Albright College has recycle bins, but no program

Jen Levy
Lion Reporter

Student outcry over Albright "policies" is something we've heard quite a bit of this year, and it seems as if it may have finally been recognized.

For those of you who do not know, Albright has a recycling program - sort of. There are separate bins for recycling in certain areas of some buildings.

Yet, this inconsistent placing of bins and the fact that the program was set up solely to satisfy the state law requiring large-scale institutions to recycle, have done nothing to help the program's efficiency.

In fact, an "audit" done on garbage at Albright several years ago, reveals that approximately 35% of recyclable were trashed, while another 22% of recyclable were deemed unrecyclable due to the amount of trash mixed in with them. This audit examined only certain buildings, but its results were significant enough to conclude that the recycling program here is largely inefficient.

Today this has become a widely known fact and few bother to separate their trash. Although some students seem unalarmed, others have addressed the issue.

Albright Environmental Action (AEA) has targeted the present program's problems and proposed a new one. The proposal includes consistent labeling and placing of the bins, education as to what can be recycled, and several work-study openings under a new position of a Recycling Coordinator.

Brought before Dean Daniels, the proposal seemed to be received with excitement. Agreeing that change was needed, extra bins will be placed in the Woods, and over the summer a meeting has been scheduled with a Recycling Coordinator from another college in order to discuss possibilities. The administration building will also be targeted this summer. As for the AEA proposed new positions, Dean Daniels said that positions have not yet been discussed, as they would prefer to wait and first discuss the issue with the new Director of Facilities, once he is appointed. Although it seems as if progress is being made on establishing a successful recycling program here at Albright, there is still much to be done.

With the year drawing to a close and the program being delayed, many fear that the program will never be implemented. Pressure for recycling at Albright needs to be maintained. AEA promises to push the program, but will it be enough?

Reforming policies at Albright is something students seem to want. Could this be a foot-in-door? It looks like we will have to wait till next year to see.

Greeks come together to kick off Spring Fever

Shelly Alexander

The fraternities and sororities on Albright's campus joined together for a week of fun to better the Greek community and the college as a whole. Wednesday, April 18th, kicked off the events to unify all who proudly promote Greek life, with a Mixer with DJ Adam at the Funhouse in Reading. All who attended greeted each other for a night of dancing and spending time with friends.

Greeks bundled up for the chilly evening and relaxed on blankets in the pit in the Albright woods for a scary movie Thursday night, April 19th, with Michelle Pfeiffer and Harrison Ford in What Lies Beneath.

Many came together to participate in a campus cleanup stretching from North Hall to Teel Hall in an attempt to make Albright more beautiful this spring. That same night on Monday, April 23rd, Greeks met in lighter spirits for the Greek God and Goddess Contest. A Greek from each sorority and fraternity took part in a 4-category pageant. The poem reading, talent, evening wear, and question sections of the contest were all done in good fun with Alpha Delta Pi's Robyn Morris crowned as the Greek Goddess, along with Pi Kappa Phi's Jason Magid, honored as the 2001 Greek

God.

Tuesday evening, April 24th, all Greeks gathered in the chapel to hear a speaker on diversity on a college campus and in Greek life. Larry Moses discussed the stereotypes are in order to move in a more positive direction.

A lunch with the faculty was held on Wednesday afternoon, April 25th in Alumnae Hall to bring the professors at Albright together ultly.

Spring Fever weekend at Albright was integrated into Greek week with the final event being the Airbands competition on Friday evening, April 27th. The Pi Kappa Phi's won third place, Sigma Kappa received second, and the Alpha Sigma Phi's took first place with their dancing skills in a performance to the song "Apache". Greek week then concluded with the opening of more exciting events for the kick off of Spring Fever weekend.

Albright had been in the third quartile as recently as 1996, but since then they have fallen to the fourth and have been falling ever since. In 2000 Albright ranked 148th out of 160 schools as ranked by U.S. News.

Albright's academic reputation has fallen considerably since the arrival of President Dr. Henry A. Zimon. Zimon, who was appointed to the president position during the 1999-2000 school year, had vowed to the Reading Eagle/Times to turn Albright into a "world class institution," however Albright has headed in the opposite direction since his appointment.

Zimon refused an interview on the subject.

Albright will also raise its tuition to 20,750, despite the fallen academic reputation of the college. The raise is comparable, however, with several surrounding colleges.

