Hemphill Receives Wilson Fellowship

Ernest Hemphill, '62, has been awarded a Woodrow Wilson National Fellowship for graduate work in bacteriology. Hailing from Johnstown, he expects to continue his studies at Cornell University after graduating from Albright. The Fellowship award covers a full year's tuition and fees and a living allowance of $1,500. Hemphill is one of 1,058 young men and women launched into prospective college teaching careers this year by the Woodrow Wilson National Fellowship Foundation.

James W. Adam, '62, received a place on the honorable mention list in the fields of theology and history. Jay I. Fisher, '62, received honorable mention for psychology.

The 1,058 awards for first year graduate study, represent the culmination of the first five-year program made possible by a Ford Foundation grant of $24,500,000 in 1957. This year's winners of fellowships were elected by fifteen regional committees from 9,975 candidates nominated from 965 colleges.

Two hundred and thirty of the winners intend to become professors of English and another 140 hope to be teacher-scholars in history. Those who expect to teach foreign languages number 112. The numbers of newly elected Woodrow Wilson Fellows in other leading fields are: mathematics, 86; political science, 76; philosophy, 75; physics, 63; economics, 53; psychology, 36.

Among other fields represented are American studies, anthropology, area studies, art and archaeology, biological sciences, chemistry, classics, geography, geology, religion and sociology. Professional fields such as law, medicine, engineering, are outside the scope of the program.

Elston Speaks In Chapel

Today in Chapel, Gerhard A. Elston concluded the emphasis on the WUS program at Albright College. The proceeds from the sacrificial meal, bake sale and long postponed sport night will be donated toward the activities of World University Service, whose function is to carry out a program of mutual assistance, self-help and technical assistance in Asia, Africa, Europe and North America.

Gerhard A. Elston is appropriately one of several regional executives representing WUS in the United States. He is uniquely equipped with knowledge and experience and a capacity to make an effective contribution to campus international programs. His personal involvement in some of the events of world history in the last two decades places him in an excellent position to represent WUS on the campuses of the American college.

Since 1920, international and national TB centers, hospitals and student wards have been constructed; books sent to prisoner of war camps; libraries and laboratories razed by earthquakes reconstructed and equipped; thousands of homeless and stateless students given shelter and enabled to resume their studies; co-operative student housing, printing shops, cafeterias and stores established; and conferences, studies and surveys on student health and lodging problems conducted—all to achieve the main goal of WUS: that of bringing to the attention of all nations the critical importance and necessity of an educated and healthy international university community which has the strength to meet successfully its historical responsibility of providing to the world the constructive and inspired guidance so necessary in these critical times.

Background

His post-graduate experiences have included teaching history and economics at Carthage College, Illinois; an assignment in Geneva, Switzerland on the staff of the World Lutheran Federation from 1954 to 1956; and as administrator in Camp Kilmer, New Jersey with the emergency Hungarian program of Church World Service from the winter of 1956 to the spring of 1958. Most recently, Mr. Elston has been on the executive staff of the Association for World Travel Exchange in New York. Mr. Elston has also served on several student ship orientation staffs of the Council on Student Travel and has traveled widely in both Europe and the United States.

Glee Club Tour

The spring tour of the Glee Club will extend from March 31 through April 3. Concerts are scheduled for the E.U.B. Churches in Cheverly, Md., Alexandria, Va., Millford, Md., and York, Pa. The group will also present programs in the high schools located in these areas. Forty members of the organization have been selected for the tour including James Adams, accompanist and business manager.

Nace and Parney Vie For Council Presidency

Jack Nace

Barry Parney

Elections for Student Council President, class officers, YM-YWCA officers, and May Queen have been scheduled for Tuesday, April 3, during the Chapel period. Students will be separated according to class, and each class will vote in a separate location.

Two students, Jack Nace and Barry Parney, are running for the office of Student Council President. In order to qualify for candidacy, each candidate must be a junior, full-time regular student at Albright in good standing with at least one year's service on Student Council. In addition, each candidate must circulate a petition to be signed by fifty students. Both candidates will be presented to the student body in Assembly, March 29, when they will have the opportunity to present their platforms.

