President Ma Fable Diversifies Campus Condoms

by Sturdy LeTex

Today marks one year in office for Albite University's student elected president, Mrs. Emma "Ma" Fable. This past year has been one of great change at Albite both physically and socially.

As many may recall Albite University was the first college to allow its student body to elect their college president, and last April 1, Ma Fable won by a 1,269 to 1 vote. The one vote against Ma was explained by a disgruntled student who was accidentally locked in the infirmary over Thanksgiving Break.

Ma explains her victorious election was made possible by the superb efforts of her campaign manager Gert Blanco who faithfully assisted her in raising the necessary campaign funds. Ingeniously, campaign funds were raised through the sale of over 28,000 condoms to students over a banner Spring Fever Weekend last year. Additional money was raised through donations made for alka seltzer, and aspirin the morning following several greek Hell Nights.

However, President Fable's year in office is not left untainted by the Albite

Gossip Guild it seems that unsubstantiated rumors claimed that Ma Fable accepted bribes for writing excused absence notes. President Fable says she has not forgotten this vicious attack and explained her stance on the issue by promising, "When I catch that bugger I'll put ex-lax in his gingerale!"

One of the more colorful changes on campus include free books and a massive distribution of free condoms of various shapes, sizes, and colors. This movement has been met with much enthusiasm and its success has been attributed to the idea that Albite University is always striving to touch upon and diversify the social life at Albite no matter how personal.

Student reactions to Ma's one year in office:

"Ma's the best. How many college presidents know almost the entire student body by name?"

"She's taken charge of the campus. People realize when they screw up they'll have to answer to Ma."

SLOB vs. Dean Lubbatt's

by Bud Wiser

The Student Liquor Organization Board (SLOB) led by president Big Bob Strataviniski verbally attacked the administration again during a heated debate on campus alcohol policies.

"They won't listen to us because they cannot accept the fact that we are adults and capable of making our own decisions when it comes to alcohol. How can we reason with them?" asks Mr. Strataviniski.

Dean Lubbatts, head of the SLOB opposition explains "students attend Albite to learn, and disappointment is one thing they must learn to deal with."

It seems the central issue concerns the wording of SLOB advertisements permitted to be used on campus. The two sides have stubbornly stuck to their own interpretations of the facts.

The next administration-SLOB debate has been postponed until the two sides can find a host establishment that is not only agreeable to both sides, but that hasn't been slandered in Mr. Strataviniski column. Until that time the decision is still up in the air... does it taste great or is it less filling?

FALSIES to Compete on Albite Campus

by Hans Off

The Albite campus is eagerly awaiting the return of FALSIES (Fraternity and Lesser Sorority Invitational Extracurricular Showdown), scheduled to take place on Saturday, April 14th. This great tradition has not been funded in recent years, and therefore had not taken place on campus since 1983; however, this year the Campus Center Board has generously contributed funds in order to sponsor the event and have it continue at Albite.

FALSIES will pit fraternity against fraternity, sorority against sorority, and hopefully (after a few drinks), fraternity against sorority. The competition will begin early Saturday morning with a construction build-off. Each sorority will receive building materials, and the first team that builds a house for the yet-to-be-charted Alpha Delta Alpha fraternity will win the honor of participating in their initiation night.

Later that morning the fraternities will square-off in a "King of the Mountain" competition, taking place in the parking lot of the Pagoda. Five brothers of each fraternity will battle it out in the Games to dine in the C.C. mess hall. A competition is scheduled involving a keg of beer for each fraternity and sorority, and whichever team can come up with a resemblance of winter beef barbecue or noodle casserole wins first place.

After lunch the fraternities will compete to see which can fill Selwhine Pond the highest. The last recorded winner was A-Phag-O, with a record-busting measurement of 15 gallons with only eight brothers! But please, no heckling from the audience - this is some serious competition.

The next event will involve the fraternities driving around town, trying to pick up the most Redding women in one hour. The record remains at 55, including 20 nursery school girls and 5 teachers from Redding High. This year CCB was going to include competition for the sororities (to see how many humans-resembling-men from Redding could be obtained in one hour), but the school could not obtain vehicles large enough to contain the probable number of captors.

