboratory, Long Island. He also has done one year's work in the Correspondence Department of Chicago University, and he spent two years there as a resident student

Harry Ammon Kiess, A.M.,

was born at Warrensville, Lycoming Co. He attended the public schools of Warrensville, and graduated from Munsy Normal School in 1892. He also graduated from Lock Haven Normal School in 1895, and from Central Pennsylvania College in 1899. One year at Johns Hopkins University completed his collegiate training.

Prof. Kiess taught four years in the public schools, two years at Central Pennsylvania College and has been Professor of Mathematics at Albright for the past nine years.

Edgar Eugene Stauffer, A.M.,

was born at Treverton, Northumberland County. He graduated from the Shenandoah High School in 1888, and received his A.B. degree from Lafayette in 1894. He had the Normal Fellowship at Galloudet College the year 1894-'95, and was given his M.A. degree by that College in 1895. Lafayette granted him the A.M. degree in 1897.

Prof. Stauffer taught in the public schools and also at Schuylkill Seminary. He was in the active ministry eleven years, until 1907, during which time he served in the local pulpit, and taught English Bible at the College. Since that time he has been Professor of English Language and Literature at Albright.

Charles Shaeffer Kelchner, M.S.,

was born at Fleetwood. His early education was received in the borough schools at Fleetwood. In the fall of 1892 he entered Schuylkill Seminary, Fredricksburg, and in June, 1895, he graduated from what was then "Albright Collegiate Institute," at Myerstown.

In the fall of 1895 he entered Lafayette College, and graduated from the Latin Scientific course in June, 1898, with the degree of Ph.B. In June, 1901, he received the degree M.S. from Lafayette. Since the fall of 1898 he has been Professor of French and History at Albright.

Henry Franklin Schlegel, Ph.D.,

was born at Mauch Chunk. He attended the public schools of that place, and graduated from Albright Collegiate Institute, in 1897. After that he was Professor of German at his Alma Mater. He was granted a license to preach by the East Pa. Conference in 1890.

Dr. Schlegel has been a member of the College Faculty off and on ever since his first connection with the institution. He assisted in the Philosophical Department during Dr. Woodring's illness. During the past four years he was our college pastor, and Professor of English Bible.

William Samuel Keiter, A.B.,

is a native of Snyder County. He was taught in the public schools of that county, and received his later education at Bloomsburg Normal School, and Ursinus College, having graduated from both institutions, the latter one in 1901. He also took a post-graduate course at the University of Pennsylvania.

Prof. Keiter taught in the public schools of Snyder, Chester, and Juniata Counties. He was Supervising Principal in Medrord, N. J., and was Head-master of the Port Royal Academy for one year.

He has been Head-master of our Preparatory School for three years.

Mrs. Luella D. Mohn

was born in Reading. She attended the public schools of that place, and later graduated from the Oley Academy. She also completed the English Course, and later the Music Course, at Schuylkill Seminary.

In 1894 Mrs. Mohn finished the Teachers' Course at the New England Conservatory of Music. She studied Theory under Prof. Elson, Piano under Edwin Khlarr, and Counterpoint under Chadwick.

She taught four years at Albright Collegiate Institute, and five years at Bloomfield Academy. She has been at Albright since 1905 as Preceptress and head of the Music Department.

Miss Zell Corrinne Stanford

was born in Pittsburg. She attended the public schools, including the high school, of Harrisburg. Her art studies were pursued at the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts, Philadelphia. Studies in Life Work were carried on under William M. Chase, and China Painting under A. B. Cobden.

Miss Stanford also Studied China Painting under Mr. Sharidan at Reading. She has been at the head of the Art Department at Albright for the past seven years.

Miss Nettie G. Senneff was born in Fair Haven, Ill. She attended the Dixon High School and later graduated from the Musical Course at Dixon College. After graduation she spent two years and a half at Oberlin College, graduating in the Theory Course. Her piano work there was done under the instruction of Prof. Barry, and her studies in Harmony under Prof. Heacox.

For the past three years Miss Senneff has been instructor in Piano and Harmony at Albright.

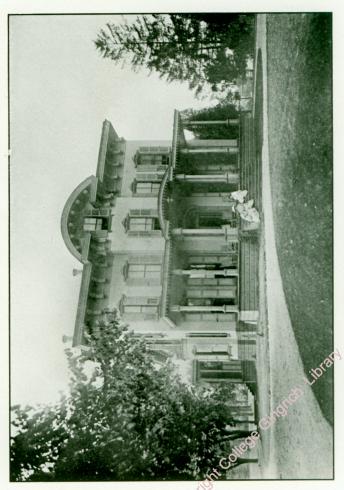

Miss Ella May Phillips

was born at Columbia, Lancaster County. Her earliest training was received in the public schools at that place, but she finished her public school education by graduation from the Lebanon High School.

Her voice culture was received under Miss Kendig's instruction, and was continued for five years. She also studied two years under Madame Ziegler of New York City.

