And Petruchio Tames the Shrew

This will give you some idea of who sits in the driver's seat after the Shrew has been tamed. Art McKay, in the chair, as Petruchio, and Ada Gossler, as Katharina, the shrew, hold the main roles in William Shakespeare's "Taming of the Shrew," now being played in the college chapel.

"Singende Jugend" On Chapel Screen Next Tuesday

The German Club will present "Singende Jugend," an Austrian movie, in the college chapel on Tuesday, January 16 at 4:30 p. m. and 8 p. m.

The world-famous Vienna Boys' Choir furnishes the musical background for a rollicking story of the adventures of a poor street-singer. The main character is Toni, a homeless waif who is befriended by Hans Olden, a lovable and happy-go-lucky street-singer. When he finds that Toni has an exceptional voice, Olden manages to have him admitted to the Sanger-Knaben Choir.

This picture has all the charm of last year's film, "Emil und die Detektive" plus the music of the boys' choir and the Vienna Philharmonic Orchestra. There are English subtitles for those whose German isn't so fluent.

The matinee tickets are on sale for fifteen cents and the evening performance for twenty-five cents. This is one of the outstanding cultural events of the year and is a "must-see" for all students.

Girls' Glee Club to Sing at Y. M. C. A.

The Girls' Glee Club will give a concert at the Reading Central Y. M. C. A. Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Rev. Brininger will be the speaker for the service.

The following Thursday, January 18, at 8:15 p. m., the annual January musical program will be given in (Continued on Page 4)

Howling Audience Sees Dominos 'Tame the Shrew'

Two Shows Today, One Saturday Nite

At the matinee which opened the production of "The Taming of the Shrew" yesterday, the Domino Club proved again that Shakespeare was really human. Last year "Twelfth Night" convinced a great many surprised people that Shakespeare's dramas are more than good poetry—they're good fun. Even the archaic language fails to hide the humor and vitality of the lines.

The audience which saw Shakespeare come to life yesterday saw one of his funniest comedies. Besides the usual puns, there are some scenes which are sheer slapstick. The story, briefly, is this: Baptista Minola, a gentleman of Padua, has two daughters, Katharina, the elder, is "intolerable curst and shrewd and forward." Her sister, "sweet Bianca," must remain unmarried until Katharina is out of the way. Among Bianca's many suitors is Lucentio, a clever soul, who gets a position as Bianca's tutor. Meanwhile Petruchio, "a mad-cap ruffian and a swearing Jack" comes to Padua to marry a rich girl—any rich girl. Katharina's reputation doesn't frighten him. He decides to tame the shrew. The rest of the play is concerned with his efforts (Continued on Page 2)

Albright Debaters In Four Contests During Last Week

Four contests in as many days were sufficient to keep the Albright debating squad in high gear this week.

With Swarthmore College at Philadelphia, Albright upheld the affirmative side of the question: "Resolved, That the basic claim for the present European war rests upon the Allied powers." The members of the Albright team were Charles Miesse and Dennis Strawbridge. It was a no-decision meeting.

Debating the same question, a negative team of Ted Lunine and Seymour Mendelsohn traded arguments with Franklin and Marshall College on Monday afternoon. It, likewise, was a no-decision meeting.

The Lunine-Mendelsohn combination and Paul Golis, upholding the negative side of the question, won a decision over Kutztown State Teachers' College. The debate took place before the international relations study group of the College Club at Mrs. Ahrens' home in Wyomissing.

A no-decision meeting between Albright and Moravian Colleges was held at Fleetwood High School on Wednesday. The members of the Albright negative team were Seymour Mendelsohn and Paul Golis.

New York Trip Next Month Open To All Students

The Dominos are going to New York again!

But this time, the trip is open to all students at Albright, according to Robert L. Work, librarian and director of the tour. On their first visit to the world's largest city during the current school year, the Dominos spent two days seeing plays, browsing through libraries, smothering in Macy's store, and riding the subways. Tentative plans for the pending trip call for a three-day stay in the metropolis, leaving Reading on Friday, February 23, and returning on the following Sunday.

