Works of Edward Albee featured at Arts Festival

As you probably know by now, the 1988 Arts Festival features absurdist playwright Edward Albee. Albee, author of "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?" spoke last night to Albrightians and community residents. Tonight the Domino Players Company presents The Man Who Had Three Arms with special permission from Albee.

The man who had three arms is played by Edward Fernandez, a Lancaster resident and founding member of the Pennsylvania Stage Company. The other two members of the cast are freshmen John Shuba and Saidah Eklona.

The Man Who Had Three Arms hasn't been produced since its off-Broadway debut. Dr. Lynn Morrow received permission to produce the play after sending Fernandez's resume to Albee. "It's nerve-racking. You feel a responsibility that you want to do it right so he will be happy," Fernandez stated. Fernandez described his character as an average middle class gentleman who found himself growing a third arm. He gives lectures to various organizations. The audience participates by being cast as an organization which he addresses.

The other play the Domino Players Company is producing for Albee at Albright is really two one-act plays. The two plays are Counting the Ways and The Zoo Story.

Acclaimed playwright Edward Albee

Lauren Ashburn and Chris Nagle play the Man and Woman in Counting the Ways. Counting the Ways is a portrayal of a couple who have been married a while and find themselves faced with doubts. They are unsure of their love for each other.

The Zoo Story, the other one-act play, has two characters, Peter and Jerry. Peter, played by David Mote, is an uneventful middle class man peacefully reading his book in the park. Bill Exaros describes his character Jerry as "a really lonely guy. Everything has gone wrong for him. He's more worried why people don't understand him. I've always wanted to play this role." Jerry, Peter's opposite, meets Peter in the park.

Both casts feel the plays have taken a lot of time and energy. Fernandez declared, "It's hard, but I'm really having a good time." Shuba agrees. "It will be worth it." When asked how he felt about performing in front of the author, Fernandez stated, "I've never been so scared in my life that it was the author himself. He's a deep man, a man of few words and the words are chosen." "I was very impressed by Albee," said Shuba.

The Man Who Had Three Arms is performing on November 11th, 17th, and 19th at 8:00 p.m. It is also performing on November 13th at 2:00 p.m. and the 20th at 7:00 p.m. Counting the Ways and The Zoo Story are performing November 12th, 13th, and 18th at 8:00 p.m. There is another performance on November 20th at 2:30 p.m. Also there is a symposium featuring two critics discussing Albee's work at 4:00 p.m. Tickets are on sale at the Theatre Box Office from 2 to 4 p.m. and at the door. Tickets for the Domino Players Company's entire season are also on sale. Experience credit is given for The Man Who Had Three Arms, Counting the Ways and The Zoo Story, the symposium, and "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?" film at 8:00 p.m. on the 15th for $1.00 at the door. All of these events are being held in the Campus Centre Theatre.

Planning for new dorm well under way

by Matthew Rusher

Ground-breaking for the new special interest dormitory, to be located beside Mohn Hall, may begin as early as next month. The three story dorm, pictured above, will include 14 suites, each to be occupied by 12 to 14 students sharing "common interests." Unofficial sources have speculated that such "interests" could range from academic to social or organizational. The new dorm will house 178 students, and will require an expansion of the Mohn parking lot by 178 spaces, in accordance with city zoning laws. This will require the relocation of the soccer field to a site closer to David Crystal.

The dorm is scheduled for completion this September, to allow student occupancy next year. Construction can begin only after the building permit is approved by the City Zoning Board. So far, neighborhood reaction to the planned construction has been enthusiastic, and the college hopes to develop a positive relationship with the community.

"Everyone is anxious to get the dorm completed on time" stated Ted Holtzman, Director of Buildings and Grounds. Although winter is the worst season for outdoor construction, the September completion date requires that work begin as soon as possible. Progress will be tough to measure, and Holtzman feels that "As we come out of winter, we will know whether the dorm can be completed on schedule."

The new dormitory was designed to provide an ideal environment for student growth through shared experience. Numerous lounges and sizable meeting rooms meet the need for flexible space. A large kitchen on the ground floor will give students the opportunity to cook their own meals on a regular basis, and each suite has a complete bathroom, with adjoining washer and dryer.

Another concern in designing the new dorm was the desire to provide realistic, comfortable housing for disabled students. Holtzman stated, "We want to accommodate people who are disabled without embarrassing them." To this end, suites on the first and second floors will be wheelchair accessible, as will bathrooms in several suites.

