UH, PARDON ME WILL YOU GO ALONG...

Attention, All Co-Eds!

Have you asked anyone to the Leap Year Dance? Better do so soon 'cause it's scheduled for April 27, in the Abraham Lincoln Ballroom. Music by Royal Manhattans!

Tickets may be obtained from any member of the dance committee which includes Lida Faist, chairman; Miriam Hershey, Virginia Jackson, Emma Shenk, and Marie Zaffiro. No tickets will be sold at the door. Deadline is Friday, April 26. Dress is to be semi-formal.

German Players Register Hit

The German Club presented a modern comedy, "Fanne vor Alt-Heidelberg" in the college chapel on Tuesday evening.

The play was a story of the reunion of two old friends, an American and a German, in Heidelberg. Their children fall in love at first sight, but complications add to the suspense. A flat tire and some discourses on German women enlivened the plot.

The characters were Ethel Mae Yeakel, Geraldine Ross, Harold Werner, Arthur McKay, and Donald Burger. Because the play was in modern German, the dialogue sounded completely natural. In that respect, it was the best play produced by any language department this year—the lines sounded more like English than a foreign language. Gerry Ross, and Harold Werner were especially good as the two young people.

The play will be presented again Thursday, April 25 in the Cultural Olympics at the University of Pennsylvania.

Debaters Attend T. K. A. Meeting

This morning, Paul Golis, David Levan, William Bottonari, and Dr. John B. Douds left for Bucknell College to participate in the regional meeting of the New York and Middle Atlantic states' chapter of the Tau Kappa Alpha, national debating fraternity.

A debate tournament will be held this afternoon, at which time Paul Golis will uphold the affirmative and David Levan the negative side of the question, "Resolved, That American liberal arts colleges should discountenance student discrimination against freshmen."

The evening program will feature after-dinner speeches by the various students with William Bottonari representing Albright. After the debate finals and business session tomorrow morning, trophies will be awarded to the best debater and most outstanding speaker.

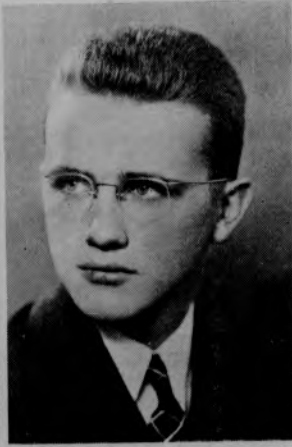

Albright members of Tau Kappa Alpha are Theodore Lunine, Chas. Miesse, Paul Golis, William Bottonari, and David Levan.

SCHOLARSHIP WINNERS

DONALD BURGER

Donald Burger, left, who was awarded a scholarship to do graduate work at Rutgers University, New Brunswick, N. J., and Harold J. Schieck, who received a grant to attend the Boston University School of Theology for the next three years.

Dominos Attend Cultural Olympics

Five members of the Domino Club left with Robert Work yesterday morning to present "Why I Am a Bachelor" in the Cultural Olympics at the University of Pennsylvania. The play was presented last night in the Irvine Auditorium. The cast included Ada Gossler, George Henry, and Arthur McKay. Marjorie Frundt was in charge of properties and Margaret Hollenbach was prompter.

The group will attend sessions of a three-day conference on dramatics. They plan to attend a performance of Eugene O'Neill's "Diff'runt" at Hedgerow. After a banquet at which Walter Huston will be guest of honor, they will see him in Saroyan's new play, "Love's Old Sweet Song."

Also on the Olympics program will be a group of plays by other eastern colleges and a discussion period for criticisms and suggestions about the plays presented.

This is the third play to be presented at the Cultural Olympics by the Domino Club. Last year the club presented "A Merry Death," and the previous year the highly successful "Proposal."

Men's Glee Club Goes To New York

With Prof. John H. Duddy as their director and piano accompanist, the Men's Glee Club will leave tomorrow morning on a two-day trip.

The chorus will sing in Richmond Hill, Long Island, Sunday morning. Next month, the combined glee clubs will travel to Norristown and Williamsport.

Martin Epstein Convention Head

Wizards of the test tube from 15 colleges in eastern Pennsylvania and Delaware will lock up their experiments tomorrow to attend the annual Intercollegiate Student Chemists' convention in Mervin Pfeiffer hall of science.