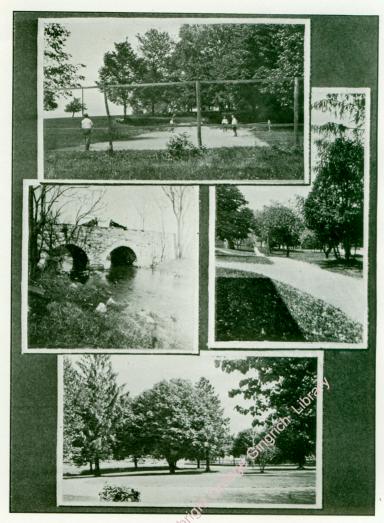

Miss Phillips has only been with us one year, having been elected to the position as Teacher of Voice Culture and Singing last June.

Senior Class History

Having entered upon the home stretch of his race after wisdom and understanding, the Senior looks back over past efforts and achievements with feelings of satisfaction, due to successful achievements, mingled with regrets for neglected opportunities. During the last few weeks of his College Course, as never before, does he awaken to the realization that the four brightest years of his life have come to a close; a golden period which has offered countless avenues for the development of his natural abilities.

The history of the Class of 1911 has been frought with victories won, battles lost, associations-both pleasant and otherwise. In the Fall of the year 1907, 22 strong, and happily ignorant of the gleams of verdure which our superiors imagined they continually perceived, scintillating from the Freshman's eyes, 1911 launched upon its career as a class. As proves the case with all Freshmen, this class soon observed that there were still a "few small bits of knowledge," which Prep. and High School Professors had left to be taught. Being naturally of an observing and studious nature, they immediately commenced to learn. In the course of a year when their "Freshmanitis" has worn off, there was revealed a class of talented, full-fledged students, possessed of great capabilities for the work to follow. Having long since passed that stage of innocent, harmless scraps and pranks, engaged in by lower classmen, we must let the accounting of such occurrences to them and pass on to more important matters. Suffice it to say that in early years of our experience as lower classmen, when at times ardor waxed too warm, there was recourse to never-failing, cooling remedies-brick ice cream and the fish dam. Access being rendered easily in both cases by 1912.

In Academic work the Seniors have always held a high position, displaying to faculty and students alike, a wisdom and intelligence well grounded, equal to all occasions, and in all respects measuring up to standards fixed by preceding classes. Realizing the great benefit to be derived from literary work, 1911 has endeavored to excel in all three societies. Honorably have her members performed all work assigned them along this line. Besides furnishing a member of the College Debating Team, on the Bulletin Staff during the past two years, 1911 has aided very materially in raising and retaining the high standard of excellence displayed by our College publication. Feeling the need, the class has seen fit to launch a new project, and as a result we have assumed the bulk of work in the publication of this-our first College

Annual.

In Athletics, 1911 has played an important role. Through the inter-Class Basket Ball series, she has for the last two years finished in 2d place. From her ranks, nine Varsity team positions have been ably filled, one basket and one base ball captain has led his team on to victory, and two base ball managers have successfully managed their seasons. As a whole the members of the class have always demonstrated their support of athletic activities by financial aid as we has by word of mouth.

The spirit dominating the various class activities (has been characterized by earnest, persistent endeavor towards bettering our own condition as well as advancing the interests of our Alma Mater. A quotation from aluminus in speaking of the class will explain its constant attitude towards progress in all lines of College work. He says: "The reason that 1911 has been 'doing things' is that they are boosters and not knockers." Possessed for four years with that indomitable courage which overcomes all resistance, 1911 steps out intolife with the firm conviction that she has fought a good fight and gained that which goes toward making life a success.

SENIOR POEM

The *Clerk's Soliloquy (a fragment)

O vast and boundless, sightless, yawning depth Mysterious as the silvery stars that deck The tenuous ethereal realms of space! I stand as on the edge of some vast shore Of hoary ocean's grey and dismal waste, A mast sinks in his restless heaving breast, I can not follow I can only think. Or child upon the brink of some abyss, Dismal, dark, and solemn cavernous, A stone I cast into his hollow throat And listen long and wait for some report To tell when it has reached the depth below. But all in vain I listen, stand and think. Mysterious is the spell that we call time, And shores of boundless space to apprehend. The wisdom that hath myriad systems planned, The Power that controls with mighty hand; But soul of man immortal and divine By far surpassing form in native worth, Eternity shall be thy long abode, Infinity thy contemplation blest! The strange experience of thy natal hour The abnegation of all former self, To round the varied sphere of spirit life Be bound by cruel corporeal bands And learn this strange and limited domain! Upon this dark void stepping cautiously The torch of knowledge only in my hand, Yet by its beams I scarcely see my way; Mid sights and shapes of formless beings round, The feeble flame scarce marks upon the ground What step is next to take, and so I grope In darkness almost felt; but yet I know When limitations of this span are past Upon my dilate eyes shall burst the light-The Eos of a boundless endless day.

*In the Middle Ages the student was called a Clerk.

Historical Sketch

The history of Albright College and the surrounding region is fraught with a rich interest. The landmarks of this history are still visible. Go out to the old graveyard at Tulpehocken and read on the brown tombstones the romance of faithful lives, lived in the midst of perils known only to the pioneer. Stand by the grave of Jacob Albright, or Colonel John Conrad Weiser, each but a few miles distant, and you cannot but get a glimpse of what immortal fame triumph over persecution and adherence to principle ever brings the fighter of such battles.

