DR. KIRBY PAGE LEADS COLLEGIATE SEMINAR IN SOCIAL LECTURES

"Two thousand business directors controlling the wealth of this nation is a matter of life and death of the entire population of this nation," Kirby Page, associate editor of The Christian Century, pointed out to a capacity audience at the regular chapel service on Tuesday morning, as he opened the intercollegiate seminar with over fifty delegates representing five different colleges of Pennsylvania. "We cannot permit unrestrained power in the hands of a few to make bonded slaves of everyone. Without collectiveness the highways of industry will not be open. What will result from collectiveness means the joy or sorrow of the cherished hopes of the youth of today."

This seminar was made possible through the co-operation of the National Christian Student Movement with Woodrow Bartges, president of the local "Y," as chairman of arrangements. Others on the committee included: Betty Campbell, Jean Goodling, Eugene Barth, Charles Moravec, J. Donald Book, Miss Florence Inns, and Dr. F. W. Gingrich. The colleges represented included Muhlenberg, Lebanon Valley, Franklin and Marshall, Kutztown State Teachers', Millersville State Teachers', West Chester State Teachers', and Elizabethtown State Teachers'.

The world traveler and author of sixteen volumes stated that everyone wants freedom, but most everyone is in bondage because of the economic, political, and national aims of a few individuals. "If we keep our freedom we will lose ourselves. We must relinquish nationalism for internationalism, or else suffer the loss of an orderly society. We shall lose our liberties if we don't give up the basic ideas of our frontier fathers. As a nation we are under disillusion because we cling to the old ideas of freedom."

With striking illustrations the youth leader pictured the history of the United States under the capitalistic system of economics and government, which is leading it into chaos and ruin at the present time. "The old individualism is going to be replaced, it is safe to say with finality, by collectiveness. We can-

MRS. CURRIER PRESENTS LECTURE AT WOMAN'S CLUB; PLAY OFFERED

As the closing feature of the activities of the Woman's club of Reading, on Thursday afternoon, March 7, Albright College was represented by Mrs. N. B. Currier, head of the art department, sented with the following cast: Whistler, In connection with this illustrative talk, a play, "Modern Art on Trial," was presented with the following cast: Whistler, Elliott Goldstan; Sergeant Parry, Paul Woodcock; attorney-generals, James Doyle and Alfred Kuhn; Judge Huddleston, G. Bailey Gass; the witnesses; Edward Burne Jones, Harold Heckler; James Frith, Hunter McKain; Thomas Taylor, Charles J. Moravec; court clerk, Martin Musket; and court stenographer, Stella Hetrich. The jury consisted of Misses Dorothy Butler, Ethel Shaffer, Margaret Eaches, Anna Mast, and Woodrow Bartges and James Kready. The play, written by Robert L. Work, acting librarian of the college, was directed and staged by Mrs. Currier and Mr. Work.

ALBRIGHT CHOSEN SCENE OF SPRING CONFERENCE FOR 25 PENNA. COLLEGES

Albright College has been chosen as the scene for the annual spring conference of the students and faculty members of the Y. M. C. A. of twenty-five different colleges of Pennsylvania. The conference will be held on May 2, 3, 4, and 5. Woodrow Bartges, president of the local "Y," will be in charge of arrangements. About 150 students will represent the various Christian organizations from the state schools.

Several of the sessions will be held in the college chapel, others in the School of Theology chapel, and the main sessions of the conference will be held in one of the nearby churches. The speaker has not been announced as yet, but negotiations are being made to get an outstanding leader in this field of work. Dr. Daniel Pollock, who spoke to the students recently, was the speaker at the last conference held at Gettysburg in December.

New state officers for the year will be elected at this conference. Two years ago the state president was an Albright junior, Lloyd Bringer. The committee representing the state organization is offering an extensive program of specialized speakers, fine entertainment, with the possibility of a Broadway play and the Lincoln quartet, which was acclaimed last year when it visited our campus.

Others on the committee planning this conference are: Charles J. Moravec, Lloyd Helt, Eugene Barth, William Basom, Gifford Webster, J. Donald Book, Forrest Rehrig, Jack Lanz, Adam Levensood, Harold Beaumont, John Wiley, Joseph Varygas, and Irvin Batdorf.