IRC Goes To Model UN

Thirteen members of the International Relations Club will be participating in the Mid-Atlantic Inter-Collegiate Model General Assembly. It will be held March 23rd through the 25th in New York City at the Hotel Commodore and the United Nations Building. Other colleges and universities from the mid-Atlantic area will also participate, each representing a member nation of the U.N. Albright will be representing the United States.

Aces Present E. Club Pgm.

Thursday, April 5, the Enterprise Club will have a panel discussion session with the Schuylkill Valley Area Chapter of the Americans for the Competitive Enterprise System, Inc. (ACES). The meeting will be held in Teel 205 at 7:00 P. M. The panel will be composed of top management executives from around the Reading area. The session will deal with such topics as The Common Market, The Tariff, and Federal Aid. All business students and other interested students are urged to attend.

Nominees

Election for next years officers will also take place at this time. The nominees, which were nominated at the last meeting, are as follows: President, Art Isakson, '63, Leonard Margaree, '63, V. President, Andy Seybold, '64, and C. T. Miller, '64, Treasurer, Alan Kratz, '65, and Bob Young, '65. The Secretary will be elected from the business majors of next year's Freshman Class.

Unsuccessful Dinner Party

Mr. Leonard Van Driel, steward of our dining-hall, had a rather poor turn-out for his weekly roast-beef dinner on Thursday evening, March 15. Slightly less than four hundred students decided to snub Mr. Van Driel that night.

This reporter and Lenny very seriously want to thank all those students who decided to sacrifice their dinner for World University (Continued on Page Three)

Nominations Slated For Skull and Bones

The Skull and Bones Club will hold a meeting, Wednesday, April 4th, at 7:30 P. M. in the Science Lecture Hall. At this time nominations will be made for next year's slate of officers.

The featured speaker so far is unannounced, but will probably be a local medical doctor, according to Charles Schleifer, '62, president of the organization.

Kroll Concert Tonight

Cultural enrichment is a vital function of the college community. Tonight at 8:00, Albright college will co-sponsor a free public concert by the Kroll Quartet in the Merner-Pfeiffer-Klein Chapel-Auditorium.

For upwards of twenty years this distinguished group of string players has been in the front rank of chamber music in America. While consistently presenting the great classics of quartet literature, the group also presents judiciously chosen works of contemporary composers.

William Kroll, leader of the Kroll Quartet, will play the "Ernst" stradivarius violin.

All four members are native

Americans and all had distinguished careers as soloists before joining together to form what is today recognized as the premier all-American string quartet. William Stone, second violin and youngest member of the quartet has studied both in the U. S. and in Europe. Stone has played with the Pittsburgh Symphony, the U. S. Navy Band's String Quartet and as a member of the CBS String Quartet. The viola master, Harry Zaratzian, is presently a member of the faculty of the Marlboro School of Music in Vermont. Cellist Anton Teverdovsky is a recipient of a Philharmonic scholarship. He lists in his background numerous leading artists and associations.

Letters To The Editor

Dear Editor:

The problems of our student-faculty, student-administrative relationships are ever mounting. This past week a group of students met in an attempt to unify their numbers against a recent decision handed down from the Administration. It was the feeling of this group that slowly the Administration was taking away power which originally belonged to them. They claimed that they were being used by the school for things that made the school look good in the eyes of future students, parents, trustees, etc.

Through this process, the Student Council has also lost its effectiveness. In Council no real problems of any significance are discussed, unless you call discussion of the upcoming Dinner-Dance an area of major decision making. The reason being, there just isn't any power behind any decision made by Council. A major example would be the time when we (Student Council) decided to have the Four Freshmen here at Albright. The Administrative Committee reversed the decision and if it wasn't for a few very interested students, the Four Freshmen would have never appeared. I actually don't believe that the entire blame is in the hands of the Administration and Faculty. A lot of the blame lies with the student apathy. Some students just don't care. It takes the action of a threatened riot in front of the homes of some key campus figures to arouse them. Generally, they are satisfied to let the other fellow do the work and to sit back and reap the benefits.

This uprising of the students during the past few weeks is a good sign that maybe somebody does care. When somebody shows interest in campus affairs, it gives students that little spark which we hope will start the fire that will destroy the deadwood with which we are all familiar.