It is of these two men that we wish especially to write. The one ranked second only to William Penn in the making of Pennsylvania, the other first in the rank of founders of our own Evangelical Church.

John Conrad Weiser springs from the old German ancestry that fled from persecution in the old world. He settled at Tulpehocken in 1729, with the intention of becoming a farmer. But his intimate knowledge of the Indian language and ways made him indispensable to the government. His services were demanded by Indian and white government alike, because they were "very honest," as the old record says. Weiser was officially recognized as the interpreter of Pennsylvania in 1732. Treaties between all tribes and nations were carried on by him. One record says: "It is not too much to say that the pacific spirit of Penn was perpetuated by Weiser, and that the fair name of our commonwealth, touching our treatment of the Indians, is as much owing to the fine policy of the latter, as to the amiable mind of the former."

To Jacob Albright is due the credit of keeping aglow the religious spirit that animated Weiser and his generation in their pursuit of liberty. Hardship, roil, and the lack of religious instruction in a generation or so caused a partial ignorance of the true way of God. Under the preaching of one of those mighty pioneers of Methodism, Albright, in 1790, then a man of thirty, became powerfully convicted of need of the true light. When he found it, like the converts of old, set out to carry it to others. Branded as a heretic by the old churches, mobbed, his meetings broken up, still he persevered through twelve years of service. From 1796 to 1808, he followed the German settlements of Pennsylvania, Maryland and Virginia. His adherents grew, for who could resist the mighty zeal and earnestness of the man? In 1807 the first Evangelical conference was organized at Kleinfeltersville, and may the work inaugurated there never cease growing.

Schuylkill Seminary, Albright College, and a number of institutions of like kind are a part of the fruit that has ripened from the labors of Albright. So the religious and educational life of eastern Pennsylvania has for its pioneer none other than Jacob Albright; the establishment of the state borders are the preservation of the fair honor of Pennsylvania with the Indian so much abused elsewhere, is due to Col. Conrad Weiser. Both men belong to our neighborhood. In pride we claim them, in gladness we do them homage. May we, as their decendants, keep high the banners of civil and religious life that they carried!

Junior Class

31

Daniel Frank Hoppes

came to Albright four years ago as a rosy cheeked lad of innocent looks. He has since grown wise in the ways of the world, and has acquired an immense amount of "pep." He is recognized as a power, and holds the high office of President of his class; likewise that of cheer-leader when the Red and White is on the war-path. Behold him, specks and megaphone, the best known person on the gym floor. He also takes an active part in basket-ball and baseball, and is a member of the Zeta Omega Epsilon fraternity.

Edna Belva Logan,

our literary star, has a wonderful capacity for scholarship. So great is her ability along this line, that it is a common occurrence for her to read Latin and Greek at sight. She is a graceful, piquant little blonde, with charming manners, and an imperious little air that is quite compelling. Beneath this airy-fairy exterior, there lies a marvelous depth of intellect which promises to make her a light in the literary firmament, for it already reveals itself in numerous poems, magazine articles, etc.

Samuel McClellan Short.

the boy who made East Waterford famous by his oratorical ability, came to Albright as a student and instructor in the common branches, because of his congeniality and cheerfulness he became one of the most popular students of the institution. As a debator and student he ranks among the foremost of his class. History is his favorite study, which branch he intends to teach after his graduation. Pi Tau Beta.

Frances Willard Sampsel.

At heart she is "good as gold," to quote her best friend. More than that, where in the world will you find her equal for fringy locks, and her ability to take or give a slam with the smile that don't wear off? Bright, but not dying from overwork, and Dr. Gobble's old standby in the Latin classes, constitute her characteristics as a student. "May she live long, and never die until she breaks her bones over a bushel of glory."

Clarence Emanuel Huber

hails from Mt. Carmel. After attending the public schools of that place, he entered A. P. S. Huber is a bright, talented student and was a leader of his class in every department until he assumed the duties of college electrician. Since that time, however, his ardor has not been checked, and with his increased duties his college work still reflects great credit upon him. His prospects for public life are very bright.

Irvin Emory Roth

comes to us from Reading. His smiling countenance and cheerful disposition make him ever pleasant and agreeable. He is an exemplary student, doing thorough and consistent work. His personality commands the respect and confidence of the student body, and his chief characteristics are unselfishness, and interest in the world at large. His highest ambition is to become a foreign missionary, and to this end he is energetically striving. Pi Tau Beta.

Roy M. Smith.

Few persons enter college better prepared to master the difficult tasks which present themselves to a student than was Roy Milton Smith, our eloquent Clearfield County orator. A course in Central Pa. Normal School (from which he graduated with honors), together with his experience as a farmer boy, and as high school principal, gave him a broad mind and stable character which have added dignity to his class, and have made him a prominent figure in college activities.

Mable Hurst Wooding,

more commonly known: "Wood," is a monomaniae on the subject of Western ranch life, and her nighest ambition is to be a "cowboy" in Arizona. She is a tall, statuesque brunche of striking appearance and innocent expression, which belies the existence of the mischievous spirit within. "Wood," a great scholar, a star basket ball slayer, and a general favorite with both and girls alike. Long after she has departed for the western prairies Albright will feel the loss of the influence of her winning personality.