When the session is called to order at 9 o'clock in the morning, the following 12 schools are expected to answer the roll call: Franklin and Marshall, Muhlenberg, Lebanon Valley, Lafayette, Drexel, Swarthmore, Temple, Delaware, Ursinus, Haverford, Cedar Crest, Gettysburg, and Albright.

The 150 students who attend the gathering will hear research papers read, one from each school; they will hear Dr. Harrison E. Howe, editor of "Industrial and Engineering Chemistry," speak; and then they'll get an idea of what Reading's like.

After registering in the morning the laboratory specialists will meet in the science hall until 12.30. Then they will eat a luncheon in the dining hall. Dr. Howe will speak after that. Climaxing the day's activities will be the tour of Reading's high points of interest including Carpenter Steel and Wyomissing Industries, Reading Hospital, Reading Museum, Skyline drive, and many other places. And regardless of the type traffic system in operation on Saturday, the chemists won't have to worry about red lights. The police escort from the city will do that.

Martin Epstein, general chairman of the convention, appointed the

On exhibition in the library at present is a group of water colors by Ernst Weisswange, a student at the Wyomissing Institute of Fine Arts.

The sketches, which have appeared at the Reading Museum of Fine Arts and the Aqua-Chromatic Exhibit in New York, were secured by Mrs. Freda W. Ledford and Mrs. John C. Evans. They picture scenes abroad and in Pennsylvania, and represent a cross-section of different types of work, some being partly drawn with charcoal.

Book Review . . .

"The Sea Tower," Sir Hugh Walpole's newest contribution to book lovers, is one of the most interesting and unusual books of the year. It is a study of strange and human relationships, beautifully patterned and colored by the magic pen of Sir Hugh.

"The Sea Tower" is the story of Christina, a young girl from the streets of London, who married Joe Fields, a man from a bleak estate on the grim, gray, Cornish coast. Immediately after their marriage, Christina and Joe go to the Tower at Scarlatt—to the mother who has always held absolute domination over her sons' lives, and who proposes to have no interference in her dictatorship. Bessie Field's hate for her son's wife grows and deepens like an acid burn until her mind is hopelessly warped by her obsession for power and complete domination.

This book resembles "Rebecca" in that it creates the same feeling of tautness and horror as Miss Du Maurier's novel. "The Sea Tower," however, lacks the tone and intensity of "Rebecca" because the disintegration of character in it is not so skillfully handled and polished. The plot of the novel is also remarkably like that of the play, "The Silver Cord." The situation is almost identical to that of the play, but the setting and results are different. "The Sea Tower" is then almost a composition masterpiece of "Rebecca" and "The Silver Cord," but perhaps the likeness is so strong that some of the freshness is taken from "The Sea Tower" because of it.

Sir Hugh's trick of putting the description of the climax into a letter written by Christina three months after the event is a clever variation of structure that cannot be overlooked. The concluding chapter, then, becomes anticlimax, but it is the final touch of genuine skill that marks Hugh Walpole as a master craftsman. A Walpole story is always full of charm and artistry and is certainly hard to beat.

"The Sea Tower" should become one of the more popular books of current fiction, because it is definitely stamped with the appeal that always enhances a Walpole novel. Although "The Sea Tower" does not possess all of the ear-marks of a really good novel, it has that certain something that makes a novel above reproach even with its imperfections.

The Snooper

In the spring a young man's fancy lightly turns to — hair cuts! — the spangler kind.

Question of the season—Whom shall I ask to the Co-Ed Dance?

We wonder whether Charles Hollenbach will be destined to a Black future.

Butcher is still troubled with Spotts before his eyes. (Very bad symptoms, Doc.)

Do you know that Anne Marie's ideal has real red hair?

Ben Funk and his lads will be playing for the dance tonight—here's a tip—better make intermission long enough so's you don't run out of songs.

Some advice to Mim Weidener—Keep your chin up!

Is the Siegel-Williams case patched up yet?

We hereby employ someone to keep Donald Buxton awake during his 11.30 classes.

Is your "inspiration" still with you, George?

Incidentally—right now Tommy seems to think everything including school is oh—Kay!