In the afternoon a "shave-off" competition will take place, where each sorority must shave a fraternity in the quickest amount of time - cooperation is the key. The winners in '83 were the Crabs, with a record of 30 second; however, some of the brothers required plastic surgery later. The Sig Ape's finished last with a time of 2 hours - it seemed that they just couldn't pull themselves away from the mirrors.

The last event of the day will be a bowling tournament between all those still coherent. The brothers of TAKE are scheduled to have a private bowl tournament of their own, later Saturday evening.

Prizes will be awarded at 10 pm. They include a guest pass to breakfast; coupons for last year's editions of Business text books and life's subscription to the Albitian.

All students are cordially invited to watch the day's events.

Latest Fad: Dorm Monogramming

by Imma B. J...

Yes, it's the latest craze to hit the campus and has quite literally taken the campus overnight... Dorm monogramming! It seems the latest fad has gained some wall space at Albite.

In an interview with the first person to try the Monogramming, Ms. Suzi Sweetness, Resident Director of Moan Dorm explained, "These kids think that this college is theirs. That may be, but this new dorm is mine!"

How does one get a dorm monogrammed? Easy, simply tape an envelope filled with five unmarked twenty dollar bills to the bottom of the mail box located near the campus center mail room, include the name of the target dorm or building, the initials to be painted, and the

It seems quite possible that this new craze may branch out to other edifices on Albite campus with the new Center for the Arts building, and other construction plans rumored to be started and completed on Albite campus by the year 2000. Unfortunately, the artist or artists responsible for the Monogramming were unavailable for interviewing.

The effects of monogramming could be felt all accross campus, and possibly lead to a reduction in the amount of thefts that take place since everything will be marked. Head of security Mr. Patton P. Marmaduke explains, "I think this new found sense of property and territorial labeling is great! I wonder if these guys will do squirrels."

A MONTH FROM NEXT THURSDAY IN HISTORY

It started as another idle threat from administration, but this time they aren't bluffing. The Albite University campus is going completely dry on this date. Students are in an uproar and will have petitions and a sit-in at BK's Sports Saloon next week (as per usual, over 21 only, please!). Oh well...at least we'll still have Spring Fever Weekend!

Somebody's Thoughts

There is a constant attempt on our campus to give recognition where recognition is due. In light of this, an effort is being made to make the entire student body aware of it's debt to those who spend so much time behind the scenes. Never before have so few, done so much, for so many, and been so unappreciated.

To assist in our personal crusade, we have placed our photos below. We are proud to acknowledge ourselves as some of the campus' leaders of moral virtue, intellectual prowess, and media achievement. We strongly encourage any readers to pay homage to our accomplishments. (This includes "favors" in any sense of the word)

As Editors, we are among the chosen few who have been selected due to our ability laugh at ourselves.

Change at the Apartments

by Harry Palms

As one can imagine, the community is in an uproar. Why? Well, from this reporter's perspective, everything has hit the fan. Ever since the new arts building succumbed to pornography of its finest nature, we all knew this was going to happen.

In case you haven't noticed, the woods have gone communal. A scene reminiscent of the Blithedale Romance intermingled with Woodstock, heads are still turning. Day after day, a piece of the 13th Street wall has been torn down and replaced with flowers. The campus security force has also gone with the Save Earth/Woodstock '90 theme, by handing in their walkie talkies for a more suitable means of communication, the bullhorn.

Citing the horn takes less energy and more inner will to communicate, the security force has seen this as a viable reaction to the immobilization of the president's estate. Gone is the Kentucky Derby Party, and here is the Molotov Cocktail Party.

As for the Would's, it is worse than one can imagine. The 13th Street wall has been dissembled, leaving debris (as if there wasn't any before) and other sordid implements of upheaval. The apartments themselves have turned into an inner-peace sanitariums. The walls of the units have been ripped apart, leaving each unit to blend with themselves.

What has the campus said to all this? To quote the president and head of food, "Hey bud, let's party."