WEEK OF PRAYER

With the assistance of the administration and Dr. J. Warren Klein, the Week of Prayer services will be in charge of Dr. Norman C. Milliron, of the Pittsburgh Conference of the Evangelical Church. The various members of the "Y" cabinet will have charge of the devotional part of the chapel services and evening vespers. Mr. Milliron will address both groups in chapel and will conduct all the evening services.

DEBATING TEAM LEAVES MONDAY FOR ANNUAL TRIP

Local Orators Have Amassed Ten Victories Against One Loss; Meet Five Penna. Colleges in Tour

Although their consecutive winning streak was broken at seven, the crack Albright debating team is now launched on a new string of victories which has added three more matches.

Ursinus now stands as the only team to snatch a triumph over the Red and White, and even that decision was questioned by one judge out of three. The loss was marked up on Monday evening, March 4, and it is an illuminating fact that it was held in the college chapel. Jesse Heiges and Thos. Glassmoyer were the Ursinus speakers on the affirmative, vying with Irvin Batdorf and James Doyle. The judges were Rev. W. J. Arms; Mr. Allen Rank, of Wyomissing High School; and Miss Mildred Runyeon, of Reading High.

Kenneth Erdman and Elliott Goldstan resumed the victory march with a 2 to 1 verdict over Gettysburg College at Laureldale High School, in Muhlenberg Township. Like the other three debates reported here, this contest was conducted according to the Oregon plan. Samuel A. Schreckengast and Carl F. Chronister represented Gettysburg on the negative, with three of the high school faculty as judges.

Erdman and Goldstan likewise registered the first half of a double victory over Lebanon Valley, representing the affirmative side in a unanimous decision, at Annville, Tuesday evening. The judges were the Rev. K. Otis Spessard, Hon. Mr. David Hammond, and Prof. C. A. Boyer. Mark Hostetter and Calvin Reber spoke for the opposition.

Albright's negative team, consisting of Guy Brown and James Doyle, registered a 4 to 1 decision against the Lebanon Valley affirmative on Wednesday morning. The debate was held at Bethel High School, and was judged by five members of that institution's faculty. Willard Fetter and Adam Bigler upheld the affirmative for the Annville team.

DR. CHARLES E. ROTH TALKS TO QUILL SOCIETY ON DRAMATIC LITERATURE

Dr. Charles E. Roth, pastor of St. Andrews' Reformed Church, in speaking to the Quill club March 5 on "Dramatic Literature," convinced the literary minded students and friends that pageantry is becoming an important phase of writing for creative penmen. In talking of his experiences in the writing field, Dr. Roth, using vivid illustrations, advised the students to portray true characters, using the language that that person would use of he were alive. "Your characters must live as they are read about or as you see them on the stage."

Following the informal talk, a discussion period followed on various phases of drama and creative writing. The next meeting of the literary society will be on April 9 when Professor Dale Gramely, head of the journalism department at Lehigh University, addresses the students and their friends on "Breaking Into the Magazines." A short social will follow the address and informal discussion period.

It is a rumor based largely on fact that the Athletic Council is seriously considering the elimination of the baseball schedule this season. Such a view we heatedly oppose, if only for the reason that the 1935 team is potentially of championship calibre, with several brilliant Sophomores ready to step into the shoes vacated by the few graduates of last year's aggregation.

A methodical review of the reasons put forth by the Council might reveal these factors. First the football season was definitely a financial failure; rain on Saturdays was the rule rather than the exception, with ensuing diminution of profits. Second, the playing field is in terrible condition. Third, the postponement of the spring vacation has established football training and baseball practice in a confusing muddle, with authorities preferring to give football the top spot.

Instead of answering these arguments from a spectator's angle, we are printing a prospect from five players, four of whom will remain at school next year. The fact that all five of these men have played both football and baseball, for at least two years each, merits attention for this letter.

March 13, 1935.

