ALBRIGHT CAMPUS TO BE SCENE OF ANNUAL Y. M. CONFERENCE POLING AND CRANE SPEAKERS

200 Students From Eastern Colleges Will Attend
Big College Affair

DR. HENRY H. CRANE

On November 1, 2, 3, our campus will be the scene of the Student Y. M. C. A. Conference for Eastern Pennsylvania. There will be a live and inspired group of young men gathered here from thirty of our leading schools in this section of the state representing their student bodies at this great gathering. It is believed that it will be the greatest conference held in this section, both in the number of registered delegates and in the strength of the splendid program which has been arranged.

Two outstanding contemporary leaders of American thought, Dr. Henry H. Crane, of Scranton, and Dr. Daniel A. Poling, of New York City, will be featured in a program of addresses and discussions planned for the annual Y. M. C. A. Fall Students' Conference of Eastern Pennsylvania Colleges, which will be held this year at Reading, November 1, 2, and 3. Dr. Poling is the pastor of Marble Collegiate Presbyterian Church in New York, and Dr. Crane is minister of the Elm Park Methodist parish in Scranton. Both are talented and widely known speakers.

The program has been planned with the purpose of uplifting the triangle; body, mind and spirit, which the Y. M. C. A. stands for, and with this end in view the various committees have spared no effort in receiving the best for the delegates and friends. The other features on the program, the social contact with our collegiate friends, the splendid gymnasium offering development of the body, the fellowship with each other and with our Elder Brother Jesus Christ, all tend to make us justly feel that to be at this conference will mean much to us during the school year.

The world is looking for men today; men of Christ-like character; men who are not for sale; men with convictions of justice and righteousness; men who are true to the core, and we believe that this conference offers possibilities for development of leadership and manhood, such as the world needs today. With this end in view the conference has been designed, and we know that those who do come here will be better prepared for the activities of school life, prepared for real manhood, broadened in mind so that they will be able to take their places in the sea of life and make a name for themselves, as well as do good for their fellows. Abraham Lincoln said in his youth, "I will study and get ready and maybe my chance will come." He studied; he prepared himself, his chance came, and God used him. We must study, we must sit at the feet of consecrated men, we must associate with others, we must know Jesus, and our chance will come and God can use our lives for much good.

DR. DANIEL A. POLING

Our local group is preparing to welcome the guests in a real warm manner. They have much before them, and we want to do our best to promote and extend the spirit of fellowship, so that they may feel that this conference has been a vital part of their lives.

To Begin Friday

The Conference will begin at 2 o'clock on Friday, and will continue through until noon Sunday, with a full-day program scheduled for Saturday. The Saturday program includes the annual banquet at 6 o'clock in the evening, preceded by a football game at 2:30. Paul Meng and Dr. Poling will address the banquet. The Saturday and Sunday roster will be begun by a brief morning watch service.

It is anticipated that over two hundred delegates will attend. If this number is reached, it will be the largest registration in the history of the conference. An invitation to attend is being extended to all college men.

We know they will come expecting a great time and as we do our best to entertain them, we are sure they will feel welcome and enjoy themselves on this, the campus of the new and Greater Albright.

THE VALUE OF INTERCOLLEGIATE DEBATE

Intercollegiate debate has held a prominent place among college activities for a long time. Fifteen or twenty years ago it was more popular than it is now. This decline of interest in debate is due to several causes: debating has been governed too much by the rules of the contest; debating has been concerned more with winning the contest rather than in seeking the truth on both sides of the question; and finally, intercollegiate athletics has almost completely eclipsed all forensic interest in many colleges. Yet notwithstanding the undue emphasis placed upon intercollegiate athletics—particularly football—here and there are signs of renewed interest in debate. Moreover, if the coaches in debate, instead of giving their services for the good of cause, were compensated somewhat in the same proportions as the coaches in athletics, there would soon be a revival of interest in this eminently worthwhile subject. Further, if scholarships, as in football, were offered as an inducement to attract good debaters, there would soon be no lack of enthusiasm and competition in forensics.