The new dorm is certainly a bold step both in its architectural design and its intended use. "We're trying to build and design the dorm so that it will serve the Albright community for fifty years," Holtzman stated. "We tried to combine good service and flexibility to create an atmosphere which allows students of similar interests to live together, thus enhancing their educational experience." Conceptually, this goal seems realistic, as the new dorm will

Phonathon nets over $65,000

Last week, the Albright Phonathon succeeded in raising a total of $66,317. Over 100 student volunteers from various student organizations broke the $50,000 goal over five nights of calling which spanned from Sunday, October 30 through Friday, November 4. Organizations competed in raising the most money during their calling period. Phi Mu were awarded $100 for soliciting $11,535 in donations to the College. Alpha Delta Pi came in second with $11,049, earning them $50.

Phonathon chairpersons Bonnie Ghosh-Dastidar, Ken Faulkner, and Dan Kim expressed their thanks to all students involved for a job well done. Groups participating included Alpha Chi Rho, Alpha Delta Pi, A-Phi-O Little Sisters, BAR, B.A.S.E., the Foreign Students Association, Gamma Sigma Sigma, Krause Hall, Lion Diplomats, Phi Mu, Sigma Phi Epsilon, Walton Hall, as well as other students.

WXAC, SGA Update

In regard to last week's article detailing the disciplinary action imposed on WXAC by SGA, the Student Life Committee recommended a change in that action. As a result of the recommendation, SGA reconsidered its decision and decided to change it. Rather than fine the five members of WXAC the amount the station was in debt, SGA is now charging half that amount to WXAC's self-generated account and the other half to the five member's student accounts.

Editorial

We at the Albrightian would like to express thanks to those students and faculty members who participated in our Presidential Poll. We were happy with participation, though the end result (however true to life) appalled us. A majority of the staff (as well as a majority of the faculty polled) felt that Mike Dukakis would make a better president.

Quoting from the editorial in the October 30 issue of The Philadelphia Inquirer, "Mr. Dukakis is the better of these two candidates for the tough times ahead" Therein lies the major problem, there are tough times ahead and changes will have to be made. Bush will have to make some tough and unpopular decisions and may be reluctant to do so, but changes will be needed soon and can't wait for him to wait for the last minute. Dukakis was more will to make these possibly unpopular decisions. Certain problems must be addressed; healthcare, the homeless, the deficit; these are issues that will not go away. If ignored for another four years, the consequences may be disastrous to the unity of the nation. Michael Dukakis attempted to face these issues; for this, he earned our respect and our vote.

We are cautiously confident that George Bush will carry out his duties competently, and we hope that he addresses this nations problems quickly and justly.

This week, the second annual Festival for the Arts descends upon campus. Edward Albee, a critically acclaimed playwright will be featured in this year's Festival. No, you may not like what you see, but then again, maybe you will. And you won't know unless you go! Events are being held all week, and, if nothing else, experience credits are involved. Who's afraid of Edward Albee? Certainly not the students of Albright.

OFF THE RECORD

When this column comes out, a new president will have been elected. For most of us, the next president will be the first one to have a direct impact on us. Many of us will look at our first real paycheck and wonder how our taxes are being spent. Many of us will look for a place to live and be forced to board in our old rooms at home because of the housing crisis in our country. Once we graduate these problems will be very real. It's tough to worry about these problems now, though. We're too busy worrying about tests, papers, and our social lives to be concerned about our national and world problems. At least that's what I thought.

The truth is, in the last two months I have had more intelligent and insightful political conversations with my friends than I've ever thought possible. I see a genuine concern about problems that will be with us for a long time and it makes me feel good to know that we, as college students, care about more than just our short-term concerns.

However, there has been much criticism of today's college students.

The radical students of the '60's have been romanticized so much that we have been unfairly compared to them. It is said that we don't have their drive or initiative or that we don't care about or even know what the issues are. But after two years of being a college student, I can say that those accusations are false. you want drive and initiative? How about last year's sit-in at the library to protest the extinction of the nursing program? I can't express how exciting it was to be a part of something like that. It really showed that we do care and, if needed, we will organize and make ourselves heard. And as far as knowing the issues, take a look at last week's issue and read some of the student comments about the election.

When I was a little kid, I used to think how weird it was that someone my age would grow up to be president. But as I grow older and begin to have my own opinions and ideas about how the country should be run, I look around at my friends and it doesn't seem so weird after all.