Each year, as the new Student Council President prepares to take office, he sets up committees and groups to handle various campus affairs. Last April I set up the Judiciary Committee and until two weeks ago this committee did nothing but gather dust. When the current situation arose, I was curious to find what power this committee actually had. The potential of this group is tremendous and could solve some of the problems.

This committee has the power to set up a code of conduct and student ethics with proper administrative and faculty officials. The committee can punish or fine the violators of the code. It has the power to try cases of alleged violations of the code. All decisions are made by a majority vote of the group.

In a recent letter from Dean Hellerich about the Judiciary Committee, he stated that if the interest is there on the students' part, this group and the administratives—faculty group "may be able to do something of great importance for

By LESLIE PASTOR, '61

A response to my last column, which dealt with the problem of the lack of adequate study facilities on campus:

Dear Leslie:

I have read your article in the LION TALES with a great deal of interest. It surprised me to learn that there was so much noise in the library for I know that our library staff is always very quiet and I did not think that the students, who are adults and not elementary children, would be unruly. It surprised me, too, to learn that so much ("the bulk", as you state) of the students' studying is done on Sundays, for I know that all of you must have many vacant periods during the day when your studying could be done. Could it be a matter of not budgeting your time properly? If so, I could help you with it if you would bring your schedule to my office. As one who used to work eight hours a day as a telephone operator while going to college I have had much experience in budgeting time and making every minute count.

Having the library open longer hours costs money. Do you know where that money must come? It must come from the students. Are you in favor of a rise in tuition to pay for it? We hoped you would not be asked to pay more and tried to help you by saving on extra cost for the library. We also were in hopes that it would not be necessary to transfer some book money to the operation of the library.

If you should come to the library afternoons you would notice that frequently we have two students, or three, or four. Where are the rest of the $50? Checking with the registrar's office we do not find any classes scheduled during those hours, we find no athletic activities in progress, and we find very few students working off campus. However, if we go through the dormitories we find students sleeping in the middle of the day like little babies or old ladies who have to take an afternoon nap!

Are you preparing yourselves for a career or for marriage. How many careers are there which would allow time off in the afternoon for a nap? If you should marry, would you care to sleep all afternoon and then keep your husband awake at night because you would not be tired enough to go to bed?

In my study of libraries in universities in England this summer I did not find any which were open on Sundays nor Saturday afternoons, very few open on Saturday mornings, and most of them not open at all evenings or until perhaps seven o'clock. That study included the thirty-four colleges of Oxford University. If the English students can do it the Americans should be able to do so.

Consider the cost and give it more thought. Are you as a group willing to pay higher tuition for the sake of sleeping, horsing around, and doing other things when the library is open, and have the library open at odd hours when the spirit moves you to do some studying?

Sincerely,
(Dr.) Josephine E. Raepfel,
Librarian

As a follow-up, I went in to see Dr. Raepfel, and she gave me four alternate suggestions: (1) Studying in the afternoon in the library and the girls campaigning for more than a social hour at night; (2) Asking the administration for study booths in each of the dorms; (3) Closing the library in the afternoon and keeping it open at night; (4) Reclaiming Krause Hall from the Domino Club and erecting beaverboard booths for individual study.

From the petitions to keep the library open late on Sunday which have been circulating the dorms this is a problem that obviously affects and interests all boarding students. But the only way anything can be done about it is to have some letters-to-the-editor on the topic. Many of the comments in the letter seem unfair to us as a group, but I can't speak for the rest of the student body.

If you disagree with Dr. Raepfel's analysis of our use of time, or if you have any constructive suggestions, write in about them. Otherwise the library situation will remain as it is.

Misdirected Discontent

There seems to be a great deal of student discontent on campus recently—more so than usual. There have been movements afoot to embarrass the director of the college dining hall by having a mass attendance at breakfast when he is least expecting it, and it has even been suggested that students march in front of the local newspapers with signs of protest. The most aggravated members of the student body seem to come from the fraternities as a result of the recent limitation on their pledging programs.

There have been cries that "the administration" is infringing on the rights of students. The fact of the matter is that "the administration" is setting up rules and regulations which have always been within its power to set up.

