

Paper Initiates Trial Editorships; Beal Resigns

The practice of giving staff members of The Albrightian experience in learning the editorial end of publishing a college paper will be continued this year, announced Eileen O'Neil, editor, and a six-week period of trial editorships for the paper will start with the February 11 issue.

At the same time Miss O'Neil announced the resignation of William Beal as news editor of the sheet. Beal will become a special student with the beginning of the second semester and cannot carry extracurricular activities. The Albrightian will continue without a permanent news editor during the trial editorship period and until the appointment of 1947-48 editors in April.

Approximately eighteen staff members have signed up for trial positions in the news, features, sports, and business departments.

2nd Semester Chapel Lists Rabbi Regner, Dr. Wood, and Smith

Rabbi Sidney I. Regner, head of the Keshet Zion Synagogue at Thirteenth and Perkiomen, will be the featured speaker at the first three chapel programs after semester recess, February 5, 6, and 7. Rabbi Regner will talk on the subject "Tolerance".

Dr. Joseph Wood, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Reading, will speak at sophomore assembly Monday, February 10.

Tuesday, February 11, Dean Levan Smith will lead a panel discussion on freshman guidance, based on articles which have appeared in The Albrightian.

Roger Barnes, a staff member of the Central Y.M.C.A., will speak on "The Purpose and Program of the Y", in the assemblies of February 12, 13, and 14.

Laucks Elected Pres. Of Zeta Fraternity

Gerald Laucks is newly-elected president of the Zeta Omega Epsilon Fraternity, it was decided at the last fraternity meeting. Other newly-chosen officers are Ralph Miller, vice-president; Perry Matz, secretary-treasurer; and Robert Reed, chaplain.

Plans have been discussed and are being formulated for an active Zeta alumni association.

Two active Zetas are graduating at the end of this semester, Dennis Ertel, retiring president, and Herb Vogt. They were commended by the fraternity for their leadership and participation in the group.

Recess

Following the last examination Friday, classes will be discontinued until 8 a. m. next Wednesday, announced the Office of the Dean. Junior-senior chapel will be held at that time.

Registration for second semester sessions was held last Thursday under the direction of Registrar Newton S. Danford.

The next issue of The Albrightian will appear February 11, following mid-year vacation.

Dean Joins Reading University Women

Helen Cunliffe, dean of women, has been elected to the board of the Reading Chapter of the American Association of University Women. Dean Cunliffe also will speak on "Marriage As A Career" at St. John's Lutheran Church. She will address a group of young people as part of an orientation series at this church.

I.R.C. Delegation To Go to Confab

Locals Study Philippines For Model Assembly

A delegation of four Albright students with their advisor Dr. Milton W. Hamilton, will travel to the annual Model General Assembly of the United Nations at Swarthmore College April 3, 4, 5, says International Relations Club president, Geraldine Wentzel.

Dr. Hamilton will select the student delegation who will represent Albright, one of forty colleges participating in the discussions concerning world relations. The Albright group has been assigned the Philippine Islands as their topic of study.

Each student, explained Miss Wentzel, will be appointed to one of four main committees: politics and security; economy and finance; social and humanitarian policies; and atomic energy.

This gathering of I.R.C. clubs of various colleges will be conducted in much the same manner as the conference of last spring, when it convened at Lafayette College.

Students and Faculty Listen to Thompson

A large group of students and faculty members participated in the second of the series of faculty-sponsored vespers last Sunday evening in the College Chapel. The Rev. Paul W. Thompson, rector of Christ Episcopal Church, delivered the sermon, and a short devotional program followed.

A buffet luncheon, a regular feature of the faculty vespers, was served in the College Dining Hall.

William Marlow will lead the regular vesper services next Sunday, February 9, when he will speak on "The Major Emphasis of the Christian Message".

Vespers, Bible classes, and noon-day worship services have been discontinued during examination week and until after the semester vacation.

Frederick Heads Test Bureau; Beal Assists

Reed Frederick, an Albright graduate, has been made head of the psychometric department at the Veterans' Guidance Center on the Albright campus, announced Dr. Milton G. Geil, head of the Guidance Center. Frederick was a psychology major under Dr. Geil and has worked part-time with him in the clinic since 1945.