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor,

This letter is in response to last weeks article explaining the fine levied on the officers of WXAC-FM by the Student Government Association. I believe that all organizations should be made aware of the decisions of SGA and the Student Life Committee because the outcome of this issue will set a precedent for future decision of all SGA funded organizations.

The Student Organization handbook states that "officers are personally responsible for any mismanaged funds." It does not state that officers can be personally responsible for "overspending" budgeted funds. Charlotte Marie, Director of the Campus Center, in a letter asking SGA to reconsider their decision, argues that the interpretation of "mismanaged funds" is debatable. This policy was created a few years ago after SGA discovered that an organization's officers were gaining personally from these funds. SGA has already agreed that the WXAC expenditures were not used wrongly; they were justified expenses. As a result of this disagreement, Brent Vandersall called a meeting of the Student Life Committee to consider the possibility of an appeal. Unfortunately, WXAC was given only one day's notice to prepare for the meeting. Shusei Katsumi, station manager, and myself presented the case of WXAC to the committee. Their decision was to split the original fine in half. One half would be split equally among the five persons who were fined and the other half would be charged to WXAC's self-generated account (funds raised by WXAC, independent of SGA).

I believe that the committee did not realize our intentions for appealing SGA's decision. It is not that we believe the fine is too high; our argument is that SGA has no "legal" right to fine personal student accounts for overspending. The officers of an organization are able to sign check requests but they never signed any form admitting personal responsibility for organizational monies.

In conclusion, WXAC's arguments are not about the fine, per se, but about the principle behind the fine. Can SGA fine the student accounts of officers of organizations that overspend their allocated funds? Why didn't SGA or even the Business office recognize that WXAC was in debt in the early part of August and why was WXAC still able to draw on this account until it was hundreds of dollars in debt?

Granted, there is no excuse for my lack in keeping a close watch on the books of WXAC, but since the Business office was so far behind on their records and SGA was not keeping accurate records of their funded organizations, how can the expect an organization to keep accurate records? It is not the fine, it is the principle behind the fine. The Student Government Association is well respected by myself and the other members of the WXAC Executive Board. SGA and WXAC have worked well together on this issue but not well enough. There is still more to discuss and further evaluation of SGA's policy is necessary. This problem will not be solved until some clear policies are constructed, interpretations of the policies are decided, and all organizations are made aware of them.

I would welcome any response to this argument from students, officers of organizations, faculty and staff.

Brian Wm. Niles '90
Business Director, WXAC-FM

Dear Editor,

There is a need to clarify statements made in last weeks Letters to the Editor. In letters written by Brian Wm. Niles, '90, and some Agitated Albright Students; it was stated that the students pay a $150.00 student activity fee. This is untrue. The students pay a $120.00 student activity fee which is broken up into a $60.00 payment each semester.

If students have any questions concerning the activity fee, they can raise them at the next SGA meeting. Meetings are held every Tuesday night at 8:30 p.m. in the South Lounge. Meetings always have been, and always will be, open to all students.

I though the record should be set straight.

certainly present unique living conditions for its occupants.

Other building and development news involved a delay in the construction of the new computer center. Mr. Holtzman stated that the process of designing and fabricating the steel to be used in the framework "took longer than expected." The expected date for completion has been changed from February to some time near spring break. After the steel arrived several weeks ago much progress has been made. "Things should go more smoothly now. The brick selection has been made and the windows are ready for delivery." Holtzman is confident that the construction will continue without further delay.

Security Beat

Now that we are well into the fall semester and everyone is settled into their routines, the Security Department here on campus would like to address a few safety issues. As things come up concerning student safety, we will relay them to you through this column, which will appear in the Albrightian on a weekly basis. This first article deals with the propping of doors.

Student safety should be a major concern of everyone on campus; however, as a result of some recent incidents it appears that not everyone is as concerned as they should be. First and foremost, the propping of dormitory doors by students must stop.

Propping doors, for whatever reason, leaves the dorm wide open to anyone who desires to enter the building. We have already had a few incidents with strangers in dorms and fortunately, no one has been hurt. This, however, may not always be the case and we, in Security, would like to create a concern among students in order to help detect and prevent problems. For example, did you know that there was a male flasher in the dorms and not one person reported seeing him until well after the incident occurred? Also, recently, three salesmen were going door to door

What is Oxfam America?