"Our tuition and fees place us in the mid-price range of comparable liberal arts colleges in Pennsylvania and nationwide," said Executive Vice-President Paul Gazzerro. "This increase represents a 4.9 percent increase over 2000-01, and a 4.13 percent average annual increase over the past eight years (since 1994). This increase is substantially less than that of many other colleges. In the previous three years, Albright's tuition increases were by far the lowest of our competitors (Ursinus, Lebanon Valley, Elizabethtown, Moravian, Susquehanna, and Muhlenberg) which ranged from 5 to 14 percent.

According to Gazzerro, the costs will go to the day to day operations of the college, including increases in faculty and staff salaries, fuel, food, repairs and maintenance.

"Every year, the cost of living rises, and we have to stay parallel to that," mentioned Gazzerro. "If the price of fuel goes up, we are going to have to pay more for fuel, and we have to get that money from Zimon sent a letter out to all the students notifying them of the in-

"The tuition continues to rise every year, but the academics continue to go south," noted freshman Dave Cappello. "It makes the student body actually wonder where tuition increases," said Director of Financial Aid, Mary Ellen Duffy. "We prefer to offer students a fixed dollar amount at the time of admission, and retain this award for the entire four years as long as eligibility continues to be met."

Gazzerro stated that one of the reasons why tuition continues to rise is to meet the demands of highly intensive liberal arts colleges. He also stated that Albright needs to recruit the best professors in a highly competitive market. It can also be noted that Albright's professors are among the lowest paid in the country.

"We need to be able to have the money to go out and hire the most capable professors in a very competitive market out there," stated Gazzerro.

Faculty salaries are $3000 to $5000 and 25% lower than the collegiate average.

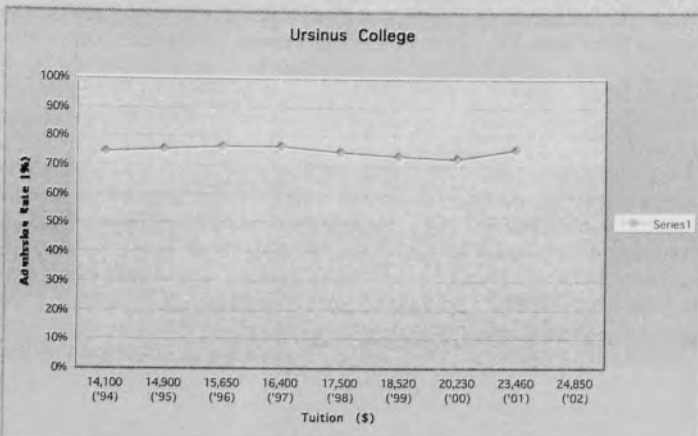

Students have been angered recently by several extemporaneous fees that have been implicated within the standard tuition. One such fee, a $100 dollar graduation fee, has left students baffled as to why they must pay to graduate.

"I already pay over $20,000 to attend this school, the tuition is raised, and then next year I have to pay $100 just to graduate," stated junior Toby Ranck. "Albright is leaving a bad taste in the mouths of Alumni who are going to be disinclined to contribute back to their alma mater after graduation.

Along with the tuition students also pay almost $7,000 for room and board for eight months, a $200 technology fee, and a student activity fee.

There is also a $200 late fee if payments are not made in time. Some students and parents might consider a $200 late fee a bit steep.

I was one day late with my payment and was charged a $200 late fee," stated one concerned parent. "The punishment just doesn't fit the crime here."

Safety on campus...the school year in review

Shelly Alexander
Lion Reporter

Officer Gerken, Director of the Safety and Security department, remarked in an interview that "it's not that we are the worst college campus, but we want to be the best college campus" in regards to safety at issues at Albright. Many advancements and changes occurred this year in the safety and security department in order to raise the school to higher standards.

Every fall semester, a group of a dozen or so students, security members, facility members, and student service workers take the annual Safety Walk around the entire campus at dusk and take note of students concerns and ideas to help better Albright. This year, the bushes growing on the pathway up to the Albright Woods were trimmed, emergency phones were added around North Hall and the Woods, and foot escorting services were created to walk students around campus at night as a result of suggestions from the walk. Also, energy saving lights were implemented along with additional lighting in shadowy areas, better internal lighting was installed around the buildings by Science Field, and solar lighting was added at the end of Kelchner Field.

Security took many other steps as well to create a safer environment for students.

According to Officer Gerken, all officers of the safety department and health services department were trained in CPR, first aid, and AED, or Automated External Defibrillator training.

AED, the shock paddles that are used for resuscitation of the heart, were received by Albright through a grant so that health and security personnel on campus could engage in immediate resuscitation in the critical first 3 minutes of an emergency.