Beginning February 5, William Beal will assist Frederick in the testing department. Caroline Schmel, M.A., head of psychometric for the past year, will now serve the Center as an appraiser.

Senate Will Sponsor Spring Mardi Gras

Meeting for the last time this semester, Women's Student Senate last Wednesday decided to sponsor a Mardi Gras in May, with the cooperation of sororities, fraternities, day, and dorm groups. Further details, including the name of the Mardi Gras chairman, will be released later, said Joy Cutler, president.

Joyce Thompson is chairman of a committee to investigate a campus project for which the Mardi Gras proceeds may be used. Serving with her are Beverly Morgan, Agnes Snyder, and Marian Gerberich.

Frosh Guidance

Introductions

By Newell Wert

There goes a beautiful girl, five feet two, etc. — you know. Well, you would like to meet her. "An introduction" is the first idea that strikes you. That goes for you girls, too, when you see the man of your dreams. "Introduction" is the key word. It can make you or break you.

All friendships start by some sort of an introduction. Someday you will want to start using your education in a tangible way. You will want to meet people who can employ you or help you to develop your abilities. If you are going to sweat and get heat flashes just outside the office door or even three steps away from the girl you are about to meet, you are a goner.

Start right now to proceed correctly in introductions, for every introduction is important — even if you are meeting a bill collector. This "Please to meetcha" or "Glad to know ya" stuff does not go. Your friend to be is going to wonder what kind of double talk you are handing him. Or if you are introduced to a person in the fraternity or sorority you would like to join, and you mumble some embarrassed, indistinguishable salutation, the impression you make will be as flat as a pancake. Speak distinctly and sincerely. You might even try to think of something original to say. Please do not gush, girls. That is suzy.

Winburn Thomas, Leader in Youth Activities, to Guide Emphasis Week

Dr. Winburn T. Thomas, general secretary of the student volunteer movement for Christian Missions, will be the leading speaker in the annual Religious Emphasis Week March 24-27, revealed Prof. Eugene H. Barth, director of religious activities. A lawyer and world traveler as well as a minister, Dr. Thomas engaged in student and social work in Japan for seven years.

European Visitor

As chairman of the International Student Service Commission, he visited nineteen universities in the French, British, American, and Russian zones of Germany. The Commission's report induced World Student Relief to undertake a program of material aid among the students of Germany. During the summer and autumn of 1946, he "met the Russians" in Poland, Czechoslovakia and Germany.

Daywomen's Council Schedules Soup Sale To Benefit Treasury

A soup sale to be held Thursday, February 13 during the noon hour was the main plan developed at a meeting of the Daywomen's Council last week. Daywomen who are students in the home economics department will prepare the soup, which will be sold at a profit. The money collected will be turned over to the daywomen's treasury.

The sale will be held in the Lower Social Room and the soup will supplement the lunches brought by many daystudents from home.

Final arrangements were drawn up at the meeting for the "Snow Ball", a semi-formal dance being jointly held by the daywomen and daymen at the Berkshire Hotel Friday night.

Premiere Day

If anyone is in a movie mood during exam week, let this be a reminder that a special event is taking place in Reading tomorrow, a real, live Hollywood world premiere, featuring the new suspense thriller, "Bedelia", the first presentation of a newly-formed film company, Eagle-Lion, Inc. Starring Margaret Lockwood, the film will have its premiere tomorrow night at the Astor Theatre.

Reading was selected as the world premiere city because it is considered a typical American community and a great movie-going city. There will also be a broadcast from the theatre lobby at 8 p. m., along with special interviews. Mayor Stump has delegated Wednesday as "world premiere day".

Those Exam Week Blues

When asked "what she thought about exams, a bright sophomore replied "That's a good question." Yes, there have been lots of "good questions" asked since last Friday, and there will be a lot more. Indeed, for the freshmen, it is only the beginning! But don't worry frosh, even Einstein fumbled math the first time.

Maybe the change in the weather has had something to do with those lackadaisical feelings. Anyway, it has been a good reason to forget exams and clean house. Even the Zeta boarders were seen washing windows — that's something!

And now let's peek into the Selwyn Hall dorms and see what we can see (Oh boy!). According to authoritative sources (I had no way of checking this), the place is actually quite. No, the women aren't sleeping; in fact, they're up studying (?) all hours of the night. One student says it's chem, another says it's bio, and still another says it's a mess. They say Doris Chanin studied history for 28 hours. Well, Doris won't feel so bad when she hears about George Hummer. George studied history for 35 hours, took the exam, finished in half an hour, and missed only one question — something about "Who was a contemporary of Charlemagne?"