On Thursday, November 17, 1988, Albright students, faculty, staff, and administrators will be given the opportunity to make a difference in the World. By donating one, two, or possibly even three of your meals from the dining hall, and by dropping some money in one of the collection cans that will be available can enable us to donate a substantial amount of money to Oxfam America. Oxfam America is an international organization that funds self-help development projects and disaster relief in poor countries in Africa, Asia and Latin America, and also prepares and distributes educational material for people in the United States on the issues of development and hunger.

Oxfam America is conducting this "Fast for World Harvest" nationally. The symbolic meaning behind the Fast helps to recognize World Hunger, while the money made from the Fast can help solve the problem.

In order to participate, all you have to do is to commit yourself on a sign-up sheet. It is very important that you include your meal ticket number, how many meals you will donate, which meals they will be, and your box number. Also, on the day of the Fast, there will be series of films dealing with the causes of World Hunger and how Oxfam America helps in these countries. These films will be held in Masters Hall, Room 207 from 5:30 - 6:30 p.m. with a discussion session following.

If you have any questions, concerns or suggestions please contact Valerie Zbicki (Box 1530) or Dr. Barker and we will be glad to help. Thank you for your support and cooperation. Remember, you can make a difference.

in Mohn, Crowell, and Walton Halls selling perfume and only two male students were concerned enough to report them to security. This college does not welcome solicitation of this kind and anyone seen soliciting should immediately be reported to us. Naturally, one cannot say that the incidents mentioned are directly related to door propping, but why invite strangers in by leaving doors wide open? During September of this year, door propping was up 33% from last year alone, which makes one wonder whether or not students even care about their own safety; let alone the safety of others.

It is the students' responsibility to do everything they can to maintain security and this includes reporting any strange events or people they may see. Nothing can be done to stop or prevent such occurrences if no one knows about them. Therefore, we should be working together to take all possible safety precautions to prevent problems from arising. Otherwise, someone is going to get hurt and it could be easily by you.

In next week's issue, we will be reporting on the progress of the installation of new lounge doors and alarm systems in the dorms.

Dear Up,

First, I would like to compliment you on expressing concern for your friend. From your description of the problem, it appears that your friend is grappling with bulimia, a painful and confusing eating disorder. You are right in assuming that she is endangering her health and safety. Tooth decay, esophageal injuries, and nutritional imbalances are a few of the immediate health risks she faces. In addition, long term dangers include amenorrhea, permanent tissue damage, and even death.

A 1985 study indicated that approximately 15 to 19 percent of Albright women are struggling with an eating disorder. Surveys at other colleges and universities suggest that between 15 and 30 percent of women have some type of eating disorder. These surveys also indicate that the frequency of males afflicted with eating disorders is on the rise.

Most people adapt these abnormal eating patterns in an attempt to lose weight and feel better about themselves. However, what initially is an attempt to gain control over eating and weight gain quickly leads to a lifestyle that is very much out of control. Concomitant to this sense of dietary chaos are feelings of despair, guilt, fear, depression and loneliness.

Your friend needs professional help. However, getting her to come for counseling may be difficult. It might be ineffective to confront her about her abnormal eating patterns.

She knows what she is doing is abnormal and even harmful. Her embarrassment and denial central to these issues will probably result in resistance. It may be more helpful however to talk to her about the emotional effects of her eating disorder. You might try talking to her about how depressed she may have appeared to you lately, or how she may be withdrawing from friends, or how she seems to be faltering academically. These issues are sometimes easier to confront, especially if you are close friends. Finally, she needs to know that she can be helped. We are considerably successful with treating people struggling with eating disorders here at the counseling center. And remember, all counseling is strictly confidential and does not become part of a student's academic record.

ATTENTION STUDENTS:

The Counseling Center will be sponsoring a weekly column in the Albrightian. The column will adapt a Dear Abby format and encouraged to write anonymous letters about their various problems to Box # 8. Dr. Tim Ring, Director of the Counseling Center, and his staff will answer these letters in the next issue of the Albrightian. Write your anonymous letters to: Dear Dr. Ring, Campus Center Box # 8.

BARS: The Party Alternative

By Kimberly L. Haigh

When thinking about the party scene at Albright College what comes to mind? Well, let us think... and think again... Oh, that's right, The Apartments! Shocker!! Well, after hopping from one apartment to another one often gets tired of the same old thing - crowds, sweat, and the good ol' beer dripping down onto your hair, clothes, and shoes.

Well, guess what! There can be a change for you especially if you are in the 21 and above crowd. That is right, there are alternatives. These alternatives are the Reading bars, ranging from the biggest and most popular Willoughby's and Ronies to the Northeast Taproom and The Pike, the smaller side-street pubs.