Paul Edwin Keen

was born at York. He graduated from the York High School, and entered the Albright Freshman Class three years ago. His unassuming manner, and agreeable disposition have won a place for him in the hearts of the students. This fact is shown by the many responsible offices which he holds. He has recently been awarded the first place on Albright's Intercollegiate debating team. Pi Tau Beta.

Elizabeth Riddle.

Elizabeth they call this maid, A "puzzle" in a way. She studies music very hard, And says she'll teach some day.

Besides she has a voice so sweet, And plays the violin. With all, this charming maid of ours, Is sure all hearts to win.

Herbert Cleaver Clouser.

The original of this pleasant bit of natural scenery is one of the most popular men at Albright. The most noteworthy feature of this prodigy is that he was born in Reading, the city of dough-twisters. Clouser is a typical Adonis with the girls; exercises wonderful willpower over sleep; and is a born performer with the "gloves." "Clous" is, on the whole, a good-natured creature, and sells butter, eggs and poultry for pastime. Kappa Upsilon Phi.

Maude Thomas.

Here's to the girl who is dandy and small, Here's to the girl who is sweet. For here is a girl who'll be true always, No matter how often you meet.

A veritable beam of sunshine, Tommy is a joy to us all, and the delight of the teachers. The only inconsistency we can find in her, is the constant reiteration of her determination "never to marry a man if his hair is the least bit red."

Alfred Millard Kuder.

This big, substantial specimen of masculinity, designed to be a power in ministerial circles, hails from the town where the peanut predominates. Of "equable" temper, a fair inclination for study, an intensely fun-loving disposition. "Kud" pursues his course in true college-boy fashion. Although too pronounced in his opinions at times, he has a more appalling weakness; a general love for the "fair sex." He promises to become a man, who to his friends will be "ever present, always missed." Kappa Upsilon Phi.

Elwood Beecher Heindel, better known as "Doc," hails from Elizabethtown, Lancaster County. Dame fortune showered upon him a splendid physique. In his fashman year "Doc" had the reputation of being an enemy of work, but in subsequent years he has fully vindicated himself. He was captain of last year's basket-ball team, and is at present manager. "Doc" is also a member of the valvity baseball team, and is active in class and college affairs.

Erma Mathilde Shortess.

Erma is one of our music girls. Once having seen her you will surely know her, for she is the brunette type, tall willows and graceful. "Shorty" is a faithful student both in main building and the studio. Being all around musically inclined, she takes a prominent part in Glee Club activities. We wish her a long, happy, and successful life.

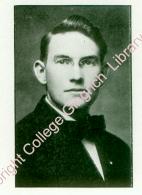

Howard Arlington Northacker

hails from Scranton. Although tall and commanding in appearance, he is gentle, lovable and kind. Before coming to Albright he was assistant foreman of the Scranton lace curtain factory, and clearly showed his self-denying spirit when he resigned that position in answer to a call to the ministry. "Northie" distinguishes himself as a student. Mathematics is his favorite study, and he handles Greek with ease. He is ambitious, industrious and energetic. Pi Tau Beta.

Twila Agnes McDowell.

Ever serene, with a spirit as unruffled as the placid waters, Twila performs her musical tasks among us with a patience equal to that of proverbial Job. Never known to break a rule, always prompt, of saintly disposition. Twila would make an admirable minister's wife, though she constantly reiterates her determination to forever remain Twila Agnes McDowell. Nevertheless we predict for her a very successful future, as a missionary to the benighted heathen, either at home or abroad.

Kathryn Super,

who answers to the call of "Kitty," is from Minersville. While yet a child she heard the sweet strains of the "Miners' Home Sweet Home," and was there inspired with a longing for music. She studied music for some time before her arrival at Albright; but now she says: "Away with popular music," for she is aiming to be the successor of the beloved Bach. Kitty is one of the biggest-hearted girls in our hall, always willing to do whatever is asked of her.

Marion E. Bertolet.

A whirlwind? Yea, verily. One that sends the dust in your eyes, and shakes you up a bit. But a very pleasant sort of whirlwind, and one good to know. Resist? Never dream of it. Rather, adopt her motto as your own: "Be merry today, for to-morrow ye may be found out."

(Incidentally she has won her "A" this year.)

Paul Melanchthon Fogt

was born sometime during the last century. The remainder of the old century he spent in quietude on the farm, but the new century brought new aspirations; and as a step towards the realizations of these new ideals Paul took a course in the Myerstown High School, and then cast his lot with the class of '12 at Albright. Bravely facing day-student's disadvantages Paul is determined to make good.

History of the Class of 1912

Modesty compels me, O gentle reader, to withhold from you the achievements of the Class of 1912, until we bid adieu to dear old Albright. Only an impartial historian can render to the Class of 1912 its just due. The good that men do lives after them, and when the last member of the class hands in his checks and shuffles off this mundane sphere, may there arise an historian equal to the occasion, and able to faithfully record the deeds of this class in pure and undefiled English.

As I turn the leaves of fancy back for three short years, and perceive the condition of the Freshmen, who entered Albright College one fine September morning in 1908, and compare them with the body of men about to assume Senior dignity, I cannot help but wonder. The boys whose minds have, for four years, been nourished and enlightened by the radiance emanating from the throne of knowledge, are now developed men, eager for a grapple with life and life's responsibilities.