In discussion, in the first place, is of practical value and of universal application. Convictions about the real issues of life express themselves in the open forum or in public discussion. Since successful debating involves original and constructive thinking, the result is increased mental power and alertness. The good debater must be a good thinker. Often it is a battle of wits. The debater, therefore, early has an opportunity to shape the ideas and the opinions of his fellows. Qualities of leadership are thus developed, for the good debater soon becomes a marked man. His chances of winning lasting renown as a scholar for his alma mater are vastly greater than the meteoric career of the hero of this year's football squad. And whatever the form the question may take—whether it be socialism, lobbying, naval disarmament, or what-not—debate acquires a passion for the beliefs register truth and progress. The debater who is, therefore, honestly trying to present and defend these right convictions and intelligent policies, is engaged in a practical and a worthy task. Hence debate is often freely prescribed for teachers, preachers, journalists, engineers, politicians, lawyers, and salesmen. But there is no good reason why debate should be limited to these special fields; for everybody, because of the practical value of debate, and in order to have a thorough education—everybody should have a course in this subject. And this is the reason why one semester's work in the sophomore year is required in this subject at Penn State College, at Swarthmore, and at other high-ranking colleges in the east. Finally, it should be evident to all that the practical value of debate is not in winning the contest; rather the actual value of debate is realized after graduation when one engages in the real contests of life.

Intercollegiate debate not only has its practical aspect, but that it also affords a liberal cultural training, no one who has engaged in such work, will seriously question. "The only way to arrive at the truth of a proposition," says Bernard Shaw, "is to discuss with reckless abandon both sides of the question." If, then, the debater acquires a passion for the pursuit of truth, instead of debating for debate's sake, he will soon possess the humanistic ideal. "To know the truth that makes one free indeed," is distinctly a spiritual aim. Not only so, but the good debater does more than to make an analysis of his subject; he synthesizes his knowledge, and he evolves a philosophy for unifying the field of knowledge, so that it will give a consistent and spiritual explanation of life. Now intercollegiate debate sets the student's mind to work that leads to greater elasticity of thought; it generates power to state great issues; it helps to form judgments in their solution; and it affords increased facility in communication. Intercollegiate debating is the beginning of a liberal education, and as such it deserves a prominent place in every college curriculum.

GENTLE HINTS

The freshmen conception of college life seems to a great extent to be warped. In the minds of some of these budding geniuses, college seems to be a place for general Cain-raising. This is erroneous. While we are forced to admit that the fine art of whoopee-making has been best mastered by the majority of college students, still, if you examine the catalogue or gaze into a classroom, you may find that other things are done too. We realize that one doesn't get the same thrill out of a math class as one would out of setting a barn on fire; but in the end, perhaps, it is best not to have the kick. The first semester kick is rather to be shunned than sought after. We KNOW, for we went through it.

Then, of course, there is the very select group of Frosh that regard rules as things to be broken. Let us remind them that such is not the case. When rules are broken, paddles will be broken. So far, the freshmen have gotten away with murder. Steps are being taken to hang the murderers.

And while we are on this subject, suppose we remind the Sophomores and Upper-classmen that—WHILE THE SOPHOMORE CLASS CAN TAKE CARE OF THE FRESHMEN, A MORE EFFICIENT AND SMOOTHLY WORKING MACHINE MAY BE PUT INTO OPERATION IF THE UPPER CLASSES BACK UP THE SOPHOMORES.

At present, the Freshmen are the best organized of any class. Why? Because the merger of Albright and Schuylkill has produced a breach in all classes. The Albright and old Schuylkill factions MUST work together, otherwise there will not be unity for years to come.

SALT AND PEPPER

"It's the little things in life that tell!" said the girl as she yanked her kid brother from under the divan.

Stud: "You had no business cutting me out of class."
Prof.: "But Dave, it wasn't business; it was pleasure."

What's the ro-MAN-ce without the man?

"Successful men are usually bald; they just naturally come out on top," ask Dave Neff—he knows."

"It's my turn now!" exclaimed the freshman as he fled into the dining room after the Sophs.