Jack Off and the Non-Dairy Creamers
If We Time It Right
Boff Records

Ooooooh! Here is the first band to come and present the musical format with loads of fun. From their home town of Virginsville, the band recently exploded onto the Albite and Redding scene. I first experienced them on the (ground) floor of a local establishment and have been enthralled ever since.

Jack Off... poses your attention to span farther than ever before. You must listen to "If We Time It Right" with an open ear, or the experience won't be as good for you as it was for me. The album provides a non-stop romp of guitars and pulsating drum machines that will penetrate through your walls. To pick up a copy, put on your party clothes and head for the woods-or any street corner for that matter.

Key Cuts: "Slow Motion Momma," "Heads or Tails," "I'm Sick of Cellulose," and "Your Attitudes are Overshadowing"

Goes Well With: Madonna, Ups and Downs, Pussy Galore, and Dolly Parton

President Bush practicing his new Kung-Fu hobby, while visiting Albite last year.

EARN 18 EXPERIENCES IN 1NIGHT

The brothers of Tau Tappa Keg are hosting an experience night this Friday - Saturday at their house for all freshman girls. Participants must enjoy self-expression in a one-on-one situation or in a group setting. A change of clothes is recommended.

Pagoda changes hands

by Dick Head

To help ease the problem of parking on campus, Albite has purchased the Pagoda on top of Mt. Penn. The historic landmark will be demolished, and a parking lot for commuters will take its place. The parking lot is expected to accommodate over 150 vehicles upon its completion, projected (with some degree of certainty and confidence) to be in the Fall of 2016.

"It's the least we can do, the very, very, very least," says President Fable.

Commuters will now only have to walk down the Pagoda Trail to get to their classes. This is quite a difference from what they have now! The money saved from building in a sidewalk down the trail will be spent on research to develop parking stickers that will not fall or peel off steamed windows.

Freshman Albite student in the midst of an identity crisis in the 5th floor bathroom at Moan Hall (identity remains anonymous to protect the poor girl).

News-Like Flash

The Albite tradition of "ponding" students on their birthdays has come to an abrupt halt since early last month, when one student mysteriously disappeared under the mucky waters. Freshman Jane Dough was affectionately chucked into Selwhine Pond by her friends on her 19th birthday, but never surfaced to the top. Her friends reportedly called for help and then attempted to search the waters for her, but she was gone. Security Chief Patton P. Marmaduke has made no formal statement regarding the incident, but inside sources say that he has signed out numerous books from the Gingling Library on the subject of the Lockness Monster.

A Couple-a Letters

Dear Editor,

I hop you will disregard the nasty comments made to the editors and staff about the type-os' in the papper. I feel that the contentents and they're superier qualitie in each issue more then makeup four any oversites in spelling. Heck, if they want to complain about it may be they should come out and help proffread each and evry word in all the artcles! Anyone who doesnt understand the amount of time yous guys put in an Albition is ignorant and should come out and help hisself.

Stanley Q. Nearsight
Freshmin

Dear Editor,

I am a second-semester sophomore transfer from Harvard University. I am writing to express how astonishingly impressed I was with the Albite University award-winning catalogs, which enticed me to enroll in this highly intellectual liberal arts institute as soon as possible.

The bright yellow locomotive pictured on the cover of one of the catalogs brought me back to my childhood years, when I visited Ol'grandpop by the tracks, and played with cousin Petie with our choo-choo train. Most of all, the brochure unfolding into a Monopoly board is what really drew me to Albite. I have had enough Shakespeare, Plato, and Milton for my college career. Parker Brothers, here I come!!!

I feel so very privileged to now be a part of this giant Albite "gameboard," where all the students play fairly and considerately. It's just like the catalog says, "...Albite students have always lived, learned, and worked together, surprising, pleasing, and fulfilling themselves." This is clearly evident as I see the clean walls in the bathrooms, and walk across the cafeteria at lunch, and just about everywhere on the campus!

Although Redding is not your "typical college town," as the catalog admits, it is a fun place. Coming to the "unspoiled" Berks County is certainly a pure delight. "It's like going to school in the real world." Those outlets just have my head spinning. And the pizza is great and cheap, too!