The steady grind of the Freshman year, thoroughly sharpened our wits and claws; and we appeared in the Fall of 1909, a band of wonderfully developed organisms. Our class could now boast of a "Socratic Circle." How often from the rooms, rang loud, its learned discussions,—interrupted more or less (usually more) by aerolitic reminent edibles and profuse arguments.

However the time arrived for us to show the Freshmen our physical supremacy. This opportunity occurred when the Freshmen tried to float their unsightly rag S. W. 6 S. 31 rods from the chapel. Oh! that was no off night for the "champs" whose whip-like sinews shone under the silvery moon like the lamps of the wise virgins. The Freshmen were completely embarrassed by our charge and sudden appearance, toward the close of their tad-pole stage 1912 hauled down their flag and put them under the yoke.

Never was the city of dough-twisters more highly honored than the night of our class banquet. Everyone longed for an extra alimentary canal to do justice to the sumptuous menu.

As our Sophomore year ended with a burst of foolish fun, so this our Junior year, ends with a burst of quiet dignity, in assisting the Seniors in the publication of this volume. Be not too critical, kind friends, for we are not so egoristical as certain of our predecessors to call our work perfection. We can simply so that we have done our best.

Thus the Class of 1912, which sometimes, no doubt chrough constant inclination to truth, scientific and moral, will prove an important agent of the world's destiny, bids you adieu.

ALFRED MILLARD KUDER, Historian.

The Sophomores

By a Freshman

Upon a cool September morning, which marked the opening day of a new year for Albright a crowd of fellows approached the main building from the southeastern corner of the campus. The Freshmen had already been there and were anxious to know who these fellows were. From all appearances they surmised them to be Sophomores, and so they deemed it a great privilege to behold them as one by one they entered the matriculation halls.

The first few days of the Fall term we wandered with the usual timidity of Freshmen among the old students and were very heartily greeted by nearly all of them. But, somehow it seemed to us that there was a certain group of fellows whom it seemed so difficult to approach. We became worried and couldn't understand why such should be the case. So we questioned a Junior one day who these fellows were. He replied that they were Sophomores. This was the first realization of a Sophomore class at Albright.

We began to see real evidence of a Sophomore class only after about two weeks of Freshmen history had been written. One beautiful morning their appreciation of our presence was made manifest by them in yellow and black in prominent places of the College. We recognized this as a very admirable effort on their part toward association and so it took us but an exceedingly short time to make known unto them our gratefulness for their kindness by returning the favor and hinting at our plans and agreements.

But still we could not approach them. So we thought we would attempt another device. Early one fine morning in solid array the Freshmen went out under the open sky in the front of the campus and there upon a conveniet pole they hoisted their banner of purple and gold, on which were imbedded the beautiful figures 1914. And so, grouped around this pole beneath this emblem of Freshmen glory, we sang and cheered with the waving of its folds our hearts willingness to associate with those whom we couldn't somehow meet. For three long hours we raised the shouts of welcome but no response from our 1913 friends.

So we returned to gentle abodes heavily grieved not only at the fact that they refused to associate with us, but also because another tradition of Albright had been abandoned. Were they really Sophomores? This was the question in our minds. Our conception of a Sophomore was a fellow of courage and bravery. The Class of 1913, sorry to say, had neither of these qualities.

The Freshmen did not become discouraged but later on begged of the Sophomores to play with them in basket-ball, and again they refused. Yea, we even invited them to dine with us, and to our sad dismay they refused. What more could we do to make them feel comfortable was the problem that confronted us all through the year.

To say the best for this class is that they have to spirit. And in conclusion we give them this word of advice: Dear Sophs, if you wish to be worthy representatives of your Alma Mater profit by the experiences you have had with your young friends---the Freshmen.

E. R. HART.

The Freshmen

By a Sophomore

On the 12th day of September, in the fifteenth year of Albright, during the reign of King Dunlap, there returned numerous youths and maidens from over hill and dale to the realms of King John I. Beautiful beings they were to behold, and in wisdom there was none like unto them in all the realm. The king beheld them from his throne on high, and joyously exclaimed: "Lo! yon wise men advancing. They it is who are great and mighty. They it is who shall spread the fame of Albright throughout all the land. And, lo, they are mighty and good to look upon, and their name shall be called Sophomores.'

But fate ordained that this happiness should be of short duration, for presently certain unsightly creatures were seen wandering listlessly through the realm, and the number of them was legion. From Prep schools, kindergartens and the farm were they mustered. Yet all had the same perceptible traces of verdancy. And the approach of them caused all to shrink in horror; for they appeared as a horde of barbarians. Their chapeaux were of straw and the ears protruding were as the sails of Their visages were spotted with brown, giving them the appearance of tigerlilies. Their wearing apparel was Joseph's coat. The trousers thereof, which timidly approached their calves were decked fore and aft with squares of various colors like unto the show bills on a signboard. The long barren waste between the exitum of the leg apparel and the initium of the pedal encasements was covered by a fabric resembling the rainbow. The enclosures in which the pedal extremities were encased were boundless and fathomless and utterly beyond the powers of description. Thus did these anomalies come into our land. And when the king beheld them approaching from afar he quaked, swayed and fell from his throne as one dead. And when in course of time he again came to life he cried out, saying, "Why must so great calamity fall upon me? Why must I endure such torment? Lord, how they do increase who trouble me!" And when he again beheld this motley horde he fled from them, crying, "Lo, a pestilence of green worms has come upon the realm, and their name shall be Freshmen."