"When is your room mate thinking of getting down to real study?"
"Frequently."

1st Room Mate: "Nice hat you have on."

2nd Room Mate: "Yes, I'll let you wear it sometime."
1st Room Mate: "May I really wear my own hat—some time?"

Charley Haines: "If you won't marry me, I'll blow my brains out!"
Sweet Young Thing: "Oh, Charley, how could you!"

Ginnie: "Who parted your hair?"
Alyce: "Why?"

Ginnie: "It looks like the 4th St. Loop."

AUSTRALASIAN POSSESSIONS OF THE BRITISH EMPIRE

In order to understand the history, institutions and government of New Zealand, one must first of all trace the evolution of the large expanse of territory in the Southern Pacific, which is called Australia. The islands of Australia and New Zealand, together with numerous other smaller islands, are called the Australasian Possessions of the British Empire. The evolution of any one of these islands is rather intricately related with the entire group. This is particularly true with the early history of New Zealand.

Years before the Dutch founded Australia we had a group of shipwrecked sailors landing in what was later called New Zealand. Those first settlers turned out to be entirely unfit to promote the exploitation and the colonization of the island. As a result, they soon got into difficulties with the natives, who eventually exterminated these first white settlers. The island consequently remained obscure and unsettled until after the discovery of Australia proper. The fact that these early undesirable settlers were destroyed was of prime importance to the country, since it is problematical whether New Zealand could have launched its progressive social reform program if it had had to contend with an inferior minority.

A Dutchman, Tasman by name, made an extended exploration of the coast of Australia and New Zealand during the middle of the seventeenth century. Approximately, at the end of the eighteenth century, an Englishman, Captain Cook, came to these islands and took possession of them in the name of England, because the Dutch made little effort in taking permanent control of them. In 1788, the English established a penal settlement at Botany Bay (now Sydney) Australia, to which English convicts were sent. Finally, however, the chief settlers of this country were freemen from England, who objected strenuously to these convicts, who in their estimation were undesirable colonists. Therefore, in 1840 the transportation of convicts was officially abolished. In 1851, gold was discovered, rivaled only by the deposits discovered a little earlier in California. A tremendous immigration ensued. The population of the Colony of Victoria increased from 70,000 to more than 300,000 in five years.

In a comparatively short time, five colonies grew up, New South Wales, Queensland, South Australia, Western Australia and the neighboring island of Tasmania. Common interests, as well as the fear of the expansion of Germany in the Southern Pacific, gave birth to a movement for union. It found a great leader in Henry Parkes, who started agitation for a union, by calling various conferences of the colonies. A constitutional convention, held in 1897-98, drafted a constitution which was incorporated in an act passed by the British Parliament in 1900. It established the Commonwealth of Australia, a federal union of six states modeled on that of the United States. The central government consists of a popularly elected Senate, representing the states equally, and a House of Representatives, representing the people. The government is carried on, as in England, by a ministry responsible to the Lower House. The Supreme Court interprets the Constitution.

New Zealand is not included in the Commonwealth of Australia. Geographically, New Zealand consists of a number of islands, situated about 1,200 miles east of Australia. The first attempts of the English at colonization date back to 1815, but it was only in 1839 that these islands were formally annexed to the British Empire. In 1854 New Zealand was granted responsible government and in 1865 it was entirely separated from New South Wales and became a separate colony. Emigration to the new colony was carefully supervised. From the very beginning agitation against convict settlers was launched. In fact, New Zealand was never a penal colony and as a result can

Society Notes

Since the clear night skies, blustering winds, and painted leaves whisper their story of brisker weather, we turn to thoughts of Halloween and mid-night masquerades. Perhaps some of these recent week-end gatherings are planning big "spook" affairs—who knows. At least, certain clubs on the campus, especially "Quill" and "Dominoes" are scheming huge things. Look out for announcements and be prepared.

Anita Miller spent last week-end at her home in Easton, and was unable to return at the beginning of the week because of illness.

Miss Mary Buch, of last year's class of '29, returned to the campus for a short visit Sunday.