Those conversations in the library seem mighty interesting, Marjorie.

There haven't been any recent cracks about hammocks—What's the trouble, Harry? You're slipping—rather the hammock is.

Don Blackmore's poetry sounds rather good—mind if we publish some of it some time?

Funny how an autograph can start so many things—Isn't it, Adele?

Galinas surely has her man trained—he's actually becoming hen-pecked.

Sometimes Holly just seems to have the Art of doing things!

Those visual ed. girls are becoming real carpenters—they're working with wood anyway.

Is Mary Etta's big he-man coming down for the Co-Ed dance? Just ask her!

Soja is an easy name to pronounce—still some Reading Hi teachers bawl everything up.

Tom Johnson just Hain't in the mood for studying these days—what's the matter, Red?—Spring Fever?

There's a romance pending between Shays and Shhh—we'll let the rest up to you.

Seems that Ziggy still isn't satisfied even though he has a page to himself in the Cue—what more do you want, my boy?

Winnie and Weaver — ain't love grand!

Supple's theme song from now on — "I want the waiter."

This is leap year—spring and everything else—come on people—do something so's the Snooper can do something too.

Chapel Speaker Discusses Negro

That the negro is close to religion because of the parallel between the suffering of his life and that of Jesus Christ was one of the more pertinent remarks made by Dr. Stephen Gill Spottswood in his talk on "Jesus and the Negro," Monday morning, in chapel.

Dr. Spottswood, now preaching in Washington, D. C., is a graduate of the Albright Theological Seminary.

As a member of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America, Dr. Spottswood is active in working toward the elimination of racial discrimination, which he believes is a basic necessity in establishing a perfect society. Stating that there were problems on both sides of the color line which must be met, he presented a very fair view of the question, advocating education in race history as a feasible plan.

To carry out his theory of parallelism of the life of the negro and Christ, Dr. Spottswood used several negro spirituals as examples. He also drew a simile between the humble origin of each.

Perhaps two of his most condemning statements against the white race said there were only nine hospitals in which a negro interne could train, and, only two medical schools which he could attend. "The negro," he said, "is the last to be hired and first to be fired."

Alumni Notes

Glenn K. Morris, graduate of the class of 1918 and a member of the Zeta Omega Epsilon fraternity, was recently elected vice-president of the National Bank of Germantown and Trust Company, Philadelphia. For many years since his graduation Mr. Morris was associated with the Federal Reserve Bank of Philadelphia.

Louis Warne Labaw, who received his B. S. degree as a member of the class of 1938, has been elected to associate membership in Sigma Xi, national honorary scientific society, in the graduate school of Brown University. Dr. Labaw was chosen in recognition of his exceptional work in the field of physics.

Dr. Milton Geil led the Friendly Hour Group at Park Evangelical Church last Sunday evening. The question for discussion was "Why do some highly respectable boys frequently date girls whom they would not think of marrying?"

Prof. John C. Evans addressed a group at the Y. W. C. A. Part of his symposium was "The Outlook of Youth of America," treated from an economic standpoint.

All Bright Observations

By ALFRED COMSTOCK

"SCOTS WHA' HOE."

Last Sunday I returned to Reading on the Queen of the Valley, after having spent a very delightful week-end in the home town. Nothing so very remarkable about returning to Albright on "Queenie" (as I have come to call her, due to our long and intimate acquaintance), but there was something remarkable about this particular journey. That was Mr. McPherson and Mr. McGregor, two of the other passengers on board.

Not long after we pulled out of Jersey City, and while we were still traversing that oily strip of Bayonne peninsula between the Hague metropolis and Newark Bay, I was suddenly roused from my railroad reverie, by the unsteady passage of a large man, who had staggered down the aisle from the other end of the car, and as I looked up, I heard him exclaim: "Hoot mon! That wouldnae be McPherson, now, would it?" Whereupon the man who had slouched down in the seat in front of me sometime ago, and who until now had been completely dormant, rose from the dead, and became suddenly very active and loquacious. "Ay, is it you, McGregor?" Wouldja have anything in your-r-r pocket, now McGregor-r-r? Wouldja be having anything in your-r-r pocket, McGregor-r-r?"