Now behold, it is the evening of November 15, 1910. The Freshmen, in the interim have been taught much good by the Sophomores, and have become less boorish. But lo! the Sophomores hold a Rabbit-feed. Outside, the Verdant ones stand in open-mouthed wonder and gape through the windows at the unfold feasting and revelling of their civilized masters.

But although this surprised and awed them into silence, it failed to impress a lesson upon their small and unattainable minds. For on the evening of February 10, 1911, the Sophomores again engaged in conviviality—the occasion being the Sophomore Banquet. The Freshmen were all safely enclosed in their rooms where they were amply protected by beds, wardrobes and trunks. Then ariseth the Lord High Ruler of the Sophomores in regal splendor and addressed winged words to his classmates, "Lo! we have triumphed. See how the beastful have fallen. We have taught them much good. They are as grass to out feet. After we teach them many more lessons and complete our instructions, then shall they be prepared to take our places when King John shall say to us, "Go to higher; and pronounceth us Juniors."

Our league was organized in 1908. The following men have been honored with the presidency of the organization: J. K. Bruce, '10, in 1908-'09; S. M. Short, '12, in 1909-'10, and R. M. Smith, '12, in 1910-'11. A local Temperance Oratorical Contest has been held every year since our organization, to decide who should represent us in the State Oratorical Contest. Last year we had the honor of entertaining the State Contest, at which eight colleges were represented. We were represented by L. R. Hetrick, '10, in the state contest held at Selinsgrove in 1909, and by W. P. Woodring, '10, in the contest held at Albright in 1910. Now M. Smith, '12, has been chosen to represent us in the state contest to be held a Lebanon Valley College, Annville, on April 26, 1911.

We have been honored with two state officers: J. K. Bruck 10, was state president during the year 1909-'10, and A. E. Lehman was vice president during the year 1910-'11. We now have the largest enrolment of any smilar organization in the state; and our prospects for positive and definite work in the future are very bright.

Prof. Stauffer, Prof. Dech, Mr. G. W. Barrett (Ged Sec.), and Mr. H. S. Warner (General Sec.), addressed meetings of our league during the past year.

Association Activities

Albright College was founded to provide a place for the training of young men and women for usefulness in life. Too often, at institutions of this nature, the development of the mental and physical occupy a very important place while moral and spiritual training is neglected. At Albright it is recognized that all are equally important. For a thoroughly trained manhood moral strength is as necessary as mental and physical.

Of the various agencies, through which moral agencies are inculcated at Albright, the Y. M. & Y. W. C. A. are probably the most important. It has been the aim of the leaders of these associations to make them a real vital force in the College life and activity. Largely through their influence many nuisances which were formerly prevalent among the students were abandoned and an entirely new spirit seems to inspire the student body. The membership of both associations was above the average this year. Every "Co-Ed" rooming at Mohn Hall was a member of the Y. W. C. A., and the membership of the Y. M. C. A. was larger than in any previous year. Much credit is due the membership committees of both associations for their efforts in this direction.

In Bible Study the usual standard was maintained. A large proportion of the student body were enrolled in a daily, devotional study of the Bible. Altogether seven classes studied different phases of Bible teaching. One class under the leadership of Mr. Hummel made an enviable record. The class was composed of Preparatory students. Nineteen sessions of the class were held without an absentee. The subject of Missions was studied by six different groups. Some of these groups were lead by a member of the Faculty.

Just before the Christmas vacation a series of evangelistic services were conducted by the Y. M. C. A. During these meetings four young men took a stand for Christ. Rev. E. S. Woodring, pastor of Christ U. Ev. Church, Philadelphia, delivered the addresses. These addresses were instructive, inspiring and heart-searching. These services were of inestimable value in the life of almost every man in the institution.

The Y. M. C. A. was represented by two men at the Student Volunteer Convention, which was held at Rochester, N. Y., and by four men at the Northfield Student Bible Conference. The value of this Conference to the delegates as well as to the Association can scarcely be overestimated. A lack of funds has kept the Association from sending a sufficiently large delegation to these conferences. It is hoped that the friends of religious training at Albright will assist the Association to establish a permanent fund for this purpose. The Y. W. C. A. was represented by three delegates at the Summer Conference held at Granfille, Ohio. It was represented by an equal number at the state Y. W. C. A. convention which was held at Wilkes-Barre, Penna.

Social activities were not neglected by the association. At the opening of the year the social committee of the Y. M. C. A. arranged for a "stag" social, which was held on the athletic field. Here the new students became acquainted with the old men and were thus made to feel more at home. The annual Hallowe'en social was under the joint direction of the social committees of both Associations.

A very interesting feature of the Y. M. C. A. activity was the work among a colony of Italians who are employed in a limestone quarry near Myerstown. The work consisted chiefly in teaching the men to read and speak the English language.