But what's this we hear about Marjorie Christ? It is said (I confirmed this myself) that Christie went to bed reading her religion notes and woke up sitting in a chair. That takes the cake! Oh, well, not every student thinks exam-week is tough. I met one the other day who thought it was marvelous to have all this time to herself. She must be one of those "brains" who breezes through a test in ten minutes.

Here's a story about a student taking Prof Barth's religion exam. The professor announced that only six out of eight questions needed to be answered. After the professor wrote the first two on the board, the student was heard to remark "the other six better be good, 'cause I don't know those two". By the way, fellas, if you notice any of the girls wearing homemade suits next week, don't be astonished. They will be (Continued on Page 3) visited nineteen universities in the French, British, American, and Russian zones of Germany. The Commission's report induced World Student Relief to undertake a program of material aid among the students of Germany. During the summer and autumn of 1946, he "met the Russians" in Poland, Czechoslovakia and Germany.

While working with liberal Japanese religious and political personalities in Japan, of whom Kagawa was the leader, Dr. Thomas became familiar with the forces shaping occupation policies operating in that land. Having also traveled in Korea and China, he is acquainted with the needs and aspirations of the peoples of the Far East.

Academic Career

The speaker studied at William Jewell College, Liberty, Mo.; Oklahoma University; McCormick Theological Seminary, Chicago; the University of Chicago; and Yale University Graduate School. He is a member of the Oklahoma State Bar, and is at present organizing a quadrennial missionary conference for 1947-48.

Other Activities

In addition to his other diverse activities, Dr. Thomas is chairman of the executive committee of the United Student Christian Council, which as the American section of the World's Student Christian Federation, coordinates cooperative aspects of the student work of the Y.M.C.A., the Y.W.C.A., and of thirteen Protestant church agencies.

Pi Tau Pick Yeagley, Induct New Members

The Pi Tau Beta Fraternity installed Heber Yeagley as new president of the brotherhood at an induction ceremony last week in Sherman Cottage. At the same time four upperclassmen were initiated into the fraternity.

Other new Pi Tau officers include Russell Luck, vice-president; Charles Stump, treasurer; Ira Custman, scribe; and Allen Fisher, chaplain.

The initiates are Robert Thomas, Richard Heberling, John Allen, and David Voigt.

The traditional fraternity installation was used and refreshments were served after the meeting.

Attention!

To organization leaders:

It was pointed out at a recent Student Council meeting that many of the organizations holding social events are not getting their chaperone slips in on time.

In the future if your organization is planning a social event it is highly important that you get your select chaperones and have them approved well in advance. Remember there is a college ruling that unless your chaperones are in one week in advance the social event which you were planning can be canceled.

Au Revoir

With our next issue of February 11, The Albrightian loses the able services of its news editor, Bill Beal. As a competent and loyal right-hand to the editors, he will be missed, especially on those hectic Thursday nights when the paper is put to press.

"Willie," however, has promised to drop in the office often and give us an unofficial hand with the work in between his activities at the Veterans' Guidance Center. So we'll be seeing you around, Bill.

Airing Their Views

Well, it seems that the letter from a student in last week's issue caused quite a lot of comment on campus. It at least had the effect of causing a number of people to put into expression their ideas, which is always a good thing.

Your editors hope, however, that we will not lose our perspective in this whole issue, forget that "we are all civilians now, praise the Lord," and turn into a campus split into factions. None of us at Albright wants that.

Letters such as THE ALBRIGHTIAN has been receiving lately have been thoughtfully and intelligently thought out, and, we think, have been considerable help in clearing the air of certain ideas that have been floating around.

We sincerely hope that the result of the interest aroused in the original letter will be renewed understanding on the part of everyone else's problems in college life.

Intelligent, unprejudiced understanding is the main thing we all lack and desperately need at Albright.

Get Out the Paint Remover

An indignant letter from a Gettysburg student recently informed us that the student body has been assessed one hundred dollars to pay the costs of removing the paint which Gettysburg rooters smeared on Albright's campus last November.