I don't regret for a minute the ride on The Reading that helped me advance to this school of Veritas et Justitia, truth and justice, obce and for all.

Sincerely,
Alicia S. McAlbright

Annual Cookies and Milk Meeting

by Crash Davis

The Albite Administrators have met once again to plan out the year's travesties. On this meeting's slate is: the issues of integrating forks and knives on possibly one tray, making a mandatory nap hour for all Seniors, turning the pool into another pond, and letting friends be friends.

As you can see in the accompanying picture (above), the administrators are staffed by one student, to make sure recess

"just doesn't get out of hand." The Food Service staff has graciously dug up the food for the luncheon as their service contribution for the semester.

One administrator summed up the meeting, while spitting a few cookie crumbs, remarked: "Thizz izz a very important meeting for uzz. We are trying to accomplizz some positive changezz for our studentzz."

The Albite University Marching Band is getting geared up for next year! Interested in joining? First meeting next Thursday in the C.C. North Lounge -- BYOH (bring your own horn).

Give Me A Turtle???

by I. Brow

The Albite community was both surprised and elated to hear the news that a new addition has been added to our Security Force. Leonardo, one of the popular Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles, will begin the third shift patrol tonight.

Though it took long hours of contract negotiations for the parties involved to come to an agreement, Head of Security Patton P. Marmaduke felt it was well worth it. "Our image could really use a boost -- Leonardo will certainly help."

"There were compromises on both sides," Marmaduke continued, "but we have a solid agreement. Leonardo doesn't have to wear the regulated blue-grey, long sleeve, linen shirt. His numchucks will remain and serve as deterrents, however he will not be permitted to carry his swords.

Marmaduke is confident that Albite students will welcome this addition to the force, and will feel quite safe with him on patrol. He also mentioned that he was negotiating with Don Johnson, but Johnson insisted on replacing the security car with a white Ferrari. The budget however can only provide a used baby blue Corvette.

"Maybe next year," concludes Marmaduke. "If not, we might try for one of Charlie's Angels. Of course if we were to succeed, I would personally supervise her training."

News-Like Flash

An Albite student was arrested after throwing an incredible temper tantrum injuring 6 people, in a Stone Harbor, NJ bar last weekend. The student, who has yet to be identified, reportedly went berzerk after being asked, "Does everybody really all bite at your school?" After throwing several pitchers, chairs, and tables at the antagonist and several laughing bystanders, the police arrived and restrained the student.

A competency hearing will be held early next month to determine the mental stability of the student. Albite school psychologist Dr. Ted Ringaling will be representing the student, since he [coincidentally] was present at the Stone Harbor bar during the incident.

Psycho Spotlight

by Sadie Kist

Jan Wallflower is a senior Stress Management/Confusion major hoping to obtain BS.

Personality - Ms. Wallflower has been described by some of her bosom buddies as having a huge personality.

Hobbies - include experimenting in facial expression.

Sports - Ms. Wallflower has two letters in the Albite Body Gestures Team, and has competed regionally for her somewhat hidden talent of Eyebrow Ballet

Activities - Our super-psycho has been a member of the Albition staff, and the staff of WACX for several years.

Ms. Wallflower explains, "As a matter of fact, I feel that my involvement with these two organizations can be seen as two of the major factors that have influenced my decision for future occupation, as well as having helped me earn the honor of appearing in the Psycho Spotlight."

Goals - Future goals include helping others with stress and confusion, growing to 5'4", and possibly entering the fashion market with her own line of designer leather straight jackets.

Social - Many students may have heard some of Ms. Wallflower's contributions to the Albite University vocabulary list, including such expressions as "shocker," "Thanks," and "NOT."

Heartburn Made Easy

In a surprise move by administration all food in the cafeteria will now be provided by Pizza Itrallia, commonly known on campus as "Piggers." This new food service takes effect immediately. The menu will be expanded to include such Piggers favorites such as calzone, stromboli and of course, pizza. Because of the anticipated demand of these new items, students will have to wait "20 minit" before getting their meal. Also, students must pick up their meal at the door, and are required to yell "Piggers is here!" at the top of their lungs.