For some time there has been felt the need of books that are especially helpful to young men. A small sum of money was raised among the students and faculty. Thirty-three carefully selected books were purchased and placed in the Y. M. C. A. library. These books furnish a nucleus around which, it is hoped, a large number of books that are helpful to young men may be gathered in the future.

Joint meetings of the Associations were held monthly at which missionary addresses were delivered. Among the speakers were Rev. F. S. Borkey and Rev. G. Wes. Marquardt, of Reading, Penna. Missionary enthusiasm was not as deep as the leaders wished, but it is hoped that more interest can be aroused during the coming years. The Volunteer Band numbers but three persons in its ranks, but there are several others who will probably find their life's work in foreign lands.

The Christian Associations are an indispensable adjunct at Albright. They present excellent opportunities for training for future leadership, as well as a place for the presentation of practical subjects to the students. The leaders of the Associations for the coming year have the welfare of the students at heart and we predict for them a most prosperous year.

Three Leaves

The canal, like a river of life, still flows enchanting through the forbidden Eden of solitary fields to the east of town. In a secluded nook still sprouts the pennyblossoms, faithful bloomage begotten of sweet words and a whispered promise. The ivy still winds its three-leaved verdure around the arches of the old stone bridge, and the enticing seat beneath is half hidden by its green veil.

But alas! the once well-trodden paths are becoming grass grown and desolate. The day was when the glory of the place lay in the very well troddenness of these paths. O the romance, and tender, mystical faces of happiness visible there almost any hour of the day! Ye lucky co-ed, with an afternoon off and alluring eyes that tempt the irreproachable male student to cut and take a walk! or vice versa, ye broadshouldered chevalier, who need not coax long ere the innocent fair one consents to stroll with you down this lovers' retreat toward the big elm! Can you forget the sunshine, and the rippling water and the graceful drapery of vines where the old stone bridge so archly conceals your fascinating tete-a-tetes?

Such incidents are now of a dim and misty past. As we have said before, the paths alone the canal are becoming grassgrown and desolate. The flaming sword of a virilent fever has dispelled the wildness of happy memories, forbidding a future history of like kind. Fair co-eds, taught by the dire experience of one of their number, shun the beautiful spot. For a plague lies in its golden atmosphere. The tale as told has a forceful moral. We herewith print the whole tragedy, and bid ye readers ponder well upon it.

The event occurred in the afternoon of a midspring day. The tree and vines were decked in the flitting glory of their first beautiful green. In such weather as this, the Wanderlust always twined itself like a glittering serpent ground the hearts of the student body. The cut system was blessed as a gift from a godlike Faculty, and overcuts were the only disturbing elements in the peaceful land. The principal actors on this tale of woe were hapless victims of the Wanderlust, as well as of an irresistible attraction for each other.

Such being the case, her one problem to solve was how to make an undetected egress from the Girls' Dormitory. Sunday afternoon quiet hour, and the invisibility of the preceptress meanwhile, made the solution quite a cinch. So she stole with fairy footsteps, down the stairs and out over the velvety campus toward the Eden that lies to the east of town. He, by a circuitous route, evaded the practical jokers that took to his trail, and met her by the sacred precincts of the quarry.

And now for one of those long, blissful afternoons, so dear to the pair whose spirit of companionship is so well developed. From beneath the arch of the old bridge, they viewed the landscape o'er. From the big rock in the shadow of the elm, they secured a new point of view. From the rickety steps of ye old mill, new beauties were brought to light. And so, through the peaceful afternoon, they contemplated each other and the landscape and the sinuous enticements of the old paths. But five o'clock, and the vague fears of the suspicions the preceptress always entertains concerning a dual absence from the supper table, finally began to turn their relunctant steps homeward. At the old quarry they parted, to meet again in the dining room, with the perfect nonchalance of schoolmates who never meet excepting in the class room or in the line-up along the duck path.

But it is a long lane that has no turning, and the Faculty's outraged law concerning those very walks was preparing to take vengeance. On Monday, she went up town with pallid lips, and an uncomfortable feeling of warmth in her rosy cheeks.

"Possibly the raw spring air has chafed your skin," said the physician who was consulted, "I would advise an application of cold cream, and an abstinence from walks for a couple of days."

Tuesday was an extremely hard day. Try as she would, nourly her head grew more dizzy, and the conviction burned upon her that a severe illness was impending. Again the doctor was consulted. She was advised to go home and shut herself up for a few days. Zinc ointment was prescribed as a better specific than cold cream.

Ye gods! can any words describe to you the horrors of succeeding days? Her chum moved to the next floor, bag and baggage, leaving her, whose little toe-ache was usually a matter of public concern, now hidden from all observation. To be the victim of ivy poison meant to have been walking along the canal. And walking along the canal was punishable by the Embargo Act which prohibits the embargoed from leaving the campus for a certain number of days. So she did what she could to keep the matter quiet.

But murder will out, says the old proverb, and experience shows that a good many other things will come to light as well. And the way of the revelation was this: The patient was sitting by her study table one night, the light from the electric bulb well shaded from her face. A would-be sympathizer josted in, asking:

"What's the matter, Sport? How do you feel?"