That student seemed to feel the whole thing had been done as a playful little joke and as a great way of showing school spirit. He couldn't understand why we shouldn't pay to remove the tasteful little decorating job ourselves.

Obviously, authorities didn't see it that way, and a just punishment was exacted for the painting spree.

It ought to be clear to everyone that colleges must be getting exceedingly tired of having permanent, disfiguring reminders of athletic contests on their campuses.

Home Ec Omelet

The meeting of the HEO Club last Monday proved to be so interesting to its members that perhaps the high points of the meeting might be interesting to some other Albright students. "Foods of foreign countries" was the topic for the evening, and it was ably discussed by Carl Bretz, Jake Sklover, and Professor Consuelo Rodriguez.

Carl Bretz told of the New Year's dinner which he ate in Japan last year. The menus consisted of hot sachi, rice wine (which Carl didn't like), pickles, salad of onion tops with sour dressing and octopus. The last item, Carl described as being crisp, crunchy, and cold. The dessert was a rare delicacy to the Japanese but Carl couldn't seem to be at all enthused about rice cakes. Green tea and tangerines were served after dinner. Carl said, quietly, that he enjoyed the dinner, and then, happily, that he was glad to be headed back to camp and good old American turkey.

Jake Sklover discussed food in North Africa. Because of the unreliability of the purity of the water, it seems that wine is used for everything from appetizers to brushing the teeth. A typical menu was as follows: sweet wine, soup that was undefinable, wine, fish, sweet potatoes, and tomatoes. The primary foods of the natives are rice, meat, and lettuce.

Professor Rodriguez told of food in Spanish speaking countries. People of these countries have their big dinner, which is our Christmas dinner, on January 6th or the Day of the Three Kings. On this day, the meal is very elaborate. Prof. Rodriguez advised us that if we were planning to visit a foreign country, we would assure our enjoyment of the visit if we first learned to eat their foods, speak their language and sing their songs.

A Vet's Voice

By Mort
Or a Small Paradise Lost
Mort denies that there has ever been anything critical in this column, which is written purely for amusement.

This week's story is of Mabel Hackelheimer, girl veteran and lovable student. After being freed from military service, Mabel entered Clanghaven College — which was much the same as most other colleges.

At Clanghaven, Mabel Hackelheimer was extremely happy. She was out of service and free from absurd rules and regulations, which are unknown in colleges, it says here. Mabel was happy her first few days at college. (That's what they keep telling her down at the office). Miss H. didn't mind not being able to smoke, she chewed tobacco anyway; neither did she mind not being able to wear slacks on campus because she was proud of her legs (which resembled those of a valuable antique piano).

Mabel liked the dean of women, Matilda Bluster, too, and agreed with her that kissing was sinful because it led to smearing of the lipstick which is simply frightful. She agreed that holding hands was not morally correct either, since one loses more wrist watches that way.

Mabel Hackelheimer liked her dormitory and most of all the social room or parlor as it is called at Clanghaven, because in the parlor she could sit on a couch with her boyfriend friend and observe the "one-foot line." Mabel never ventured to pull down the shades nor close the parlor doors, because she liked an audience and besides the electric charge would probably burn her hands anyway. All these things, including signing out for her hour at night, Mabel Hackelheimer liked. It really was surprising when she re-enlisted in the WACS after two weeks at Clanghaven.

Those Albright Lions who carry a heavy curriculum have probably often wondered how some of their fellow classmates are able to negotiate extracurricular activities. We won't attempt to formulate a method but we do wish to bring to everyone's attention this week's Dandy Lion Russell Guensch, who did not simply become interested in sports at Albright as extra-curricular activity; on the contrary, this record of activities began in Reading High, sandwiched in by other activities connected with the "castle's" weekly sheet, the Red and Black.

After a martial interruption so common to most fellows in college today, Russ returned to Albright; not to the class of '45, but to the class of '47. The Kappas were glad to welcome a brother; the Alchemists a member; and to top this, Coach Harris welcomed a really top-flight basketball player. You would never have learned from Russ that he is at present our top scorer at Albright, and has as a result placed his name among the first ten basketball scorers in Pennsylvania. In the light of this, it is fitting that he should be president of the Varsity A Club. The Kappas also claim him as pilot of the fraternity.