It is unfortunate that there was some vague wording in the recent letter sent to the fraternities concerning their pledging programs, as it was also unfortunate that the letter was sent so soon before pledging began. Certainly the fraternities should be presented with a clear idea of what is expected of them and should be given this information well in advance of the spring pledging period.

Perhaps there are unnecessary regulations on the fraternities and their pledging programs that should be changed. However, by what stretch of the imagination can Mr. Van Drill, who has enough trouble trying to please the taste buds of the boarding student body, be construed as being responsible for college regulations on fraternities? Fortunately, the majority of fraternity members have more sense than this.

The intelligent approach for the fraternities is to sit down and discuss the problems of pledging with the proper college officials. A willingness to co-operate, among themselves and with the school, will perhaps bring about a willingness on the part of the college administrators involved to allow the fraternities to assume more responsibility on their own.

On Science And Value

A fundamental dilemma of the Twentieth Century is the position of value in a world of science. The fact that two nations with opposing viewpoints now possess a crude but enormous amount of destructive power misleads serious thinkers to the position that nuclear power must be eliminated before any discussion of value can take place. The error of this position lies in the assumption that science will produce even larger methods of annihilation to the point where all human life will be destroyed.

If anything, the reverse is true. Russian and American policy-makers are now realizing that gigantic nuclear weapons may make useful propaganda, but they are a liability in a military struggle because each side has enough power to preclude the possibility of victory. The emphasis is toward a refined weapon with which one nation can destroy the other without the fear of counterattack. As long as both powers do not possess such a weapon, the world is reasonably secure.

The discovery of weapon "X" is within the realm of possibility. Its possessor will emerge unquestionably as the ruler of the planet. This possibility no doubt underlies Soviet reluctance to enter any disarmament agreement. Soviet policy-makers, under a philosophical drive for world domination, view the present technological race not as the end of man, but the beginning.

The implications for the free world are clear. If free nations judge free governments chosen by free men, freedom of speech, freedom of the press, freedom to form associations, freedom of religion, and freedom to live by choice to be of value, then the new science can provide the means to economic and social institutions.

Those who view this as a sinister process need only examine the possibility of superior Soviet technology. If such a possibility should occur, world totalitarianism will no longer be a Soviet dream, but a reality. The issue at hand is not whether or not the new science will destroy the life process, but whether or not the science of free nations is flexible enough to provide the power to prevent a single totalitarian world view. Thus, a positive unity of science and value can be achieved. Unity so stated is the servant of free nations, not its enemy.

There will be six committees, each having its own topic. Resolutions pertaining to that topic will be discussed, debated, and voted on. Those successfully passing the committee will be brought up before the model General Assembly.

Last night the International Relations Club presented as their speaker Mr. Jakari, Assistant Press Attache from India. His subject was "India and Goa."

Candidates List Platforms

Nace

Many specifics might be explained in this statement as to my proposals and/or events that will permeate my program as President of Student Council. However, this is not meant to be the time to enunciate them. More pertinent, I feel, is a call for student voice which would transfer the students ideas, suggestions, proposals, to a higher degree of positive action, higher than they have been in the past. It is refreshing to note that student concern has been strong in the past few weeks, particularly that of the fraternities, in reference to rulings and decisions "passed down" by the college administration. This now appears to enhance the necessity for a more developed and organized outlet for the students outcry.

Last year, a Student-Faculty Committee was established by our Student Council President, but not one meeting was called. This committee was to be the grounds for the student, through positive representation, to have his feelings known. I am sorry that this brilliant proposal had fallen by the wayside, but we can all see the need for an organized reestablishment of this committee.

Representation in Student Council itself has not been effectively used. How many of us living in a dormitory can recall a dorm meeting where those attending had an opportunity to vote for or against a possible event being proposed by our student government? The haphazard way in which the Daymen and Daywomen are represented hinders their position as direct members of the Albright Campus. It can clearly be recognized how poor representation of the dorm, day, sorority, and fraternity students hampers greatly any progress the student body as an entity might attempt.

I am asking for a stronger and more welcomed voice from the Albright student when I ask for your support in this election—one that appears more important than ever.

Jack Nace, '63

Parney

Since my nomination for the office of Student Council President, a question which I have frequently been asked is "Why are you running?"