We, the undersigned, find that the barriers raised by the Athletic Council against the continuance of baseball for the current year can be done away with, and can show that baseball can be put on a paying basis:

1. Instead of buying new uniforms, the old ones can be used.
2. The diamond in the stadium can be put into shape before the season starts.
 - (a). Players agree to aid in putting the field into shape.
 - (b). The field has to be fixed for the festival anyway.
3. The $150 allotment which goes for track can be turned over to the baseball team. Our track team is usually a two or three-man team, or at least has been for the past three or four years.
4. Last year baseball was a paying proposition, and will be this year.
 - (a). Four games at home and seven away from home.
5. Coach John Smith should be shown consideration for his remarkable baseball record, in order to compen-

"AH, WILDERNESS"! COMING

The outstanding stage event in recent years is the announcement of the stage presentation of Eugene O'Neill's famous comedy, "Ah, Wilderness"! with America's first actor, George M. Cohan, in the role that he played for a solid season on Broadway.

"Ah, Wilderness"! will be presented at Wilmer and Vincent's Capitol Theatre, Saturday, matinee and night, March 23.

The diagram for seat reservation for the public opens Monday morning, March 18, and remains open daily from 10 A. M. to 7 P. M. Phone calls for tickets will be accepted at the Capitol box office next Monday, March 18th.

"Ah, Wilderness"! as presented by the Theatre Guild, Inc., ran for eight months in New York City. On the coast it was played by Will Rogers, George M. Cohan, who has not appeared in Reading for many years, plays his original role of Nat Miller, owner of the Evening Globe, and the cast includes Jean Adair, Don Shenton, Elisha Cook, Jr., Edith Emerson, Freddie Strange, Jos. Allen, Catherine Proctor, Jack Byrne, Ruth Gilbert, and John Wynne.

"Ah, Wilderness"! produced by the Theatre Guild, as Eugene O'Neill intended it to be, enacted by George M. Cohan and a splendid cast, will come to Reading richer and mellower, if anything, than it was in New York last season. A warm, human comedy of a middle-class American family of 28 years ago, the play goes straight to the hearts of those who see it.

The Theatre Guild, which will present Eugene O'Neill's comedy, "Ah, Wilderness"! with George M. Cohan in the leading role (at the Capitol Theatre, Saturday, matinee and night, March 23) furnishes an example of what persistent adherence to an ideal will do. The organization, which is now the foremost dramatic group in the country, started virtually on a shoestring and nearly lost that when its first production, "Bonds of Interest," was a disastrous failure.

The group, which before the World War was known as the Washington Square Players, hung to enough of the shoestring, however, to make one more effort. This was "John Ferguson," by St. John Irvine. It proved a success, and since then the Theatre Guild has produced some of the greatest plays written, developed playwrights and actors and has virtually revolutionized the American theatre.

Any list of the plays which the Guild has put on would have to include "Jane Clegg," "Mr. Pim Passes By," "He Who Gets Slapped," "The Guardsman," "The Silver Cord," "Volpone," "Mary of Scotland," "They Knew What They Wanted," "Strange Interlude," and "Both Your Houses," the last three being Pulitzer prize plays.

The book market has been flooded with the so-called "must" literature, but let us remember that only time will tell what really lives. Some of the more or less entertaining books of the past few months which might be appealing to college students are Thornton Wilder's Heaven's My Destination, a narrative of the adventures of a pious, simple-minded traveling salesman in a tough, rough, hypocritical world, determined to make the world Baptist, or think out the reason why. Then there is City Editor, by the former city editor of the Herald-Tribune, Stanley Walker, who gives a vivid picture of what happens on a metropolitan newspaper, a life that is the nearest approach in modern days to knighthood of old.

Despite their tragic start, the Albright Lions snapped back into form long enough to regain their growl and definitely clinch fourth place in the Eastern Pennsylvania Intercollegiate Conference with a record of four wins as against seven losses. Considering the misfortunes attending the season, the Red and White can undoubtedly be credited with having had a successful year. This is especially true when you remember that the old bugaboo of Lebanon Valley, hitherto invincible on their home court, crumbled before the attack of the Smithmen. The Drexel game proved beyond any shadow of a doubt the Lions' superiority to the Dragon outfit. Red Woods and Hank Ross led the local marksmen with the substantial totals of 14 and 12 points, respectively. The Franklin and Marshall game having been postponed by mutual consent of the two teams, the summary of the league standings for the year is as follows:

Team	Won	Lost
Gettysburg	11	1
Muhlenberg	9	3
F. and M.	7	4
Albright	4	7
Drexel	4	8
L. V. C.	3	9
Ursinus	3	9

It won't be long before the sensational Lion tennis team, which dropped only one decision last year, will again swing into action. The local papers inform us that the nets will soon be put up and the season will really begin. Prospects for a winning team this year are, if anything, even brighter than they were last year. With co-Captains Oritsky and Hoffman piloting them, the Lions should equal the enviable record they turned in last year.