So hats off to Russell Guensch as he joins Albright's passing parade, moving on toward graduation juggling organic molecules with one hand and dribbling basketballs with the other—a Dandy Lion.

put a wet blanket on any potential friendship.

How about shaking hands? A warm, hearty handshake is sure to cement a friendship. It is a mark of real cordiality. Because women like to be more dainty, it is their prerogative not to indulge in such strenuous exercise. If it is man to man, shake hands. If man meets woman, or vice versa, the woman extends her hand first, otherwise, it is no go. If it is woman to woman, either one may extend her hand, though it is rarely done.

Everything may be going fine until you take hold of a cold, clammy, lifeless paw. That spoils it all. A cold shiver travels your spine and you wonder if the person is human. Do not try to break anyone's hand, but let your handshake as well as your words convey sincerity. Girls especially are apt to be in the "fish" handshake class, so beware.

Emily Post may be a joke to you, but do not be afraid to do things like this correctly. It will pay off eventually in friendship and happiness.

SENATE

The women drew up final plans for the extensive student government conference to be held March 10. Eileen O'Neil, vice-president of Senate, is general chairman of the conference. On her committee are Grace Miller, Miss Gerberich, Joan House, and Helen Capozello.

Miss O'Neil is in charge of publicity, and Miss Miller of registration; while Cleta Rein and Marjorie Christ will arrange a hostess schedule, and Geraldine Wentzel, secretary-treasurer of Senate, and Miss Capozello have charge of properties.

Prof: "Give for one year the number of tons of coal shipped out of this country."
Frosh: "1492—none."

BY ANNE ONYMONIS

I don't know just how much this means, but Carl Keen, intellectual super-abundant, has closed his books long enough to bestow a smile and a few graceful words on Barbara Knauer, who, incidentally, has been waiting 2 1/2 years for just that.

Tom Henry has a downtown publicity department all his own — rather cute too. Her name is Joan and she asks everyone she meets if they know Thomas Henry, who is greater than his great-grandfather Patrick.

Vi Seibert is majoring in philosophy and religious education in hopes of becoming a minister's wife. Maybe that has something to do with her constant companionship with William Marlow.

You fellas can cross Ferne Allen off your list—she has finally said yes to that boy back home. After looking around the campus, Annie can only congratulate her good sense.

Next week our boys are taking on Kutztown again. Last time we got a letter after the game telling us to let Hops Guldin at home because the Kutztown co-eds were cheering the wrong team.

Elaine Schwartz has disappeared into the Science Hall jungle and has not been found yet. The safari from the trek into the wilds reports that all evidence points to her capture by Tarzan Ron Ridolfi—lucky woman.

Russ Guensch has gone Parisian—he's setting styles for Albright's male population. The chapeaux he's been wearing lately has given him the reputation of being "a man of distinction."

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor:

May the undersigned by this letter extend to you congratulations for your policy of causing The Albrightian to perform the innate functions of any press. To any society based upon democratic principles, a free press is essential so that the deeds of the society may be objectively adjudged. Only through such objective judgment may society avoid the cardinal sins of smugness and vanity.

In particular does this letter refer to a column entitled "A Vet's Voice", written by a certain "Mort". That the columnist does not always echo the opinions of all the faculty, administration, or student body is quite apparent. However, through publishing columns of this nature in an UNCENSORED AND UNADULTERATED FORM, you provide Albright with a mirror by which she may see herself as others see her.

So, here's to a greater Albright, to be accomplished by more and more writings of such as "Mort".

—Signed by sixteen residents of the Zeta House and friends.

Dear Editor:

Before the conclusion of the war there was a great deal of talk by the people and not by the vets, of all the marvelous things they would do upon their return. "Wait until the vets get back" was a common and often highly satisfactory conclusion to many of the post war (to be) problems . . . this could easily be referred to as another form of "passing the buck". This seemed the happy and conventional medium which enlarged its ranks with many who had the fashionable "wait till the vets get back" idea. It seemed that when the vet did return he would solve post war problems galore, set up programs whereby each and every problem would be history in short order.

So, the vet came back . . . did he organize politically and spend his time and effort on post-war problems . . . no, he did the unprecedented and unforgivable thing of going quietly home and trying to pick up where he left off at . . . it seems that he had enough of regimentation and organization.