In answer to this question, I can honestly say I am running for the office because I see it as my opportunity to stop sitting around and complaining about the disturbing situations here at Albright, and instead, sit down and do something about them.

We all seem to agree that a change is needed. I see the coming year as the time to make that change if it is ever to become a reality. With the increased enrollment due to the added dormitory facilities, the year will be one of tremendous expansion. For the first time, the enrollment will pass the 1,000 mark. Because of this expansion, many of the archaic policies and regulations which exist today will have to be either revised or completely eliminated. This will be the time when the student body will have to work as a team to influence these changes to their benefit. The previous lack of unification on this campus has been one of the major causes of the problems today. I am determined to see that this does not happen again when I feel we could accomplish so much together.

As to my actual platform, I can only say that I am, and have been, working on a program which will fit in with the above situation. It will be presented to you in assembly on March 29. I believe it will not be platform of empty promises, but will be one that can and will be carried out for the betterment of the student body here at Albright.

Service. As of this writing, I can not give out the actual amount of money which we made by sacrificing for W.U.S., but I can assure the student body that it will be over $300.00.

Domino Play Reviewed

Thursday night, March 15, this writer attended the Domino Club production of George Bernard Shaw's Misalliance at Krause Hall, with Howard Deck, '62; Steward Uhler, '63; Donna Lee Terry, '65; Lawrence Santoro, '64; Lynne Shivers, '63; Jere Verdone, '63; Thomas Kopel, '64; Karen Kunkel, '62; and Thomas Chapman, '63; playing the roles.

In comparison to the Domino play earlier this year, Misalliance suffers. Shaw was Shaw, as outrageously funny as always, although the cast missed quite a few places where they could have capitalized on his technique to gain more laughs. The play was excellent, but most of the acting was not.

Howard Deck played Howard Deck. It would be interesting to see him in a character sketch, but his acting ability cannot be judged adequately in parts such as the Mr. Antrobus of The Skin of Our Teeth and the Mr. Tarleton of Misalliance. Neither is really good as a showcase; they both require too little acting. Once again, a campus as small as this must lean heavily on type-casting for play effects, but it leaves little room for creativity. Steward Uhler was not convincing in his portrayal of Johnny Tarleton. His movements were uncertain, he was stiff, and he looked uncomfortable. As the play progressed he relaxed a little, and perhaps on the following nights he was better, but Thursday he was not particularly impressive.

The part of Bentley Summerhays seemed to require more sophistication and lightness than Lawrence Santoro's interpretation showed. Did Shaw intend Bunny to be quite as whining as that? Nevertheless, Santoro did a convincing job with the part, and portrayed his character well even when he had no lines to speak.

Lynne Shivers did an adequate job. She communicated Mrs. Tarleton's character fairly well to the audience; this was a part that could have had many interpretations, and Miss Shivers' was workable and fit well with the other characterizations. But did Mrs. Tarleton really drop all her final "g"s?

Donna Lee Terry as Hypatia Tarleton and Tom Kopel as Joey Percival did the best jobs. Miss Terry's part was different enough from her part in the fall play to show that she is capable of handling a variety of characterizations, and she played Hypatia with animation and a pleasing sophistica-

Albrightian In Washington

Edward Steitler, 20, a junior at Albright College majoring in political science, is in the Nation's Capital this spring participating in The American University's Washington Semester Program.

Steitler, along with 94 other top students from 46 colleges and universities across the United States, is engaging in an extensive program designed to acquaint the student with a first-hand working knowledge of national government in action.

Under the direction of the University's School of Government and Public Administration, the students take part in a multi-phased operation between now and the Semester's end in May.

They participate in a continuing seminar which will bring them into close contact with a wide range of Federal activities. The students meet with their Senators and Representatives. Labor and management leaders, lobbyists, the Washington press corps and other national personalities explain to the students their roles in America's Government.

In addition, the students take field trips to government installations throughout the Washington area to show them just how the Federal Government operates.

tion. She did a beautiful job bringing to life the Shavian female. Kopel, making his debut in the Domino Club, also brought freshness to the production with his calm but very convincing acting. Even his method of waiting for lines to be supplied him the two or three times he forgot them showed an impressive stage presence. But in spite of these two, the Domino Club's spring play was below the standard of the previous one.