Two plays have again been scheduled, as well as a half-day visit in Columbia University, meals in Swedish, Italian, Russian, French, and several other restaurants, a look at the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, a sermon by Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick in the Riverside Cathedral, a midnight ferry ride, and a host of other things which only the inimitable Bob Work can pull out from his extensive repertoire of oddities.

The deadline for reservations is January 20. Because of the time necessary to order tickets for the theatre, Mr. Work must have all deposits—$3.50 per person—before that time. Arthur McKay will also receive the money. Basing his estimate on expenses of the other Domino journey, Mr. Work placed the probable costs within the $10-$12 area. This figure will also include the $3.50 deposit, according to Mr. Work.

I. R. C. Speaker Gives Background Of Present War

The International Relations Club held its first meeting of the new year in the college chapel at 8:30, Thursday night, January 4. A near capacity crowd turned out to hear Mr. D. Fedetoff White address the club and its guests on "The Russian International Policy."

Mr. White who has spoken before the Albright group twice before in recent years, was particularly well qualified to address the club on this timely subject in international relations. He was a White Russian, in command of one of the Imperial Russian battleships in the Black Sea, prior to the Russian Revolution of 1917, and at present is an official of the Cunard White Star Line in Philadelphia.

by SEYMOUR MENDELSON

There is told the story of a man who left his home to go out into the world in search of diamonds, only to return empty-handed and find them in his own backyard. We need not go to other schools in search of an outstanding professor; for within this college of ours, there is such a man.

Violinist at seven, student of piano and harmony at 12, graduate of Dr. Hoch's Conservatory at 20; European virtuoso at 20, concert master of the Nuremberg Grand Opera at 21! Such was the early career of Hans Nix, present conductor of the Albright College Symphony Orchestra.

Graduating from the Municipal Conservatory of Music of Nuremberg at 16, Mr. Nix entered the Royal Academy of Munich for one year. There he studied harmony and counterpoint under Max Reger, greatest composer of twentieth century Germany. At Frankford-on-Main, he was a student of Felix Mottle, greatest conductor of modern Germany.

Leaving Frankford after 3 years of intense study and training, Mr. Nix toured the musical capitals of Austria, Hungary, Russia, and Poland, at the age of 20. Upon his return to Germany, he was appointed concert master of the Nuremberg Grand Opera, a position he held for 13 years. He was also concert master of the Municipal Symphony Orchestra and traveled extensively with his Chamber Music organization. In 1923, he left Germany for America.

In music, Mr. Nix enjoys the violin, harmony, and counterpoint most. To him, Wilhelm Furtwaengler, who directed the New York Philharmonic orchestra (1925-27) and who now is in Berlin, is the greatest living symphony conductor. Many of the most prominent musical artists in Europe today were students with Mr. Nix at Frankford and Munich. He has letters from many of them and considers some his best friends.

Mr. Nix has written many compositions for pleasure and enjoyment, but none for publication. As for liking jazz, it all depends upon the mood he is in. The rhythmical monotony of jazz makes him tired. It is all right for dancing and physical exercise. Mr. Nix likes Hal Kemp's orchestra and Fred Waring's chorus, but only for a short time.

The Snooper

By ANNE ONYMOUS

Mervo Salup's favorite piece is not on the nickel machine at Moser's, perhaps, that can be accounted for by its being "Where Is Sylvia?"

We hear that Duke has a mercurial disposition. You can't take his temperature because the mercury freezes—br, you must have been eating ice again.

Bishop is making survey on love; all of the loved and lovelorn are asked to cooperate.

It is rumored that Gayl has become a strong Lehigh partisan.

We wish that Bob Work would tame some of the other shrews on campus.

We wonder what Andy is going to do when his Tooky leaves. There are some girls on campus who would gladly console him.