A sudden lurch found Mr. McPherson and Mr. McGregor seated side by side, and in less time than it takes to say Scotch and soda Mr. McGregor was answering Mr. McPherson's query. The next time the inebriated Queenian caught my eye he was brandishing a quart bottle, wrapped up in a paper bag in one hand, and groping for a bottle opener with the other. A moment later he turned his glazed gaze on me, and asked if I had an opener.

I replied in the negative, and he rejoined: "your-r-r a man from Michigan! The man from Michigan never-r-r has a thing McPherson."

The latter promptly verified this geographical phenomena concerning Wolverine natives by announcing "Ay, McGregor-r-r. He never-r-r has a thing!" As you have probably observed already from the dialogue I have recorded so far, the R's of both gentlemen were rolled as neatly as a Y-B cigar. Quite a pause followed after which Mr. McGregor found the bottle opener, which he inserted in the cork of his quart bottle of Teachers. The next time I glanced his way he was taking a generous swig of it, and then following it up with a copious quaff of Crab Orchard. His theory no doubt was, "An Apple for the Teachers!" After holding each bottle aloft for awhile (one in each hand) he passed them on to Mr. McPherson, one at a time.

About this time he caught sight of the marshy waters of Newark Bay, whereupon he remarked to his slightly-herbed companion "Ay, Loch Lomond, McPherson."

"Loch Lomond, McGregor-r-r promptly confirmed McPherson.

When we reached the far off shore, McGregor evidently not up on his Scotch geography inquired:

SPORT SHOTS

By CARL MOGEL

It's certainly too bad that baseball is not included in the college sports program especially when there are excellent ball players on the campus. We know they are fine players because seven out of the nine outstanding pastimers are already signed to play with rural amateur teams or intend to in the near future. Chet Wielgolinski will play for Shoemakersville, Jack Munley and Sam Coccodrilli for Fleetwood and Whitey Quiren for Hamburg. Incidentally, Hamburg, Shoemakersville and Fleetwood are in the same league. Henry Czai-koski likes Cornwall, Bob Rettinger will accept Gablesville's terms, and Ray Shugard again intends to play with Mohnton. Stan Kuklis and Al Gustitus have not as yet made their intentions known.

Another thing before we leave this baseball subject, I don't know whether the majority of students were told this but your reporter was informed at the time baseball was dropped two years ago that an expanded inter-mural sports program was to take its place during the spring months. The Athletic office put it this way. Baseball, because it gave only a few a chance to participate will be dropped in order to give the majority of students a chance to participate in an expanded spring program through inter-mural sports. Last year the new program worked out, but this year the promised expanded program has become a contracted one. Softball was condensed into a month's activity and has only one league while last year it covered almost two months and had an A and B loop.

As you probably know the softball season opens on Monday. What can be done to make it an unparalleled success? First, the foul lines should be distinctly marked with lime. Second, the bleachers should be erected and well filled with students. Dr. Masters could throw out the first ball and lend color to the opening game. Third, an official scorekeeper should be appointed and the games reported to the school and local papers.

Plug Eshelman (and he'll be glad to tell you all about it) was one of the few who caught the limit on the opening day of trout season Monday. (A plug for a plug.)

The college will again sponsor a track meet for the county high schools which will take place at the stadium tomorrow afternoon. These boys from rural Berks are some of the finest in the whole state and are worth watching in excellent competition.

The tennis team is hoping the weather permits them to play their first match tomorrow afternoon at Rutgers University. Snow and rain postponed the Lafayette match at Easton last Saturday while rain spoiled most of the scheduled tennis practices this week.

The much discussed ping-pong tournament is scheduled to get under way this week. Eight groups on the campus, including the faculty, will compete for the championship. Two singles and a doubles match will be played between two groups before they can advance.

A.P.O.'s Meet Pi Tau's In Season's Inaugural

Six Official Referees Named

Softball, king of the inter-mural sports, will make its belated appearance Monday evening, when the A. P. O.'s and the Pi Tau's tangle in the inaugural game of a one month season.

There are five contests scheduled for the initial week. Following the A. P. O.—Pi Tau clash on Monday evening, the Kappas-Day Student game on Wednesday afternoon and the Zetas-Theologs contest on Wednesday evening are the next docketed. On Thursday afternoon the Zetas take on the Day Students and on Thursday after supper the A. P. O.'s clash with the Theologs to close the week's schedule.