The concert on last Thursday night was enjoyed exceedingly by all those fortunate enough to have heard it. Gina Pinnera is one of our really valuable stars. The preliminary recital by the Music Department, was thoroughly worth-while.

The three hussies third floor Freshmen spent their usual week-end at home: Mildred Reichley, Dorothy Robinhold, and Jeanette Eisenhower.

"Zazu" Hoffman brilliantly outshone all the bright lights of Denver this past week-end when she visited relatives there.

Jeanette Eisenhower had a birthday theatre party on Monday evening, October 21. Mildred Reichley, Dorothy Robinhold, "Zazu" Hoffman, Helen Buch, and "Reenie" Fray were her guests.

"Derty" Dettlerline, "Snooky" Kelchner, Pearl Ansel, Julia Uhrich and Viola Wiest have the highest batting average on second floor for home-runs. They spent the week-end at Reamstown, Fleetwood, Sunset Hall, Wernersville, Myerstown and Ephrata respectively.

Kathryn Hoffman attended a fraternity dance at Franklin and Marshall College last week-end.

The Quill Club held a Turkish Coffee party on Tuesday evening. Wits were sharpened to unusual keenness as the creative work was produced.

Miss Polly Richards entertained Miss Clara Smith and Miss Grace Rosenberger of the class of '29, and former president of the Y. W. C. A., who visited the college on Saturday.

The "Arty-Arters" are organizing themselves into a Sketch Club so that very important branch of our present collegiate program is not omitted from its deserved position in extracurricular activities.

LUTHERAN STUDENTS WILL ORGANIZE

A fireside tea on the afternoon of the 13th of October, was a delightful means of rallying all the Lutheran students of the college into one group for the purpose of organizing a club with Miss Carlach as faculty advisor. Due to her painstaking and untiring efforts, it had become a traditional occurrence at old Albright to have this friendly association formed at the beginning of each scholastic year. In accordance with the precedent there, the new Albrightians have likewise applied for admission into the national circle. The purpose is none other than that of giving the student a feeling of "oneness"—unity with his fellow churchmen in this college and those of the rest of the United States.

Miss Winston, secretary of the National organization, told the group of the splendid work which is being done by the New England students and those of the western districts. It is her hope that the group on this campus will lend its wholehearted support to the building project of the Penn State field.

The Rev. Mr. Luke Switzer, of the Church of the Nativity in this city, extended a most cordial invitation to the group to consider his church as their church home, and him as their much interested pastor and councillor at all times.

Mrs. H. D. Levengood, president of the Inner Mission Society of Reading, extended hearty greetings to the students in behalf of that organization.

Sister Edith Baden, of the Girls' Hospice, extended to the girls the privilege of entertaining their week-end guests there. She also made an appeal for volunteers in the work of the Inner Mission.

After the social meeting, a short business session was held for election of officers. Miss Pearl Ansel received the presidency, and Miss Violet Heffly, the secretary-treasurer.

You Lutherans who were not in attendance at that meeting, make this your year of Reformation. Lend your cooperation and interest to the group. Make it as active a one as that of Harvard.

Facts About the Debating Team

This is a busy season for Coach Weber and his debaters getting in trim for the forthcoming debate with Victoria College from Wellington, New Zealand, which will be held in connection with the Albright "All College Night" at the Orpheum theatre, November 6.

Several practice debates are being arranged to be held before the local clubs and societies in the city, in a final effort to determine who will represent Albright on that evening.

Coach Weber's scheme of having the team meet at mealtime at the Debaters' Table in the dining hall is a good one. Here they talk over and discuss any questions and subjects relative to the coming debate on November 6. Faculty members are invited from time to time to lunch with the squad and at the same time offer valuable suggestions upon the question for debate. It is hard to estimate the value of this close relationship between Coach, visiting faculty members and team.

Douglas I. Cloud is a member of the Junior Class and a resident of Reading. Cloud captained his high school team for two years, after which he entered Washington and Lee University, where he was active in social work as well as debating. While at W. and L., he taught Education in a girls' seminary. Doug has made quite a study of the art of debating, which Coach Weber was quick to discover and so placed him on the squad after several intensive tryouts. Either the ministry or teaching will be his profession after graduation from college.