Many important items were missed on the senior ballot. We would include these:

Shrinking violet—June Yocum.
Bridge fiend?—Honey Honadle.
Most dissatisfied—Tommy Zimmerman.
Glamour Girl—Thelma Lurcott.
Best matched couple—Molin and Ebbert.
Mystery woman—Ella Prapst.
Noisiest—Bomgardner and Salup.
Jitterbug—Thergesen.
Most naive—Marion Bittenbender.

Ed. Note—The apparent stupidity and brevity of this column is not due to the author. Most of the people on campus seem to be either dead, studying, or in hibernation. We can't invent either news or love affairs.

Teachers Unearth More "Boners"

The student teachers are still collecting "boners." Fr'stance:

"An epilogue is a description written by a person to be placed on his tomb after he is dead."

"Between the rocks was a small aperture." Definition of aperture: "A small insect."

"Advocate"—what a king does when he gives up his throne."

Word derivatives of "Thermopylae": "Theroms, thermostat, and mop."

"Lucinda Matlock is the story of the life of a woman all wrapped up in one paragraph."

"A Description of Peyps and His Dairy."

"Queen Hatshepsut made Egypt a great commical country."

Then there was the day teacher asked some seventh-graders what uses of the number "seven" as a lucky number were still in existence today. Whereupon one pupil volunteered: "Busfare is seven cents."

Faculty Attends Conferences in Holiday Period

Dr. Milton Geil attended a conference on higher education, last Tuesday.

During the Christmas holidays, he attended a Christian Movement Conference at Toronto.

Over the Christmas vacation Dr. Milton Hamilton was elected to membership in the Bibliographical Society of America.

Dean Walton spoke to several organizations during the Christmas recess. He delivered an illustrated lecture, "A Geological Portrait of Pennsylvania," before the Reading Chapter of the Pennsylvania Association of Professional Engineers. He spoke on the "Changing Concepts of Our Universe" before the Reading Astronomy Club; and as president of the Reading Chapter of the Phi Beta Kappa National Honor Society, presided at the fourteenth annual banquet-meeting of the society.

Around the World with Words

By ART MCKAY

Another year has been ushered in but this one comes with the rolling of drums and the waving of flags used in a vast effort to make of the new conflict which has burst across the Atlantic an exigency which demands our active participation. There are symptoms of the recurrence of what was for Mr. Average Man in 1917 a dreaded day. Progressive militarization of civil services has set in; national defense appropriations are skyrocketing.

Perhaps as college students in what is, relatively, a sheltered environment, free from most political and economic pressure, we see nothing of great import in these symptoms. And yet we should!

By and large we still ignore the stories behind the headlines and are unaware of the forces already set in motion in the United States that may one day culminate for us in a blinding flash and then extinction. Let us imagine ourselves for a while to be graduates instead of undergraduates. Let us place ourselves into the world of the average working man in America. The time when we shall be in that place is not so far off but that we should look toward the future and face the problems which war creates for the workers.

With rising prices the workers have a hard enough time trying to make both ends meet; they do say "Keep America Out of War," because that's what they instinctively feel, but having said that, the tired man come from a grueling day in mine, mill, factory, or office has little stomach for active opposition to such a vague concept as "preparations for war."

Some groups are sensing the danger for the workers in war. The Workers' Defense League issued a statement that the workers are the chief sufferers in modern warfare and that increasing vigilance was necessary in the protection of their rights.

The student of the first World War knows what happened then to workers' rights in the United States. As long as labor was "good," the workers were not molested. Indeed, without their active cooperation, especially among the highly skilled machinists, America could not have waged war at all! Samuel Gompers argued that strikes were to be taboo, and that the organization of unorganized workers would be suspended for the duration; in return the War Labor Board agreed to recognize the right of collective bargaining.

The Industrial Workers of the World and the Socialist Party almost to change Katharina into an obedient wife.