The average returning vet was the same man who left, though older and in some cases older by more years than those spent in the service. A great many of them had seen and done things which conditioned them to the stage where the average "excitement" found during the course of a day on campus was just another day to them. The terrific force of realism which came with war has caused many to attach importance in a lesser degree to a great many things. The average vet may have a family at home, he may be having a hard time at his studies, or he may not have the interest in campus organizations as much as he might have had had he gone directly to college from high school.

"Wait until the vets come back" gradually changed to "those troublesome vets" . . . when a wayward vet got into trouble it gave strength to "those troublesome vets". When the trolley overturned near the Albright stadium I heard the "those crazy vets" remark several times. Few seem to realize that when they speak of the vets they are not referring to a few but to practically every able-bodied male in the U. S. and if the majority of the vets are in the wrong (the vets on our campus can be referred to as a satisfactory representation of the average college vet) as to their social and organizational activities, then something must be wrong with the social and organizational units since it has been generally stated that the majority is generally backed with reason.

—A Veteran.

To the editor:

To the student who asked the veterans who gripe about campus to pitch in and correct things they don't like, I write this reply.

First, I impress upon you that this is not a belligerent or offensive reply. It is not even defensive; for I know each of the vets can defend himself. So I classify this article under "clarification."

As long as you can support your criticism with concrete facts, there is no reason for you to hesitate "sticking your neck out" to air your opinions.

I acknowledge your mentioning the fine academic record of the veterans, and the fact that many of them are married and have children to occupy their time off campus. I also realize that there are some ex-GI's who haven't gotten out of the habit of uttering idle gripes and failing to contribute toward any thing constructive on campus. (Perhaps if we furnished Rev. Barth with the proper tool, he would punch these boys' tickets for them.) The questions in my mind are—"Is this group of complaining vets very large compared to the present 330 or more ex-servicemen on campus?"—And—"How does it compare with the corresponding group of non-veterans on campus?"

I thank Mary Jane Thompson, Kenneth Good, and Mr. Charles Gordon for furnishing the following data which will present a better view of the veterans' representation in Albright activities.

The vice-president of Student Council and seventy-five per cent of the men in Council are veterans. The presidents of the freshman, junior, and senior classes are veterans; and at least three other offices in these classes are held by ex-GI's.

Seventeen of the fraternities and clubs on campus admit men into their membership. There are a total of fifty-nine offices held in these organizations; and twenty-four are filled by former service men. All of these officers were elected during the February to June of 1946 semester, when there were approximately 200 non-veterans and 100 vets matriculating at Albright College.

Twenty-three of the thirty-five men on our football team, and one of the coaches, are former service men. Eight of the eleven men playing on the varsity basketball team served their share of K.P. The ed-

RAY D. FIDLER

Inquiring Reporter

Since we have been hearing a great deal of talk concerning the column "A Vet's Voice" by Mort, we thought it might be a good idea to find out actually what campus opinion is.

So in answer to the question "What do you think of the column 'A Vet's Voice'?" the following replies were received:

Evans Keim — Pre-Min. — '49—Very enlightening satirical comment on college life.

Jack Shafer — Pre-Min. — '47—Good to hear their side—both groups should express themselves more.

Marian Gerberich — Home Ec. — '48 — The vets deserve a voice in The Albrightian.

Mary Ellen Hill — Home Ec. — '47—The column adds life to the paper.

Dick Bertolette—Pre-Med.—'47—Is it expressive of the true vets' attitude?

Lynn Brown—chem.—'47 — Most cleverly written part — The Albrightian.

Gene Shollenberger — bio.—'49—It's a good deal.

Agnes Snyder — soc. — '47 — I think it's a very amusing satire.

Prof. Eugene Barth — I think it's a good project—especially where it might help reveal how we might improve student-faculty understanding.

Mildred Abrams—home ec.—'47—Very good but instead of always being destructive should be more constructive.

Jean Schwartz—pre-vet.—'49—If people being criticized can't take this as a joke and laugh it off, they're not broad minded enough to be in college.

Forrest Dunkelberger—pre-law—'47—The expressions remind me too much of the army.

the home ec students who have to complete their semester's "project" by tomorrow.

For you psych students taking Dr. Geil's exam tomorrow, take a tip—go to a movie tonight and toss a coin tomorrow.