In response to this move the cafeteria director Dave Tanqueray says, "Albite welcomes the Piggers family into our kitchen. Since students throw away the food we've been providing, we figured we might as well give them the food they eat every day."

The nutritional content of the food will be "beefed up" to include all the major food groups -- tomato sauce, pepperoni, garlic, grease, and the indentifiable liquid that drips on your lap when eating a calzone.

The employees of Piggers seem enthusiastic; however, their comments could not be understood.

Twinkies Overtake Redding

by Melody In Love

Redding has witnessed many things in this student's four year career. The torching of the Pagoda, the dismantling of the football team for box lacrosse, and a real security force all serve witness to how this campus is treating diversity. But for those with the queasy stomach and Coke bottle glasses, please do not read on.

Last night, as slumber overtook most of the campus, the few who were coherent witnessed something they will not soon forget. If this reporter's report seems rhetorically redundant, it is because of the fact that I am still in a state of disbelief.

13th Street was the scene of the most graphic scene this side of Deliverance. Down the street they slugged, a menacing mix of polysorbates and sugar barreling towards the new arts and crafts center. When all was finished, witnesses quoted ten large twinkies, 30 feet in height and 12 in width, spewing frothy creme filling on the center.

Alas, the next morning, with the hungry in hand, the slop was cleaned up. All that was left were the remnants of a fantastically hideous night. "What about the Twinkie?"

Albite Hires Professional

all times, Security hired a trained professional bell-ringer to replace the alarms.

The woman pictured here (left) was from Alarm-Busters, an organization based here in Redding. While the dudes back at the shop were cleaning Albite's alarms, she walked around the dorms and rang her bell, signifying a fire drill. All of the regular rules and regulations were required at these times, such as leaving the dorm immediately, securely locking your door behind you, and waiting 15 minutes in the rain for Security to arrive.

As some of you may have noticed, last week the fire alarms in all of the dorms were turned off for spring cleaning. As Albite is responsible for maintaining safety for all students at

But have no fear - now the Albite fire alarms are back, and better (at least cleaner) than ever!

Former President Rooftop announced Monday that he has changed the plans for the Albite natatorium (that's pool to you and me). Although the hole has already been dug and the concrete foundation poured in, Dr. Rooftop "just doesn't like its location." "There's no poolside view, for the swimmers nor for passers-by."

Rooftop will begin to campaign for dirt donations -- he has reportedly received pledges from the construction site at Redding High, since they don't need their dirt for cafeteria meals.

When asked who will help in the refilling of the hole, Rooftop answered, "Gee -- don't we have any fraternity pledges at this school?"

Plans for the relocation of the natatorium are not yet complete.

School Seeks Monorail

by Shafted Much

The Albite Community has once again been rocked by alleged allegations of the misappropriations of funds and other atrocities. Heading the list is the tuition reimbursement/library workbook plan. Under the guidance of the trained and dangerous administration, those students who complete their library workbook on the initial attempt will be reimbursed one-tenth of one-half of one percent. You figure it out.

While these atrocities have disgruntled the community, focus has instead shifted to the Disney Complex now under construction. The school's ex-president, Dave Rooftop, remarked that "Well, you know, we do have goofy on the staff, why not go the whole eight meters." With that in mind, the Disney project was deflowered. The fabled thrills ride, the new elevator, has already been installed into the natatorium, and the nauseating cafeteria ride has been a staple for years, so the focus has been on the monorail construction. The planned route is from the apartments to BK's and back, with selected stops on campus during the hook-up hours.

News-Like Flash

WACX's move has been a great success. In just two short weeks, the move and installation of studios and equipment has been completed and will permit D.J.'s to broadcast over the airwaves in just 24 hours.

Due to brilliant engineering, the elevator shaft is being converted into a strategic military silo, housing a Pershing II missile.

Security guards undergo special defense training to fight off attacking squirrels. Over recent weeks, encounters have increased, resulting in the hospitalization of two security guards.

Scott, Johnson to Relocate

Albittian sports staff

Many people may have heard the rumor that Lion Varsity Basketball Coach Ray Racketts attended the NCAA Final Four in Denver, Colorado. Well to clear up any rumors, he did.