Six capable umpires have been chosen by Mr. Harris to officiate the games. Sam Coccodrilli, Gus Cohen, Bob Rettinger, Al Gustitus, Carlyle Fabian, and Al Roup will have complete charge and are to be respected. The complete schedule

The Lions Den

By ALAN R. DUKE

Vic Gigli the Tamaqua Terror, entered the National A. A. U. Championships at Philadelphia, last Friday night "loaded for bear." It appears, however, that it wasn't Vic's night. He lost out in the quarter-finals to a big cornhusker from the University of Iowa in a fight that was all Gigli for the first round and part of the second. It seems that Vic was a bit careless coming out of a clinch in the second round and took a hard punch that proved his nemesis later on in the fight. The ironic twist to the whole affair was the fact that the winner of the championship in Vic's class was the fellow whom Vic defeated badly to take the Middle Atlantic A. A. U. Championship at Tamaqua. It all goes to show you what one luck punch can do. Well, Vic claims he has learned his lesson and that's something, anyhow.

The football men came back from the scrimmage at F. and M. with the report that the Diplomats have a wealth of backfield material. All the fellows claim that their backs run low and hard. The scrimmage was certainly worthwhile in one respect, since it gave our squad an idea of what they will be up against this fall. Let's hope they profit by this knowledge and work harder than ever.

Our track team is badly in need of high hurdlers. To date, the squad is utterly devoid of any resemblance to a timber-topper in the 110-Yard event. In the event that no high hurdlers are available, it will mean that Albright will forfeit nine points every meet. This is a serious handicap to any team, so if any of you fellows can hurdle or, for that matter, participate in any track event at all, report for practice immediately and help the team—there is still time to get in shape for the second meet with Dickinson College.

Girls Begin Tennis Practice

The girl's tennis squad, coached by Mrs. Mosser, is preparing for its coming matches with Lebanon Valley, Moravian and Drexel by working out at the 11th and Pike courts.

The team will consist of seven players whose positions will be determined by intra-team matches. At present the standings of the players are as follows:

- Betty Dietz.
- Bessie Knerr.
- Olga Bitler.
- Mary Etta Filbert.
- Caroline Hastings.
- Jeanette Snyder.
- Kitty Geib.

A captain will be elected by the members of the team later on.

OBSERVATIONS

"And what toone be this, McPherson?"

"I dinna ken nae more, McGregor, I dinna ken nae more," replied McPherson, almost tearfully.

McGregor proceeding as though nothing had happened asked again: "Wha'toone is this McPherson, and when McPherson shook his head, advanced this interesting list of information, "ya cannae beat a Caledonian ya cannae beat aun." "Ay, McGregor-r-r, ya cannae beat a Caledonian."

"This kept up, back and forth, for nearly five minutes, each confirming the other with ever increasing emphasis. Soon after that the bottles again appeared.

McGregor is on the floor! no he isn't! — yes he is! He's up! He's down!—but never quite out. 'cause he's all lit up. He's up! Hello what's this! Ingenious man! He's opening the bottle by employing the ledge above the car window as an opener. Hooray, he did it! I didn't know he had it in him! At it again. The bottle, I mean.

At the same moment a lady across the isle was holding a chubby infant, and forcing the nipple of a nursing bottle between its lips. What's this, though. Don't tell me there has been a rife in our beautiful Caledonian comradeship. Oh sorrow!

"Ya cannae do it, McGregor-r-r ya cannae do it! ya cannae do it" we hear Tom O'Shanter McPherson cry almost hysterically, "ya cannae be hogging the bottle McGregor-r-r ya cannae do it! Evidently McPherson underestimated his friends capacity. Meanwhile McGregor turned about and looked at me for approbation, no doubt, when I turned my head away, mostly as a sign of disgust he misinterpreted my action and said reassuringly: "Ya neednae fear a Scotchman, laddie. Ya neednae fear aun."

Soon after this the conductor appeared in the door way, announcing "High Bridge, High Bridge," and my Celtic friends rose unsteadily, gathered up their belongings, and made their exit. I had sus-