Ada Gossler, as the shrew, throws real fire into her part. When she and Petruchio fight, live sparks fly. Art McKay, as Petruchio, does a good job of taming. Even the shrew quails before his blustering attack. Their scenes together provide most of the slap in the slapstick comedy. Shakespeare probably intended Christopher Sly to carry off comedy honors. George Henry plays the drunken tinker very realistically, but the page steals his scenes. Bishop Halbfoster is the page who pretends to be Sly's wife. His falsetto throws even the cast into hysterics. Another character whose voice steals scenes is Vincentio. The "mad Russian", Lubin, plays an Italian gentleman with his own Russian accent and turns a straight character part into comedy. Sweet Jane Buttorff plays the sweet Bianca very naturally. Her favorite suitor, Lucentio, is Dean Allen. The audience approves her choice. Her bewildered father, Baptista Minola, is Ted Lunine. Her other suitors, Gremio and Hortensio are played by Charles Miesse and Clem Boland. Gayl Harris, as the widow, soon heals Hortensio's broken heart. The lord is played by Jerome Denner and his servants by Louis Pearce, Dwight Dundore, Lynn Brown, Jack Boardman, and Harry Arnold. Helen Markey is the hostess and Jack Gundlach and Earl Steller are the huntsmen. Lucentio's servants, Tranio and Bioudello, are played by Paul Golis and Don Burger; Petruchio's servants, Grumio and Curtis, by Elden Spangler and Woody Witmer. The pedant is Harry Buck.

Costumes and stage sets for the production were designed by Robert Work and executed by a committee under Miss Elder's supervision. Evelyn Heller, the chairman, was assisted by Virginia Black, Marjorie Frundt, Helen Markey, Edna Bialek, Virginia Jackson, Virginia Gaul, Dorothy Gaul, and Patricia Smith. Harry Arnold was stage manager and Ferril Miller was in charge of the sound.

Robert Work deserves most of the credit for the success of the performance. He not only directed the production, but also designed and helped to make the costumes and stage sets.

Those of you who have not yet seen "The Taming of the Shrew" may see the matinee this afternoon at three o'clock or the evening performance tonight and tomorrow night at eight-thirty o'clock. The student price is still twenty-five cents.

alone among working-class organizations stood out in opposition to many thousands of workers in this period, conducted several strikes, and were ruthlessly suppressed in the name of "justice, truth, and democracy," culminating in the launching of federal prosecutions in Chicago on September 7, 1917. The latter adopted the famous St. Louis Resolution at a special convention which met in the second week of April, 1917, which provided a clear-cut stand against war, magnificently symbolized in the figure of Eugene V. Debs.

How long will it be before the abrogation of the civil liberties guaranteed in the Bill of Rights will be abrogated? How about the denial of the freedom of religion, the squelching of the freedom of the press? Well, already street meetings have been suppressed and speakers arrested in New York City under the authority of President Roosevelt's "limited emergency" proclamation; and the professional

Lions Seek First League Win

SPORT SHOTS

By CARL MOGEL

Appointment of Goose Oslislo, former Albright basketball player, and member of the Reading G. O. P. professional team, to assist Neil O. Harris in coaching the varsity and freshmen this season, indicates the confidence of the athletic committee in last year's freshman coach, despite the miserable showing of his yearling squad. This no doubt shows that the committee has realized that a coach must have some good material in order to produce a winning combination, an idea which is still ancient in many other colleges today. The committee's step is a step forward.

You've got to hand it to Steve Plaskonis. The ex-McAdoo High luminary had just one thought in mind when he answered the call for basketball candidates—to make the squad. Even after the big tackle was cut from the team, he kept coming to practices and gradually won himself a place on the varsity. Who said persistency doesn't lead to success?

The Albright basketball squad takes another trip next Wednesday night when they travel to Villanova to meet the Wildcats from the Main Line. This game is the last before finals, the next game being scheduled Wednesday, January 31, with Gettysburg, at home.

Although Henry Czaikoski has scored only 15 points in two league games, he leads the Lions in scoring in the first five games with 49 points. Close on his heels comes Big Bill McKinney, giant center, with 45 counters to his credit. It looks like a close race between the two blonds for scoring honors this year.