It was previously believed that Racketts attended the extravaganza solely for pleasure and enjoyment. The Albittian Sports Department has learned differently, however. Racketts' trip had a clearly defined purpose, with clearly defined goals. Racketts commented, "I didn't want anyone to know why I was really going until now. If it hadn't worked out, there would have been a lot of disappointed people."

Fortunately for Albite and Racketts, however, the trip and the secret (if you will) mission was a smashing success. Racketts, while in Denver, was able to hold several conferences with Duke's Christian Laettner, UNLV's Larry Johnson, and Georgia Tech's Dennis Scott. As a result of those conferences, both Scott and Johnson will be attending Albite University next year. Although they both must sit out during the 1990-91 season, they will return for a fifth year of schooling, and will certainly be seen in Lion uniforms during the 1991-92 season. Racketts was elated, "I almost had Laettner, but he wanted to stay at Duke. That didn't really matter, though, because I was ecstatic to get a hold of two fine players like Scott and Johnson. They're both great players and great kids. I really think they'll fit into our program and style of play nicely, and they should be a fine addition to our club." Scott was not available for comment, but Johnson told our staff that, "After winning the National Championship, I'm ready to move on. I can't wait to go and play with Scott, Rolen, Pruitt, Kasmer, and Minniear under the leadership of Coach Racketts."

An additional Albite recruit is an unknown, three-armed wonder from Kalamazoo, who reportedly says he wants to play in Redding because "you guys have great outlet shopping out there!"

Wrestlemania Reaches Albite's Campus

by Zeke Musberger

In a generous gesture, several Albite University faculty and administrators have decided to stage their own event for this year's Spring Fever Weekend. Following the conclusion of jello wrestling, the fact/ad participants will shock the campus with Albite Wrestlemania. "This type of event has been on the drawing board for a long time," said David Rooftop, Albite's former President.

Rooftop was the inspiration and architect for this event. "Many people don't know this, but it has always been a dream of mine to wrestle professionally. If I could get that chance just once, to wrestle with my heroes, then I could die a happy man," explained a teary-eyed Rooftop.

Well, apparently Rooftop will get that chance on a night filled with electricity. All in all, ten matches are scheduled, all to be held in the Bay. Look for some real wars to take place. Here's a look at the tentative schedule.

MATCH 1: A special tag team match.

Things start off with a bang. Charlotte Merch and Tim Ringaling, the PC and OL advisors combine, vs. "the Ambassadors", Sheila Carrieway and Kate Greenpasture. "Action will be affirmed in this one," vows Greenpasture. "Look for some real group dynamics," says Ringaling. "I just thought that this would be the best match for the campus," thinks Merch. Don't look for any Albite Unity in the ring on this night.

MATCH 2: The battle of Admissions. Dale Reinheat vs. John Sapphire. "Hey, if it can get more students to apply then what the hell," says Sapphire.

MATCH 3: The first faculty match. "Slick" Archie Perrier vs. Jeff Woodward. "I like wrestling for its aesthetic value," remarks Perrier, "that and the babes." "I try to get involved in as much as I can," states Woodward.

MATCH 4: The "I love Albite University" match. Brian Miles vs. Tom Malucki. This match features two students, both administrative wanna-be's. "I think this is a great idea that Dr. Rooftop has come up with. I'd also like to say how much I like Albite," says Miles. Malucki explains, "I like the idea because it lets me wear my purple tights out in public." Each of the wrestlers will receive their Ideal Student Award immediately following the match.

MATCH 5: The first in an Albite sports double-header. Ray Racketts vs. Tim Potupa. "I knew this match would happen, I just knew it," whines an often high-strung Potupa. Racketts has been training long and hard for this match. When asked about the new Ray, he replies, "I've changed my diet, my exercise routine, and my sleeping patterns." When asked how, he responds, "I don't eat cheese curls anymore, I use the steps to get to the upstairs gym, and I take more naps."