Marian Virginia Costello, also a member of the Junior Class, and a resident of Reading, although she claims Bridgeport, Conn., as her birthplace. Marian debated in high school for two years and continued her good work in college, where she was selected for the Debating Team for the past two years. She has taught in the Daily Vacation Bible School and has engaged in playground work. After leaving Albright she plans to teach or enter library work.

Preston Haas, member of the Senior Class and a native of Philadelphia, Mass. Preston was active in high school literary circles, and is a former vice president of the college debating society. After a year at Drew Theological Seminary, he returned to Albright. He is at present serving as a Methodist Episcopal church in Philadelphia, and intends to remain in the ministry upon graduation from college.

Hazel A. Hill, member of the Junior Class, and a native of Reading. Another member of the squad who began debating activities in high school. Hazel also made the team last year. She has taught elocution for one year, having graduated from the Schuylkill College School of Oratory and Elocution (now known as greater Albright) and has been engaged in playground work for the past two years. Teaching is her aim after graduating from college.

George Daniel Hoag, member of the Senior Class, and a resident of Pittsfield, Mass. George did some forensic work in high school, after which he took some courses at Worcester Polytechnic Institute. Both at Worcester Tech and here at Albright he has studied debating quite thoroughly. Last year he won second prize in the Junior-Senior Oratorical Contest. He is at present serving a preaching charge at New Berlineville and one at Limerick, Pa., and intends to continue his preaching after graduation.

Nevin Haws Hollinger, member of the Junior Class and a native of Reading. "Nev" debated in high school for two years, and in his Senior year there, won the William Luten Debating Medal. Entering Hobart College, he secured a place on the Freshman Debating Team. Last year he participated in several debates, on the old Schuylkill squad. Law will engage his attention when he graduates from Albright.

DOMINOES TO STAGE PLAY

The College Dramatic Club is launching its first production of this year at the Orpheum, held in connection with the New Zealand debate, scheduled to formally open the Forensic season, November Sixth, by staging "The Wedding Present," a one act comedy drama by William Carson.

At a very eventful meeting of the club, three plays were discussed for this honorary position of first production of the season. "The Wedding Present," "The Morgue" and "The Travelers." After a considerable debate, "The Wedding Present" was finally selected by a committee appointed for that purpose, because of its real merit and extraordinary development of both plot and dialog.

The cast of three characters, chosen by Dean Shaffer, coach of the club, is as follows:

"Bob" Gordon, the groom in the case of a young married couple just returning from their honeymoon, portrayed by Glenn Shaffer;

His wife, who misplaced a very important "list," played by Edyth Eyerman;

And "Jim" Dixon, the cause of a lot of anxiety, a friend of the new-llyweds, William Burkhardt.

As for the play itself, it is fairly bubbling over with mirth provoking situations. The characters work themselves into a veritable maze of tangles as the first shadows of disagreement and trouble mar the nuptial bliss of the pair—all due to—but never mind, you've just got to see it for yourself. We won't say anymore now, because with the Orpheum stage for the production November Sixth, the play will be seen and heard as well as merely talked about or read.

AUSTRALASIAN POSSESSIONS

boast of a very good and progressive the country was able to launch such a remarkable program of social reform. The population increased and population. This is one reason why gradually it became known throughout the domains of the British Empire as the most democratic colony of the empire. In 1907 the colony received the official appellation of the Dominion of New Zealand.

New Zealand is somewhat larger than Great Britain, its area being 104,751 square miles. It has a population of 1,200,000, of whom approximately 50,000 are aborigines, the Maoris. The capital of the Dominion is Wellington, which has a population of 100,000. Another important city is Auckland.

The Dominion is governed by a governor-general and a general assembly. The governor-general is appointed by the Crown, while the assembly represents the people and is chosen by the people. The general assembly consists of a legislative council of 41 members and a house of 80 paid representatives.