And to the folks who have the courage to take Prof. Green's biology exam, I dedicate this little rhyme:

Alas, and alack, came the fateful class
I hoped and I prayed
That at least I would pass.
I looked at the test
And Oh! Was I sunk
For he asked all the stuff
That I thought was bunk!

When Prof Gates reads the paper he makes sure no one else sees it—he reads a page, tears it out, crumbles it, and tosses it aside. By the time he finishes the paper he bought at Fifth and Penn, the trolley looks like an ash man's cart.

Joe Kubisen remembers Scranton as would a bubble dancer who was a victim of a pea-shooter. On the way from the shower-room to the lockers, someone stole his towel.

Kriebel is living up to the Biblical commandments — especially "Thou shalt go with Joy".

Since Henri Morrison announced her engagement to ex-marine Dick Good, she has been screaming along with the rest of the "sharp" world, "Open the door, Richard".

Student: "No, sir, I'm taking the course over again."

Prof: "Extraordinary resemblance, nevertheless!"

Judge: "Why don't you settle this thing out of court?"

Defendants: "That's what we were doing when the police came and interfered."

Teacher: "Johnny, give me two pronouns."
Johnny: "Who, me?"

Teacher: "That's right, Johnny: good work."

Kappas, Chi Phi Pace Frat Loop; Pi Taus Loom As Contenders

Albright's wide open Intramural League finished its second big swing last week with the Kappas still holding most of the trump. However the league race is still everybody's ball game, and the Kappas can look for plenty of competition especially from the undefeated Chi Phis and the up-and-coming Pi Taus. The latter club has shown plenty of strength as they rolled over the A.P.O.'s and Phi Mus.

Elsewhere in the loop the Kappas steamrolled over the Delta Rhos while the Chi Phis bounced Psi Betas and polished off the A.P.O.'s. The Zeta powerhouse finally won their first game by bulldozing the Sigma Mu, who accounted for the loop other win by knocking off the potent Lamba Chis.

Currently setting the scoring pace in the wheel are the Pi Taus' Ernie Kachline and the Zeta's Red Lamberson with 57 points apiece. Jerry Pedota of the Chi Phis and Vic Gigli of the Kappas are right behind with 48 and 45 respectively.

This week exams and pinhole will force the loop to remain idle, but look for more action-packed contests beginning with games on February 5. Contests scheduled for February 3 will be knocked off for the end of the season. So far as the Reading sports scribers say, "Go to bed early the night before and enjoy the game."

The traffic officer became highly enraged at an elderly woman who, after he'd flagged her to stay on the sidewalk, strolled calmly into the street.

"Lady, regarded the officer, 'don't you know what it means when I hold up my hand?'"

"I ought to," she snapped. "For the last 25 years I've been a school-teacher!"

Albright Lassies Lose to Ursinus

Woerle, Thompson Star In Season's First Tilt

In the first game of the season a snappy Ursinus sextet bowled over the struggling Albright lassies, last Tuesday, to the tune of 38-15 on the opponent's home court. The red-clad gals from Collegeville lost no time in getting started as they glided the ball in for basket after basket with short quick passes. The Ursinus forwards rolled up the score in spite of the brilliant playing of the Albright guards. The forwards from Reading couldn't seem to find the hoop. Finally however, lanky Ginny Woerle broke the ice with a left hand pivot shot. Jeanne Fleckinger followed with two points, and Woerle dunked two more pivot shots to bring the half time score up to 20-8.

Connie Warren starred for the opposition by gathering sixteen points. The Ursinus team outscored the Albrightians in every quarter, collecting sixteen counters to Albright's seven in the last half. Joyce Thompson slipped in for the red and white and shortly thereafter garnered Albright's last goal. The final score was 36-15.

In the J.V. game, the Ursinus sextet, with fast passing and tricky shooting, smothered the Albrightians 36-13. Kay Loomis was high for the victors with 14 points while Miss Thompson garnered scoring honors for the baby Lionettes with eight tabs.

Kutztown Dribblers At Northwest Saturday

Kutztown's "Golden Avalanche," recently reduced to the "Tarnished Sandunes," will sneak its way to the Northwest wing this Saturday night via the McKnight Street entrance. It so happens that Parrise will have his Roaring Lions at the same gym that night not to mention the three thousand odd fans that will also be on hand.