MATCH 6: The "rub-a-dub-dub, Don't overflow the tub" match. Coach Sparagaina vs. Coach Plopp. "I win, it'll give me something to tell recruits," thinks Sparagaina, "I also like the contact." Coach Plopp brags of a new front flip followed by a scissors hold move that he feels he has perfected. "Many people don't know this but I was quite a gymnast in my college days."

MATCH 7: A match filled with meaning. Bill "Zen Master" Barlow vs. Jed Marker. "I think wrestling has some deep meaning to it," suggests Barlow. "I have also taken many trips to Asia. Most people think it is for education and enjoyment, but the trips are actually ways for me to live and learn with the Kung-Fu masters." When asked about the contest, Marker pondered, "Why does wrestling exist? Is it logical? What are its moral boundaries?" Never expect an answer from a philosopher.

MATCH 8: The second tag-team match. Ed and Wendy Skoozen vs. Don and Lisa Ryder in a special "Residence Rules" match. No more than 16 people may watch this match, unless they bring a guest list, in which case 30 people may watch. Only those over 21 may drink during the match. Food and soda will be provided. Admission may not be charged. So, roll out the kegs for this match and pack the ringside seats, admission: $2. After all, nobody takes those rules literally, do they?

MATCH 9: A climax of a match. Dr. Rooftop vs. Dean Lubbatts. Rooftop refers to this match as "a dream fulfilled." "I'm gonna squash Lubbatts. After this match, I want to be called by my new title - Supreme Ruler of the University." Lubbatts counters, "All talk and no action. I've worked with Rooftop for a long time but now I finally get my chance. One-on-one, no holds barred, just two high ranking administrators fighting for pride, and of course the Albite Wrestling Federation Belt." Watch out for Rooftop's assistant, the sneaky and seductive Ronda Brauwn.

MATCH 10: The finale - A free-for-all match featuring over 30 of the faculty/administration. Favorites in this match appear to be Ed "The Psychological Deviant" Gulbert; Dale Yodeler and his powerful forehand, backhand, and ground strokes; Farhad "The Iron Sheikh" Sabami; Dick Androane, "My doctoral thesis was on American Literature as it relates to Pro Wrestling." Also look out for Ron Greener, an Albite wrestler from way back.

Wow! What a night this should be. Also helping out for the night will be ring announcer Annadora Shark and referee Bill Whelm. In charge of concessions for the evening activities will be the Classy Ladies of Albite's Magnificent Sororities (sorry no acronym for this group). All proceeds for this match will go to the Albite Fund to replace the money that we spent on all the construction.

See 'ya there!

NCAA Hits a "Little Guy"

college press wire services

In recent years, the National Collegiate Athletic Association has been tightening its grip on the various colleges and universities under its supervision. With the increase in competition and levels of play, there has also been a proliferation of the distribution of NCAA penalties and allegations. One NCAA official stated, "Everybody wants to win, that's only natural. Unfortunately, in recent years this desire to win has led coaches and athletic departments across the country to overlook NCAA rules and limitations."

Recently, the NCAA has seen itself in some major headlines by cracking down on such big Division I schools as the University of Kentucky, the University of Maryland, and North Carolina State University. These blockbuster allegations are not the only ones that occur, however. Recently, the NCAA has been focusing on smaller schools, and even Division II and III schools as well. NCAA officials commented, "If we go after the big fish, then we have set a precedent. Once that has been established, it is our responsibility to monitor, as closely as we can, every school that falls under our supervision - even if that means going after the 'little guys'."

Just a few days ago, the NCAA came down on one of those "little guys." The NCAA has filed official charges against Albite University in Redding, PA. Although all of the details were not available, NCAA officials were willing to admit that the charges are focused on recruiting violations. Point shaving may be a factor as well. Albite Athletic Director Bill Whelm refused to comment "until the details of the allegations are explicitly stated." As it stands now, all Albite athletic teams will be ineligible for post-season play in the 1991-92 season, and a substantial fine will be levied as well.

We (the editors) just want to thank everyone for being a "Good Egg" about the contents of these stories. They were all written in jest - we certainly did not mean to offend anyone with them! Happy April Fool's, and Happy Easter! Next issue of the true Albittian will be on April 27th.