Beginning next week The Albrightian will be featuring the different bars around the Albright Community. In these features the crowd, atmosphere, quality of food, selections of beverages, and the prices will be reviewed. The bars which will be reviewed first are those who offer the Driver's Drink Free Program. This program is for students at Albright. The designated driver of a group will receive free soda the entire night from the bar. All the designated driver has to do is to go up to the bartender, explain that he/she is the designated driver, and be given a pin so the bartender realizes who he is for the rest of the night.

In the coming weeks if you get the urge for a change in scenery turn to these reviews and give a new place a try. After all, if you do not enjoy the bar scene you can always go back to The Apartments. For those of you who are not 21 stick in there for you will be soon so keep these coming reviews in mind.

Skiing with The Society

By Kimberly L. Haigh

Once the cold winter days come along and the snow starts lying on the ground the urges to go skiing increasingly build. The desire to skim the slopes, glissade through the trails, and jump the moguls builds and builds.

However, once the momentum rises - problems arise. When one is at school such problems as how are you going to get to the ski resort (especially if you do not own a car), which ski resort will you choose, when is the best time to go, and with whom are you going with.

Well, the Albright Ski Society (A.S.S.) headed by Steve Yocom and Paul Hammond can solve these problems. The society has planned trips to several different ski resorts throughout January and February for the Albright students. These trips include going to Montage, Little Gap, Camelback, Hunter, and Killington.

In order to go to these resorts one does not have to be a member of the ski society, but it is to the advantage of the skier if she/he is, for every member receives an additional 4-5 dollar reduction off the total cost of the trip.

To become a member of the society contact Steve Yocom (Box 1526) or Paul Hammond (Box 713) before Dec. 1, the deadline. There will be a 5 dollar fee for those who join but will definitely be made up through the reduction rates of the trips.

Soccer team in transition stage

by Chris Gehring

At the end of the 1988 Albright Lion soccer season, one word in particular comes to mind: transition. When considering the course of events this year, and looking at the overall status of the team, transition is certainly an appropriate word.

The team ended their season with 2 wins, 11 losses, and 2 ties. Despite the team's record, Coach Stan Cieplinski remains optimistic. As a first year coach, Stan arrived at Albright with virtually no knowledge of who he had to work with, what type of skills they possessed, or the positions they played. After coaching the team for a season, Cieplinski claims, "I'm looking forward to next season. We have that transition season behind us."

Obviously, as shown by their record, the team encountered some severe problems this season. Fortunately, none of these problems are insurmountable, and with some work, Cieplinski feels that they can be remedied. First of all, the team lacks speed. To combat this, next season the team will undergo a strong conditioning program in an effort to gain that needed speed as well as endurance. Another one of Cieplinski's main objectives is to work on the improvement of the team's ball skills, and add an element of deception to the offense. This year, according to Cieplinski, "we telegraphed entirely too many passes." The lack of goals was due largely in part to the team's inability to hold on to the ball for substantial periods of time. For the team to increase their goal production next season, they need to "improve their dribbling, learn some fakes...and put together strings of three consecutive passes." Cieplinski is aware that these plans basically amount to a "complete overhaul", but he feels confident that the team now knows his system, and will be better prepared for the 1989 season if they are able to improve upon these basic skills.

A season ending with a record of 2-11-2 would not appear to have many high points. However, Cieplinski points out that despite some of the losses, the team played some great games, and remained competitive against some very tough opponents. The most memorable of the team's efforts was tying Muhlenberg, and forcing the game to a double overtime, before finally losing 2-0. At that time, Muhlenberg was a top ten nationally ranked soccer team, and on paper, Albright should have been blown out. It was that type of effort that leads Cieplinski to believe that there is hope for success in the next few seasons. Secondly, team co-captain Eric Schwilk points out that, "The morale of the team was much better this year. Coach did a great job to make the season enjoyable for the guys on the team." Finally, Cieplinski is working hard to recruit some talent for next year's team. At this time, he has "a dozen or so young guys, all of which were all conference players in high school." If nothing else, there is tremendous potential for growth, because obviously, the team can only improve. Co-captain Scott McGough states, "We improved a lot more than last year. The program is definitely moving up. I think we've seen the bottom, so hopefully next year we'll end up somewhere in the middle. In a few years, we may just move up to the top."