The dominant industry is sheep-raising. Dairy farming, mainly the production of cheese and butter, is of growing importance. Wheat, oats and barley are raised for local consumption. Coal is mined in some sections and gold, when discovered, increased the importance of the islands, constitutes one of its most important products.

Social Reforms

New Zealand is famous throughout the world because of its experiments in social reform. This obscure Dominion has really surpassed the rest of the world in the regulation of social conduct and the passing of laws concerning labor and capital, land-owning and commerce.

The government owns and operates the railroads, the telegraph and telephones, and conducts postal savings banks. Life insurance is for the most part directly controlled by it. The government has a fire and accident insurance department. In 1903 it undertook the operation and control of the state coal mines. Its laws governing monopolies and trusts are of such a democratic and socialistic character that these instruments of the modern industrial world scarcely are able to exist. The agrarian laws are remarkable, in that they prevent the monopolizing of estates by private individuals, and virtually enable the people to become the ultimate holders of the land. In 1892 progressive taxation on the larger estates was adopted, and in 1896 the sale of all large, landed estates to the government was made compulsory. As a result of this law, large tracts of valuable land have come under the control of the government, which is used advantageously by it for the promotion of still better agrarian relations. In 1898 an Old-Age Pension Law was enacted, providing pensions of about $165.00 a year for all men and women after the age of 65 whose income is less than $5.00 a week. The Advance to Settlers Act in 1894 provided for government loans to farmers. An Industrial Conciliation and Arbitration Act in 1895 created a court to settle disputes between trade unions and capitalists. New Zealand is far ahead of the rest of the world in this respect.

Victoria College

Victoria College, one of the four colleges affiliated with the University of New Zealand, was founded in 1899, at Wellington, New Zealand. It opened its doors to 124 students and has since grown to a student body of over one thousand with 20 lecturers. The college is named after Queen Victoria, whose diamond jubilee was celebrated during the year of its foundation.

The college is itself of picturesque harbor of Port Nicholson upon which architecture, being built of brick and clad with ivy. Situated on the hill at Kelburn, it overlooks the beautiful harbor of Port Nicholson upon which Wellington is situated.

DEBATING SCHEDULE

Albright College has made an enviable record in athletics. This record was achieved primarily by the playing of well-established and well known institutions. The respect and admiration which Albright athletic teams have earned from their opponents is deserving of the loyal cooperation and gratitude of every Albrightian. This phase of college life is important, but it is only one integral part of a school's program. We dare not allow ourselves to become narrow and think only in terms of our athletic achievements. Let us begin to realize that Albright also needs a debating team—it needs a debating team just as much as it needs a good football team—because all the students do not play football. Some of the students are endowed with argumentative abilities which the institution must develop, if it intends to be fair and unstinted in its scholastic and collegiate education.

We believe that Albright College is destined to attain forensic recognition throughout the collegiate world. In order for it to do this, it must first of all have a schedule worthy of the name. Bearing these facts in mind, data for debates with some of the leading colleges in the country are in the process of formation, such schools as Bucknell, Gettysburg, Franklin & Marshall, Lafayette and others. In a supreme effort to revive forensics, negotiations are under way to conduct most of the debates in suitable halls in the city, in order to secure the support of the alumni of the various schools which are debated. Everything will be done to make this activity a real vital part of college life, so that by failing to attend them, the student loses a very important means of self-advancement. Furthermore, the program will not only be interesting, but will be composed of the talent in the other activities of the college. Debating this year means likewise entertainment, and entertainment of the best calibre.

One of the paramount features of this year's schedule will be the probable Southern trip through the states of Maryland and Virginia. Negotiations with Western Maryland College, Roanoke, and William and Mary are in progress. This itinerary will in all probability occur the last week in February, and will be the first attempt of any Albright debating team to undertake such a venture. This should be an added incentive to make the activity an enviable one. The entire trip will take a week or ten days.