Kutztown's sorely taxed basketball team is currently in the depths of a five-game slump, and the chances are that their quiet entrance into Northwest will not better the situation. Albright's point-happy Lions, always somewhat contemptuous of our country cousins, will pack all their team miseries into one big game. The result will doubtless send the unhappy "Tarnished Sandunes," so called by the local sporting journalists, back to their cornfields in a frustrated state of mind.

Coach Harris will indubitably throw his usual quintet into the breach Saturday night, whereas Avalanche Coach Walt Risley will attempt to counter with Mickey Moll, Ray Rauen Zahn, Dick Brierly, Jeff Marks and Chuck Norris. However, only under ultra favorable conditions will Kutztown gun for win number three.

Anlian, Guensch Lead Rout; Marcincin High for Greyhounds

Eddie Anlian

Moravian's barking Greyhounds crawled into the Roaring Lions' den last Saturday night and held the big cats to an all time low of 4-4 at the end of the first quarter. But the angry Lions pounced back with a terrific three-quarter barrage and before the yelping Greyhounds could scamper back to their kennels, the Lions had piled up a new high of 71 points and their second straight victory.

The highly publicized scoring duel between Russ Guensch and Paul Marcincin was thrown into the background as big Eddie Anlian blazed the way for both teams with 22 points. Marcincin paced the hounds with 21 points while Russ Guensch was hitting the hoops for 13.

Greyhounds Show Spunk

The first quarter proved to be quite a shock for the two and a half thousand Lion fans. Both sides worked the ball carefully and it was almost three minutes before Elmer Davis stuck in the first point on a foul shot. Marcincin followed with a set shot to put the hounds ahead. Guensch and Guldin added three points for the Lions in the last two minutes of the frame while Ropos added a Greyhound deuce to knot the score 4-4 at the quarter.

Rolling into the second frame, Eddie Anlian hit home for his first two points, but Marcincin hopped off on his own scoring spree to put the Greyhounds ahead 9-6 for the second and last time. Johnny Yeum fixed up this deficit with three consecutive foul points. Ed Anlian's set shot showed the Lions ahead while teammates Hops Guldin, Elwood Oxenreider and Elmer Davis were also pouring it on for a grand total of sixteen points. Kraus, Leary and Marcincin kept the dogs in hailing distance as the half ended with the Lions on top 20-14.

Lions Pile It On

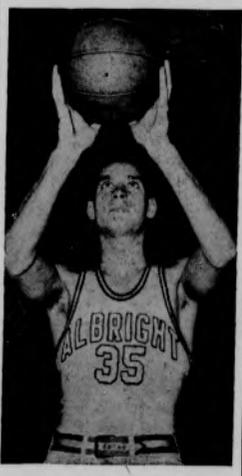

The third period found the Lion machine gathering real momentum. The Greyhounds turned on a brief scoring threat as Kraus rattled the hoops for four straight field goals to bring the hounds within one point of our Lions. But Anlian, Guensch, Guldin, Oxenreider and Davis put on a 22 point show in this period to insure the lead. Marcincin and Kraus split the entire period's scoring for the doggies between them as they saw the Lions drive ahead 42-30.

The Lion attack its climax in the final frame as they cut lose with 29 big tallies to notch a total of 71 points for their season's best effort. Ed Anlian canned 12 points while teammate Russ Guensch was right behind with eight big markers. The most the shattered Greyhounds could register was a total of eight counters and these were racked up by yeomen Marcincin and Ropos. The Albright victory virtually clinched the Middle Atlantic Conference for the Albright quintet.

Doc Douds Rolls 202; Barth Hits New Low

Well, what do we have here! Our professors are going for bowling in a big way. There are quite a few upsets this week. Take a look at Dr. Douds! He registered 202 and led the way with an average of 167.3. His average last week was 117.3. He was 12th on the hit parade last week but now look at him—our top man. On the other side of the fence, however, look at Rev. Barth. He has dropped from a 162 to 115. Too bad, don't those "spoonerisms" agree with you? Widdowson also came up this week to fifth place. He was low man last time.

Our miracle man Gates has dropped again this week to a 133. Something drastic has to be done to Khouri! He seems to stick around a 125. Those study guides must have cramped his bowling arm.

Speaking of history profs, Hamilton came up 14 points this week. Keep it up, profs!