There were definitely some outstanding players who warrant recognition as a result of their play this season. On defense, senior Schwilk was a stable force throughout the season. Junior Scott McGough was awesome, and freshmen Paul Bianci, a young hopeful, will return next season to lead the Lions on D. In the goal this year, junior Chris Luning turned out some excellent performances, and freshman Scott Fitzpatrick proved to be a more than competent back-up. Karl Gajewski managed to score three goals as a freshman, and freshman Todd Whitford finished up the season with several impressive performances. Next year, the offense will hopefully score an excess of goals behind juniors Pat Roncase, Brian Brick, and Jim Hansell, along with sophomore Teddy Westervelt.

Football to finish away

by John Andersen

Last week Moravian came to Shirk Stadium to face the Lions and walked away with their 8th victory against one loss. The Lions fell to their 7th loss against 2 wins.

Albright's only score of the game came on a 28 yard field goal by Rich Appaluccio halfway through the first quarter. The score was set up by a Scott Steele recovery of a fumbled punt at the Moravian 15 yard line. However, Moravian came right back with a 66 yard touchdown drive making the score 7-3 after one quarter. Moravian scored twice in the second quarter on a 15 yard reception by Pat Sisk and a Mike Reinhard fumble recovery off a Dean Vagnozzi blocked punt. The blocked punt came with only 8 seconds left before the half. There was only one score in the second half and that came in the third quarter with a Moravian 51 yard drive to make it 28-3. The Lions just couldn't get their offense moving, totaling only 84 net yards for the day. Nick Varrusi again led the Lions with 18 tackles. Following him were Mike McCoy, 11 tackles and Chris Lysakowski, also 11 tackles. Jim Thorpe came through with 7 tackles and 2 interceptions.

Next week the Albright Lions travel to face a team in Susquehanna squad for the final game of the season.

THE PICKS OF THE WEEK

by Sweet Lou

Well, I had another dismal week with a 1-4 record. The only game that covered was my Notre Dame prediction. They won by 44. West Virginia failed to cover by a point. I blame that on Major Harris getting hurt in the second half. Army just roled over Air Force, which surprised more than just me. My two pro picks weren't even close. Tampa Bay and Dallas got crushed. This brings my record to 14-14, and hoping for improvement this week.

PLAY 1: (COLLEGE) West Virginia v. Rutgers (+19). *****

I'm going with West Virginia again. They have covered every game but two. Both spreads were larger than this weeks, and West Virginia lost each time by one. Rutgers is coming off a rough and tough game with Pitt last week and barely losing doesn't help. West Virginia has the most potent offense in the college ranks and their defense isn't too bad either. I'm looking for a Mountaineer romp, even with an injured Major Harris. West Virginia 49, Rutgers 10.

PLAY 2: (PRO) Indianapolis v. Green Bay (+5). *****

The Colts could be one of the hottest teams in football right now. But away from home and visiting a hostile area could spell trouble for them. Green Bay is a solid team at home. I feel they will play good enough to win this game. Now, a little stat. Teams who score over 70 points two weeks in a row, fail to cover the third week. With this in mind, give me the Packers to cover. Indianapolis 20, Green Bay 18.

PLAY 3: (PRO) San Diego (+5) v. Atlanta. *****

Atlanta could be the best team in the NFL, if it wasn't for 7 points. And after the San Diego game, I've come to the conclusion that the Chargers are the worst team in the NFL. Atlanta will crush them at home. Atlanta 24, San Diego 10.

PLAY 4: (COLLEGE) Oklahoma v. Missouri (+20). ***

Oklahoma's big game is next week against Nebraska. They could care less about 'Mizzo.' Mizzo, an improving team, could give Oklahoma trouble if they are not ready. I feel the Sooners will be thinking of the Cornhuskers, instead of Missouri, but still escape with a victory. Oklahoma 37, Missouri 21.

PLAY 5: (COLLEGE) Tennessee (+3) v.

Mississippi. ***

Mississippi is a tough SEC team with only a 4-5 record, but with the spread, they are a smooth 8-1. Tennessee is on a very rough and rocky road this year, after having expected to be at the top. They are having trouble winning. Playing at Ole Miss is almost impossible. I'm looking for a roll by Mississippi. Mississippi 28, Tennessee 10.

Well, there they are. Hopefully, this will be a good week, not like the last two. By the way, did you notice my basketball pick that came through? The Knicks played Boston tough up until overtime, but lost by 7. Luckily, they still covered. I'll try Boston (-4) against the Detroit Pistons in Boston. Last year this series belonged to the home team. This year won't be any different. Good Luck. See you next week.