Gettysburg College will be debated February 14, at Reading. This will be the first time that these two schools have met on the rostrum and promises to be one of the most interesting. The Gettysburg Alumni will in all probability take advantage of this opportunity to hear the debate. Juniata College, whose debating teams are always clever and exceptional, will be opposed by Albright February 6, according to the information now available. The dates for the debates with Bucknell, Temple, Franklin & Marshall, have not been definitely decided upon. The entire schedule will be completed by December 1.

final yardage. Seasholtz failing to kick the placement, the score now standing 20 to 6. Joe Norris almost immediately awoke the crowd with startling long runs—on a tackle play he netted 23... later assisted by excellent interference traveled 25 yards for a touchdown.

Shortly after this the B backfield trotted on the field. The foe punted to Albright's 43 yard line; Charley Haines racing by left tackle, along the boundary line—jaunted half the length of the field before he finally crossed the last white barrier.

Andrews made a trip of 30 yards; Schwartzner, Hatton and Weigle constantly accounting for short gains. Our scrappy Capt. MacFarlane left the game with a badly lacerated chin. Neff was carried off the field in an unconscious condition a few minutes later. Carney as usual seemed everywhere on the field. Ends Karlip and Pichocolas displayed remarkable playing pro and con.

Of course, Jimmy Snyder is always on the spot when a crisis arises. The team was glad to hear that Ding Schaeffer has recuperated sufficiently to leave the hospital for a home rest.

Dance at Country Club Was Well Attended

The Green Valley Country Club echoed to the strains of the stirring syncopation of the Reading Collegians last Saturday evening.

A goody force of Albright's best socializers turned out for the affair and danced until well past midnight.

A feature of the evening was the "Paul Jones" at which everyone became well acquainted, and the night progressed uproariously with the aid of paper hats and lemon punch.

The students are looking forward to attending a number of such interesting and intimate social affairs during the year. Let's not disappoint them.

BIBLE CLASS HIKE

Friends,—Albrightians,—Countrymen! Lend us your earphones. How would you like to be pepped up for the game on Saturday? Well, here's the way to do it, folks, so step right this way. Friday night, October 25, leaving the chapel steps at 7:30 p. m. the Bible Class invites you to Albright's 3 in-1; beginning with a hike and emerging into a pep meeting. And—oh yes! The P. S. is a Doggie Roast in between. You cannot afford to miss this auspicious occasion. So come, ye proud host of Albright campus, garb on that smile and join the happy throng going up and over the top of the mountain.

SENIOR CLASS ORGANIZES ALBRIGHT TEAM

As the semester has sufficiently progressed for members of the graduating class to become acquainted, and as accumulated business has necessitated immediate action, officers were elected at a post-chapel meeting, on Tuesday last. The following members were chosen by ballot: president, Henry Zehner; vice president, Harry Houseal; Secretary, Anna Benninger; treasurer, John Tucker.

QUILLSTERS HOLD TRYOUT

The Writers' Club will stage its last tryout in Sherman Cottage, next Tuesday at 8 o'clock. Only as a part of the interesting program. The several pledges will present original papers. Filling out the remainder of the evening, several interesting literary games will be played.

As a novel performance of the meeting, two of the members have planned an interpretive pantomime.

Thesians Rally

The Thesians Literary Society made its formal debut for this year on Monday evening, October 21, in the social rooms of Selwyn Hall. This society affords the one opportunity in the week for all Dormitory and Day Students to meet and enjoy a real, lively social hour together.

Last week the society met to elect officers for the ensuing term (officers are elected three times each year, thereby providing ample opportunity for the girls to exert some leadership). The following is the result of the election:

President Mary Hetrich
Vice-President Lydia Schober
Secretary Martha Yagle
Treasurer Marguerite Leng
Chaplain Anita Miller
Critic Norma Michael
Pianist Mildred Nissinger
Ushers Cynthia Wallace

The programs of the Thesians are varied and interesting. They include all phases of entertainment from music to dramatics. Each person is given some role to play during the year. The following program was rendered on Monday, Oct. 21:

The next meeting of the society will be held at 7:00 p. m. on Monday evening, October 28, in the social rooms of Selwyn Hall.