Yarnell To Speak At Scriblerus Club

Tonight, March 22, the Scriblerus Club is presenting, as its speaker, Mr. Victor Yarnell, a local high school history teacher. His subject will be "The English Educational System and School Life". The meeting, which is open to the student body will be held in Teel 203 at 7:30 P. M.

A future meeting, now being planned by Scriblerus, will be a study of the literary centers in England. This study will be made through the medium of colored slides.

Applications

Application for membership to Scriblerus is now being considered. Students having literary interests and who would desire membership may get in touch with a member or Professor Applegate. Present members are reminded that 1962 dues are to be paid.

They attend regular class sessions at the University selected under the guidance of their faculty advisors.

Finally, the students are free to participate in any of a number of cultural activities that abound in the Washington area. They may visit the museums and the art galleries, hear the National Symphony Orchestra and other guest artists who regularly come to Constitution Hall, and visit the many other tourist attractions.

WUS Cake Sale

The World University Service fund-raising campaign is being well supported by all campus groups. In addition to the dorm students' sacrificial meal, the daywomen, acting as individuals, held a very successful cake sale at Kissinger's Market from 6 A.M. to 2:30 P.M. on March 10. There were forty-five donors including a few mothers of daymen. Altogether, seventy-one dollars was raised for WUS. The campaign is off to a very good start. Let's continue our support.

IN THE LION'S DEN

By BARRY PARNEY, Sports Editor

ALL THE WAY:

From all indications, the four-overtime game between Albright and Mount St. Mary's was just what the Mountaineers needed to give them their first National Collegiate Athletic Association Small College Basketball Championship which they won last weekend at Evansville, Indiana. Although the experience gained in the Albright game was not very useful against Hofstra on the following night, the Mounts total margin of victory in their three games at Evansville was only six points. In the first round, they defeated defending champion Wittenberg, 43-39. On the following night, a last second shot by Ed Pfeiffer beat Southern Illinois, 58-57. In the championship game played on Saturday night, once again, it took a Pfeiffer score, this time on a foul goal, to defeat Sacramento State, 58-57, in a game extended into one over-time period. Congratulations to Coach Jim Phelan and his team from Emmittsburg, Maryland for returning the small college championship to the ranks of eastern competition.

In the last edition of this column which was published on the opening day of the NCAA Eastern Play-offs, it was stated that the Lions could win the tournament if the team developed the spirit and confidence which was so badly lacking in the MAC Play-off game against Hofstra. The statement was shattered somewhat that night when the Mounts defeated Albright 67-64 in four overtimes. However, it was evident that every player on the court was playing his heart out throughout the entire game, and with a few breaks the Lions could have taken the game. If any team had spirit on the court, it was Albright against the Mounts. The fact was verified by Coach Phelan after the game when he praised the Albright team for their fine brand of basketball throughout the game.

Once again, there was nothing but words of praise for Gene Shirk and his staff who handled the tourney. With Albright rapidly developing a reputation as a tournament site, it wouldn't be a bit surprising that the local field house will be the scene of many future NCAA play-offs, especially since a capacity crowd turned out to watch the championship game even though the home forces were not participating. It is interesting to note that the championship game between Mt. St. Mary's and Sacramento State drew only 1,800 persons, a crowd which was dwarfed in the spacious 12,000 seat field house at Evansville. Because of this incident, look for the site of the championship game to be changed in the future especially if Evansville University is not itself a participant in the play-offs.

HOFSTRA'S LOSS, PRINCETON'S GAIN:

With the return of Coach Bill Van Breda Koff to his alma mater, Princeton University, it will be a long time before Albright crowds will have a chance to watch the unorthodox antics of the fiery coach during a game. Although the move was sudden, it was not unexpected as rumors had been circulating that Van Breda Koff would be heading for bigger game in the near future. In any case, with the loss of their coach, along with their two top players in Richie Swartz and Bob Stowers, the fortunes of Hofstra's basketball team should be at its lowest ebb in years during next season.

NEXT YEAR ???