It is generally customary about this time for sports writers to select a mythical all-conference team. Your columnist, in no way aspiring to be classed with the experts, nevertheless, submits his choice, which is as follows:
Forward—Cico, Gettysburg.
Forward—Cuchran, Muhlenberg.
Center—MacMillan, Gettysburg.
Guard—Rodgers, Muhlenberg, or Roddy, F. and M.
Guard—Morris, Gettysburg.

This selection is based on the fact that your columnist has seen every team in the league perform twice. The editor of the paper, Mr. Goldstan, has also submitted his choice, as follows:
Forward—Cico, Gettysburg.
Forward—Cuchran, Muhlenberg.
Center—Johnson, Ursinus.
Guard—MacMillan, Gettysburg.
Guard—Roddy, F. and M.

The only fault I have to find with his selection is that he chooses MacMillan as a guard to make a place for Johnson, of Ursinus. As a matter of actual fact, the practice is to pick each man in the position in which he performed all year. (Ed. Note.—We decry the impertinence of Mr. Doyle, the young author of this column, in "finding fault with the selection of Mr. Goldstan," notwithstanding his docile apology of "in no way aspiring to be classed with the experts.") Although we had not the opportunity to watch each team perform twice—from a choice spot on the bench—we have not found fit to exclude either Johnson or MacMillan. Their performances certainly outshone the exhibition of Mooney Morris, Bullet guard, whom Mr. Doyle assigns a spot probably because that luminary was the object of his puerile worship at his Alma Mater, Reading High School.)

Friday night will find the Red and White engaging a local aggregation in a charity tilt at the "Y." The team which will face off against the Lions is known as the Womelsdorf Big Five. In my personal opinion, they have the best club of the kind in this vicinity, despite the fact that they have lost a few games in local competition. My belief in their excellence, however, does not prevent my thinking that the Lions will take them into camp if for no other reason than for the fact that they are in better condition physically than the Big Five. Incidentally, no better plea could be offered as a reason for your attending this game than the fact that the lad for whose benefit the tilt is being played was one of the most popular as well as capable athlete among the local youth. He was, unfortunately, stricken with infantile paralysis, with the result that he will probably never engage in any athletic competition again. (Ed. Note.—Just when, Mr. Doyle, will you learn to alleviate the burden of "e's" in "athlete" and "athletic?")

FINISH SEASON TOMORROW NIGHT AT "Y"

Hoopsters Conclude League Schedule With Triumphs Over Lebanon Valley and Drexel

With one of the classiest exhibitions of passing they have shown for a long time, the Albright College basketballers climaxed their intercollegiate schedule for the current season with a victory over Drexel, 50-37, after getting off to an early lead, Wednesday night at the Reading Central Y. M. C. A.

Red Woods topped the Lions with 14 points, garnered on six field goals and two charity tosses, while Ross and Shipe were close followers with 12 and 11, respectively.

Shipe led off for the Red and White dribblers with a running under the basket shot on the peak of a fine passing attack soon after the opening whistle.

The Red and White quintet drew away rapidly in the first ten minutes, leading 13-10 at that time. Albright spurred and at half-time was leading 31-16.

The Dragons put up a desperate rally in the third quarter to come within six points of the Albrightians. Woods, however, was the spearhead of another Lion attack that clinched the game, rolling up 14 more points.

For the second time this season, the Albright College varsity basketball team defeated Lebanon Valley's quintet, last Saturday, on the Lebanon High School floor, by the score of 46-38, enabling the Lions to vault out of their cellar position. This was the Lions' third conference victory.