I. R. C. SPEAKER

Beginning his talk very wisely with a historical and geographical panorama of Finland, and with a large and recent wall map of Europe for reference, Mr. White provided his audience with an excellent background for a discussion of present-day affairs in that unfortunate country. Mentioning the fact that the origin of Finland and the Finnish people are very obscure though seeming to date from as late as the twelfth century of our era, the speaker went on to say that for several centuries the Finns were under the control of the powerful Swedish state, who used the Finnish people primarily for fighting their battles for them against their ever more powerful neighbors to the East. Eventually, near the beginning of the eighteenth century, their opportunity came for Finland to break from the domination of Sweden, and become a part of the rising Russian state, but the Finnish people were ever watchful for an opportunity to set up their own independent government. This opportunity was afforded them after the Red Revolution, when the new Russian government declared itself sympathetic with the Finnish independence movement and later promised not to molest its new western neighbors.

Mr. White then went on to discuss fully the many implications of the present Russian invasion of Finland, and explained her difficulties of carrying on a large scale, highly mechanized military campaign in a heavily-wooded, sparsely settled country like Finland, against troops trained for fighting under just such

Meet Bisons In Court Clash At Northwest Sat. Night; Frosh After Fifth In Row

Harris To Start Same Lineup Against Bucknell

Anxious to bound back into the win column after two successive league defeats, Albright's court performers play host to the rangy Bucknell Bisons on the Northwest floor tomorrow night. In the preliminary game, the undefeated Lion yearlings will oppose Hershey Junior College, seeking their fifth straight win.

Bucknell University, a newcomer to the Eastern Pennsylvania Collegiate League, replacing Drexel Institute of Philadelphia, boasts of a strong, towering quintet, which has already defeated Elizabethtown and the mighty Penn State in earlier contests this season. The Bisons, led by Bob Longaker, 6-foot, 5 inch center, and George Kieck, of football fame, at guard, are participating in their first league contest.

Coach Neil O. Harris, of the Lions, is expected to stand pat on his veteran starting lineup, which has Paul Petrucka, and Hen Czaikoski at forwards, Bill McKinney at center and Ray Thorpe and Jake Hydock at guards. As first string replacements, the mentor has Ray McCrann, who has been bothered by a bad cold but is now ready to go, Red Sheffer and Raymer Kent, who showed up well in the Ursinus tiff, and Waldo Eshelman, who displayed his varsity caliber at Elizabethtown.

The spirited Red and White basketballers, hampered by the long Christmas layoff and Captain Steve Hydock's leg injury, have dropped three out of five contests so far this season. In the first game, against the Kutztown Teachers, the Lions showed excellent promise by pinning the Berks County school, 41-30, after a closely-fought first half. Ray McCrann showed the way in scoring with 15 points, followed by Zeb Czaikoski with seven counters. After a day's rest, the Harrismen, traveled to West Chester where they were handed their first defeat, 56-42, despite fifteen points chalked up by Czaikoski and ten by Bill McKinney. On the very next day the Red and White were guests of Elizabethtown College, whose basketball quintet found the deadly shooting of McKinney, Petrucka, Czaikoski, and Thorpe, too much and thus suffered a 60-49 loss.

Christmas vacation seemed to tell its sad tale when Ursinus walked off the Collegeville court with a 45-24 win in the first league contest last Friday. McKinney was the only consistent threat on the offensive with 10 counters, while Raymer Kent gleamed on the defense.

In the second league contest, against Franklin and Marshall last conditions as the two armies are now faced with, and without the services of her most valuable military strategist. Mr. White followed his lecture with a rather brief discussion period, in which he attempted to answer questions put to him by the group.

Wednesday, Albright absorbed their second league defeat, 46-29. The locals started out fast but faded badly in the second half, after leading 24-23 at intermission. One of the league's high scorers, hairless Czaikoski, again found the range on the long Armory floor, leading the Red and White with 12 points.