The security office also checks emergency phones on campus every day, along with lighting and residence hall doors. Emergency buttons were installed in certain areas around campus that ring directly to the security office in mainly in case problems with people outside the Albright community.

The parking policy was also established with different colored stickers marking the areas where students live in order for security to be able to tell who belongs in certain areas and who does not. ID cards that unlock residence buildings also the same purpose. Albright received a bicycle 2 weeks ago from a donation made by SGA in order for security officers to do a bicycle patrol, which enables them to get around more quickly and quietly.

Officer Gerken and Samantha Wesner, Nurse Practitioner/Health Educator, agree that the most significant thing for women's safety on campus is the RAD (Rape Aggression Defense) class.

Officer Gerken feels that the emphasis is not so much on sexual assault and rape on campus, but more that Albright has become increasingly aware that this problem is occurring all over with college age students. About 55 women on campus have gone through the class and now are lifetime members, meaning they can take a RAD refresher course anywhere for free. Carrie Miller, a graduate of RAD says that the class gives you "the confidence to know you could handle yourself in a situation like that."

She would highly recommend the class to all women on campus because it uses your instincts and shows you how to use them effectively to defend yourself using the skills of awareness, risk reduction, and actual physical moves.

The powerful and rewarding course runs once a week for 3 hours, for 4 weeks and is taught over the summer and 6 times over the course of the college year and is free of charge.

If there are any women interested in taking the class, contact Mrs. Boyer, Administrative Assistant at x7672.

Meeting Mr. Hill: Albright College's new facilities director

Jess Eisenhart
Lion Reporter

Did you ever wonder who is the one pulling the strings for the facilities on campus? The head honcho behind the grounds, custodians, and maintenance of the buildings. Well, I had a chance to meet Mr. Bill Hill who is filling in the position of the director of facilities while Albright is reviewing the applications for the job. This dedicated man with a long-lasting marriage of 33 years has served this campus vigorously for ten years. He is originally from Northern New Jersey and moved to the Shillington area with the his marriage.

Mr. Hill started off as a self-employed construction worker. So what attracted him to this campus? It was the "environment" Hill commented. Out of forty applications, his was chosen and he started his career with the Albright family as a carpenter. The position he holds today is the supervision of the carpenters and the painters and his other title is the assistant director of facilities. If that wasn't enough as I said earlier, he is taking on the demanding position as director. He arrives on campus at 7:30 in the morning and leaves anywhere from 6:00 onward. He is on call 24-7 and says, "It just comes with the territory!"

So what has Mr. Hill been up to this past year? He oversaw the construction of the new baseball field of which was built upon the funding of donations. He worked with Joe Rosenberg to plan the groundwork for the big event of the Mighty Mighty Bosstones visiting our fair campus.

The biggest project of the moment that he is working on is for those lucky seniors waiting to graduate. He is in charge of the layout and smooth workings of the commencement, which is taking place on the Science field.

Looking ahead to the future, Mr. Hill says that he plans to be here for a good many years to come because "Albright is in my heart!" He is ready and willing to make Albright the best it can be for the students. This is another point he holds near his heart.

Some of his plans include trying to clean up the environment by trying to incorporate recycling and just cleaning up the litter on campus.

One of his ideas is to get a committee of students together (say one from each dormitory on campus) to maybe address concerns or issues dealing with the maintenance of the campus. For now, if you have any questions, Mr. Hill is more than willing to do whatever he can for you and has no problems giving one a call back.

Three Faculty Promoted to Full Professor

Michael P. Adams, Ph.D., associate academic dean and chair of the English department, Daniel J. Falabela, Ph.D., chair of the Computer Science department, and Farhad Saboori, economics and business, were promoted to the rank of professor and gained tenure by the Board of Trustees. The announcement was made at the May faculty meeting. Framed certificates were presented to the three professors by President Zimon. Congratulations Michael, Dan, and Farhad!

Schwartz and Yoder to Retire

David Schwartz, professor of economics and J. Dale Yoder, professor of history, will retire at the end of this academic year. Dave came to Albright in 1965. Dave has been at Albright since then and he continues to teaching, has coached the men's basketball team (Commonwealth Championships for 2001), and has mentored scholars and teachers here. He is a very good part of Albright and leaves a lasting legacy. Dave will be greatly missed. We wish him all the best in his retirement and hope he will continue to be a part of the Albright family.