From the time a fast-passing Red and White opposition scored its first field goal, early in the opening quarter, the issue was rarely in doubt. The Lions rolled up an early lead, and the old adage of handling the ball with speed and accuracy stood them in good stead to stave off a late valiant rally.

Albright took the initiative in the first ten minutes of play with an aggressive passing and shooting attack, and at half-time the score was 19-15 in its favor.

Red Woods, Red and White guard, topped the Albrightians in their triumph with five field goals and four charity tosses in a return to his old-time form, while Stewart Barthold, former Shillington luminary, paced the Blue and White five with six field goals and two charity tosses for a similar total.

Bill Becker tallied five shots from the court to run close to Woods for high scoring laurels.

In the second half, the Lions drew steadily away, keeping the ball in their possession most of the time, and putting the game on ice after repelling a belated spurt by the Lebanon Valley five.

not keep society going with the view that each man is entitled to all he can get. We are facing starvation at the bottom and strangulation at the top of our economic order."

Following the morning chapel address, a period of discussion followed, in which Dr. Page convinced the students, faculty members, and their friends that Norman Thomas is the most powerful Socialist in the United States. However, some of the meetings of the Socialist party remind him of the old church squabbles.

Being questioned on leading personalities of the radio dealing with these tense situations, Kirby Page remarked that he believes that Father Charles Coughlin is living in an economic world of make believe. "His feet are not on the ground where I prefer mine to stand."

"There are four ways out of this delicate problem: controlled capitalism, a dictatorship as in Italy or Germany, communism as in Russia, or Socialism." The speaker has chosen the latter as his solution of the way out.

The afternoon was devoted to the visiting students with an address on "After the New Deal—What?" Attacking the present day policies of the New Deal, the guest speaker who came to the college for a challenge of youth's thoughts, remarked that there was no hope in the new administration for the abolition of private property with the exception of the TVA. projects now under way. Even this is subject to the ruling of the Supreme Court and the fulfillment of plans. "There are three reasons, namely, the lack of purchasing power, the inefficient use of our natural resources, and the wastage of conflict and warfare."

"At the present time there is too severe a division between the privileged and the under-privileged society. We have enough for everyone; therefore there is no reason for privation. We are not using our resources as our present day system in basic industries intervenes. We want efficiency on the

Many of the plants of the nation are closed at definite times during the year because of the ignorance of the American people, living in a state of anarchy and in a system where law is absent. The "Y" Column

The visit of Dr. Paul Mayer, head of the Evangelical Church Missions in Japan, to our campus was a real privilege and honor as well as an inspiration. Perhaps we can profit by some of the statements Dr. Mayer made in commenting on idleness. "An acknowledged authority on the use of leisure has said that idleness and loafing have a legitimate part in the art of living. Well, much depends on one's definition of idleness. A man who has done hard, manual work all his college days is likely to regard an author, writing a sentence and then sitting back in his chair to think out the next one, as a loafer.

"Of course we realize we cannot spend all our working hours in hard work. Some time should be given to entertainment, to relaxation. One who has done a day's work as bookkeeper may thoroughly enjoy working in the garden. To him that is relaxation. The student counts his required reading a part of his work, but some one else may devour books with a delight tempered only by the fear that he is spending too much time in idleness.

"Healthy, normal people seldom wish to do nothing. When one feels that way, the best solution generally is a nap. Protracted idleness in the literal sense is a serious symptom, probably of something wrong physically; if not that, of something wrong mentally. Real idleness, actual loafing, has no part in the art of living."

Negotiations are now being made for the appearance of Sherwood Eddy sometime in April. It is the hope of the Y. M. C. A. and the Y. W. C. A. to present outstanding leaders in Christian leadership from time to time. Give us your suggestions. If at all possible, we will get the speakers you desire. We can build a better friendship between colleges if we support these seminars with exceptional speakers, and make the visitors welcome and comfortable while they spend a few hours with us here at Albright.

Dr. Page's present lineup has Goldstan and Erdman waging battle against Susquehanna University on Monday in a radio engagement over station WKOK, Sunbury; Fye and Doyle competing Tuesday against Penn State; Fye and Goldstan facing Washington and Jefferson on Wednesday, and also St. Francis on Thursday; and Erdman and Doyle attacking Gettysburg on Friday.