Dick Shollenberger, mighty scorer from Reading High, is again expected to pace the Freshmen as they vie for their fifth straight "Dopper." Dick has scored 20 points in four games to lead the cubs in this department. Chin Rhodes and Ken Hopkins have scored 68 points between them. Jimmy Kane and Bill Spangler round out the starting quintet which has beaten the Automatics, 58-30; West Chester Frosh, 39-36; Ursinus Frosh, 55-36; and F. and M. Frosh, 46-18.

The Lions Den

By ALAN R. DUKE

We are always glad to see athletes from Albright College get a chance in the so-called "big time." This winter it appears that our august institution of learning will be ably represented in indoor track meets which will be held at Madison Square Garden, at Catholic University, and at New York University.

Clem Boland, Albright's star quarter-miler who took first place honors in every quarter-mile and 220-yard race on Albright's schedule last season, will represent Albright in the 200 meter dash. Clem is having a tough time finding a place to practice and therefore does not believe he will be in shape to run the longer distances. However, if the snow melts, he'll have a chance to get out-doors and perhaps get in condition to run the 400 and 300-meter sprints.

Paul Michaels, sophomore, who gathered a number of points in the high-jump last year, also expects to enter the indoor meets this year. Paul is handicapped by the lack of facilities for practice but his natural ability will probably enable him to hold his own. Incidentally, "Mike" has jumped 3 feet 2 inches and better in competition.

Bill Reedy, sports editor of the Reading Eagle, expects to travel with Clem and Mike to the various meets in order to get first hand information on the best performers of the indoor track game.

Here's hoping one or both of our men can come through with a place or two. However, even if they don't, at least Albright will be represented. This, in itself, is a novelty since Boland and Michaels will be pioneers in entering indoor track meets as representatives of the college track team. Best of luck to both of them!

Interfraternity basketball will be late in starting this year because gyms are not available until after the end of January. All the fellows are anxious to get started and it looks like another "hot" race this year. The Kappa's took the championship last year in a three game series with the A. P. O.'s and, with the same team back, are again favored to grab the cup. There will be plenty of competition, however—the A. P. O.'s, Zeta's and Pi Tau's all have their usual teams again and anything can happen.

alumna now teaching French in Shillington High School, told the group the display was a representation of the scene of Christ's birth. The display includes Christ in the manger, Mary and Joseph watching over the Child, and groups of shepherds and villagers bringing gifts to the child.

The group enjoyed Miss Pennypacker's discussions of French Christmas customs. Following the explanation of her display, Miss Pennypacker joined in singing a few French Christmas carols.

THEY SAY....

THE BUCKNELLIAN — Irving Berlin, the little man from "Tin Pan Alley", manded tears and laughter from 1150 Bucknellians in one of last week's chapel programs. The program took the form of an interview with Bucknell professors asking questions of Mr. Berlin, that were submitted by the students. "Alexander's Rag-Time Band" said the famous composer, "is my favorite song."

AROUND THE WORLD

spy-hunters, from Toledo to Queens County, as one author has put it, have begun to offer substantial bounties for every spy bagged.

I am inclined to agree with those who are now suggesting that modern warfare is an instrument of internal policy, not foreign policy. Bearing this axiom in mind, the collusion of Hitler and Stalin, the repressive decrees of Daladier, and Chamberlain's treatment of India's demands for independence all become clear. So too in the United States a collapsing economy will lead to resort to war. And as American workers, with the deepening of the war crisis, become more and more restive at the restraints imposed by the Industrial Mobilization Plan, the military machine will undoubtedly try coercion by force and violence. At that point those who are opposed to war must be prepared to throw their financial support and physical aid into active non-violent resistance to every attempt to curtail individual rights. At that point will occur the sharpest conflict with the whole war system. It has been truthfully said that just at that moment depending on our resolution may we once and for all win a world for the cause of economic justice, of love, and of the pattern of God-in-Man. Does that challenge an active interest in the problems created for the average working people of this year 1940 and those which will be facing us as the working people of the next few years? What's your answer?