"O, I'm all right. The doctor says its only a liftle rash of some kind. I'm writing a letter to Dad. He's coming up Tuesdax and if I don't break the news first, he'll get a fit."

The sympathizer accidentally bumped the paper shade from the light. In the full glow there was revealed a swollen, sported face, not at all like the fair countenance she was used to beholding.

"Why what on earth is the matter?" gasped the sympathizer, not too much terror-stricken to take notes, however.

"Fasten up that shade," was the sharp response. "The light hurts my eyes."

The sympathizer fled in a panic. But she had seen enough. A girl with half a dozen kid brothers trotting around the by-ways and hedges at home is no novice in identifying the unmistakable signs of ivy poison. Suspicion was now fairly roused and twenty curious girls awaited developments. When Dad came on Tuesday there was a confession, and Dad, in the concern for his daughter, let the cat out of the bag. It was not long before everyone knew that she had been strolling along the canal, in company with another, and that her tempting cheeks had been kissed once too often by the—succulent three leaves of the ivy.

She has lost all sensibility about the subject. But even yet, any mention of the subject will make him mad as a wet chanticleer.

Walking along the canal? Holy horrors, no! The ivy poison, the weeks of solitude in a dark room, and above all, an outrageous enforcement of the embargo, even after suffering the foregoing, caused a whole month of precious weather to be wasted. Not a co-ed wishes a similar fate, and as long as the three leaves flourish along the canal, the romantic old place will be deserted and grass-grown.

Descriptive of the Cribber's Committee

Judges throned within their sanctum, Guilty Cribbers cower and shrink. Messersmith conducts the trial, While Miss Logan smears the ink.

Swift her pen makes inky teardrops, And the quartet opens fire. Witnesses give testimony, Defendant calls each one a liar.

Frey sits sober, thinking sadly, From the Freying pan he's jumped; Hoppes twirls his two thumbs madly, Thinks Faculty should be bumped.

Hummel hangs his head in sorrow, The performance grieves him sore; Whole committee'd like to borrow Tomahawks to go to war.

Someone's bound to get a scalping, Honor System's raised the row; Praise the Cribbers' strong committee raise the Cribbers' strong committee.

Guessing Contest

Who Is He?

The board of directors of the college annual have decided that the best way of creating interest in the new publication and of securing subscribers for the same, is to open a guessing contest. Each person buying a copy of this annual, is entitled to enter the contest. The plan is as follows: Below are defined in epigram four of the best known characters from each class. To those guessing correctly the entire number of characters personified by these epigrams, we will award a handsomely bound volume of "Slams," fully prepared and ready for practical application whenever needed. You cannot get along without this volume! It will be to your advantage to enroll among the contestants at once!

Who is the Senior-silent and wise?

- a moss-covered rowdy that beats 'round the bush?
- that travels on the side-track of thought?
- that cries out continually, "Alack! alas! A lass I lack!"

Who is the Junior—Rock-ribbed and ancient as the Sun?

- 66 that has mental dyspepsia over someone else's feast?
- " a seeker of truth by his own lantern?
- tried and found wanting?

Who is the Sophomore—a wise fool?

Who is the Freshman-Ignorance on the warpath?

- egotism gone to seed?
 who with all his quitting, never quits knocking?

 —Ignorance on the warpath?
 the little minister?
 in price above rubies?
 a piece of childhood thrown away?

Musselman's Dream

(Seaside Tragedy)

Last night as I lay sleeping
A dream appeared to me.
I dreamed I saw my Helen
Swimming in the sea.
I dreamed I saw the breakers
Play havoc with her hair;
I dreamed I saw the fishes
Flirting with her there.

I dreamed the sun was shining,
The wavelets laughed and danced;
The oysters and the clamshells
Around and 'round her pranced.
The octopus tossed wildly
His eight arms in the air
And planned to drag my Helen Off to his dark, deep lair.

So creeping slyly out from
The shadow of the pier
Where he had lain in hiding,
He seized my Helen dear!
His eight arms clasped her tightly.
He dragged her out to sea,
And sat down in mid-ocean
With Helen on his knee!

COACH KELCHNER

C. S. Kelchner, known all over the state as "Pop" or "Charlie," received his first athletic training in the Albright Prep School. While a student at Lafayette he was prominent in athletic activities, and held a place on both the foot-ball and baseball teams. He played on the '98 team when Lafayette won the college championship in baseball. In the Fall of '98 he tack charge of athletics at Albright. In 1902-'03 and '04 he managed the Lebanon Tri-State; 1906 the Kane Inter-State League; 1907, Wildwood, N. J.; 1908, Bridgeton, N. J.; 1909 he was captain of Harrisburg Tri-State; 1910 captain Clearfield. On connection with his work at Clearfield he did some scouting for Connie Mack and the Harrisburg Tri-State. Many noted players of the National American and Eastern Leagues, we sides scores of minor players, have been developed by our coach.

Deception in Piano Selling Exposed

■ Surprising to see how people are drawn in on Counting Dots, Solving Puzzles, and various other schemes in which pianos are offered free, and credit checks sent out to all who reply. It is all clear deception, and not one of those pianos offered are worth over $175.

Why are $85.00 pianos sold for $150.00, and $175.00 Pianos for $350.00?

Write for full particulars.