As is typical at the end of a successful season, everybody is already looking ahead to next year. Albright should have a very difficult time retaining the Northern Division Crown which they have held during the past two seasons. Chief threat should come from Susquehanna who will have their entire team back from this year. Also in contention should be Moravian, which usually means trouble to any Albright team. However, don't count the Lions completely out of the picture. Although somebody will have to be found to replace Bob Holzinger and even though Norm Bautsch will most likely be eligible only the first semester, the Lions could come up with a very respectable record, especially if next fall's freshmen class brings some outstanding prospects to the Lion's Den.

ON HORIZON:

With spring sports beginning in a few weeks, the practice fields are active every day after classes with candidates for the four teams. Since practice had barely gotten underway at the time of this printing, not enough material could be gathered together to feature either baseball, track, tennis or golf. Therefore, the next issue will be devoted to these four sports and the outlooks for the current season.

Cagers End Season With 18-10 Log Pearsall On All-American Second Team

Albright finished its 1961-62 basketball campaign by defeating C. W. Post College in the consolation round of the NCAA Eastern Playoffs by a 65-59 score. Albright barely missed getting into the championship round of the tournament when they lost a four-overtime thriller to Mount St. Mary's 67-64 on the previous night. In the championship round, the Mountaineers defeated Hofstra College for the Eastern Championship. The Mounts went on to the nationals at Evansville where they won the championship last Saturday night by defeated Sacramento State 58-57 in overtime.

Albright wound up its season with an 18-10 over-all log. Displaying a defensive average of only 58.7, the cagers of Will Renken hit an offensive average of 66.7 for 28 games.

Once again, the Lions were led by Captain Tommy Pearsall who led the team with a 19.5 scoring average including a fine 79.2 average from the foul line. For his efforts, Pearsall received a berth on the Second Team of the UPI Little All-American Selections along with a position on the AP All-State Team. Last year Pearsall was selected to the Third Team of the UPI Little All-Americans. This year the junior boosted his three-year total to 1,681 points, matching the mark of Eddie Anlian for the number two spot in Albright career scoring. George Conrad, Albright junior varsity coach, holds the all time record of 1,719.

Norm Bautsch was runnerup to Pearsall with 304 points followed by Bob Holzinger with 286. Holzinger led the team in rebounds with 435 for a 15.5 average with Bautsch also second in that category with 216.

Albright's best offensive effort came against Wilkes College in the opening game of the season when the Lions scored 95. Their best defensive effort came when they held Lebanon Valley to 33 points. The Lion's poorest output of the year came when they were upset by Moravian 34-28 in a slowed down game. Hofstra held the Lions to 36 points in their initial meeting. Bucknell and Scranton, each with 80, scored the most points on the Lions.

Albright's lone seniors on this year's squad were Bob Holzinger, Norm Ruttenberg and Dennis Hepner. All others are expected to be back in action next year although it is doubtful that Norm Bautsch will be eligible during the second semester.

The 18 victories this year brought Will Renken's mark to 55-27 during the past three seasons. Over his seven years as head coach at Albright, he has recorded 94 wins against 91 setbacks.

Shirk Elected Vice President Of MAC At Annual Meeting

Last week, the Albright campus played host to the annual meeting of the Middle Atlantic Collegiate Athletic Conference. On campus were 148 registrants, representing 34 MAC colleges throughout the area. During the progress of the two day affair, Gene Shirk, Director of Athletics at Albright was named vice-president of the conference while Hen Bream of Gettysburg was named as president, succeeding Mike Snider of Juniata, president the last two years.

One of the most important decisions made during the meeting was setting up the procedure for changing an institution's status from the college division to the university or from university to the college division. If, in the judgment of the executive committee, a college question makes a proper progress on scheduling requirements a final vote will be taken on the college's request for transfer. A maximum of three years will be allowed to make the change.

At dinner on Wednesday night, Dr. Harry V. Winters, President of Albright honored the visitors that Albright has not made a single change in its athletic policy. He attributed the winning records—and championships to good coaches and good athletes. He also remarked that right now Albright is in a cycle of winning but that the cycle of losing can never be far away.

Team champions officially recognized by the conference were basketball, St. Joseph's, university division; Albright, northern college division; PMC, southern college division; Hofstra, playoff champion; swimming, West Chester; wrestling, Lycoming, and fencing, Temple.

No site was selected for next year's meeting.