Assistant Director of Campus Activities for Publications Appointed

Mark Lammert, who has been at Albright for 12 years, has been appointed as the assistant director of campus activities for publications. Mark has 12 years of experience in the publishing industry, and has worked for the New York Times and the Washington Post. He will be responsible for the Albrightian and the Lionhouse.

Brand new ways of communicating with home costs college

Matthew Kemeny
Editor-in-Chief

Talking with mom and dad from home has never been so easy. Cell phones, the Internet, and calling cards have now made it extremely cheap to call over long distances. Yet, not everyone is happy with this advancement in technology. Colleges, who have relied on money from students calling long distance, now have to find another way to make up for that lost money.

"Five years ago, the college would make over $300,000 on long distance phone charges from students," said executive vice president of administration and finance Paul Gazzerro. "Now we are lucky to pull in half that per year."

Many students constantly chat with friends long distance through an Internet service called instant messenger. Instant messenger is completely free provided that you have Internet access, which all college students have.

Calling Cards and cell phones are also devices that students employ to call long distance for little cost. Many students are equipped with both a cell phone and several calling cards before they even hit school.

"It is so much easier to use a calling card, or to talk to my family and friends over the Internet," stated Albright College sophomore Dave Cappello, who hails from Connecticut. "I haven't ever even used the long distance plan that they offer here."

Albright College is not the only college that suffers financially from this boost in technology. Students from all colleges are learning how to use the internet to their advantage.

"Whenever I need something from home, I just instant message someone in my family," commented Pat Lafferty, a freshman at Ursinus College, who resides in New Jersey. "It's free and easy, what else could you ask for?"

College tuition rises far past the standard rate of inflation

Matthew Kemeny
Editor-in-Chief

The price of higher education continues to rise, much more than the standard rate of inflation, according to a study by College Board.

According to the board, college tuition and fees rose 4.4% in four-year public institutions and 5.2 in private four-year colleges last year. The country's inflation, as measured by the consumer index, rose only 3.4% during the same period.

"Students are now graduating with over $20,000 debts to their alma mater," said Albright College Executive Vice-President of Finance, Paul Gazzerro. "The price for higher education is just getting more and more expensive."

One factor that has affected the tuition, is the competition to attract decent professors to a particular institution. Also, current professors are pressuring schools to augment their salary in accordance with other the rise for other professions.

"Professor wise, it's an extremely competitive market out there," stated Gazzerro. "Colleges are competing for the best professors, while also having to worry about rising the salaries of their current professors, and that is one of the factors that is driving up tuition."

Albright College is among the lowest in professor salaries among all of the national liberal arts colleges in the country, paying 25% below the national average.

It is very difficult now for an undergraduate to consider going to graduate school, because of the financial damage that was already suffered.

"I can't even imagine paying for graduate school, when I am this far in debt from college," said Albright senior Tracy DiMezzo. "You are looking at another $20,000 at least for graduate school, after undergraduate puts you an additional $20,000 in debt."

What will you miss most about Albright?

What I will miss most is the amazing amount of apathy...and the wonderful housing office (heavy sarcasm). Mostly, I'll miss Pi Kapp and Bekah...thanks for the memories.

What is your best memory of Albright?

My best memory of Albright is POPs. The crazy parties, 151, hot dog buns...and nutz.

What is the one thing you would change about Albright?

If given the opportunity, I would rid the school of committees. Although the admin. thinks that they are useful, no real work every seems to get accomplished.

What are your famous last words for Albright? Don't take any classes with Ryan Bialas.

What would you like to be doing ten years from now?

Hopefully, in ten years, I will have worked my way up to a management position in the high paced environment of fast food, McDonald's. I like to set my goals high.

Which Albright professor influenced you the most?

It's a three-way tie: Dr. Ann Myers, Dr. Maria Melendez and Kathy Ozment. Learning Spanish and French under these remarkable women has been a great experience. Thanks!

If you could leave anything to Albright, what would it be?

My college loans and something to cure the rampant STD infections on this campus.

If you were stranded on a desert island and could choose anyone in the world to be stuck with, who would it be?

I would take Bekah Lewis because she knows me better than anyone; then I'd kill her. ©

How do you feel that you have changed over the past four years?

I have become more of an exhibitionist, thanks to POPs and alcohol. I also have mastered time management because about 20 people do everything on this campus (I'm not bitter).

coated it for anyone and I really respect that. Thank you for being so honest because it's a hard world out there and we all need someone to prepare us.

Leave at Albright: I hope to leave a spirit of having fun no matter what. Who gives a flying f%#@# what people think about you.
Be yourself and don't worry about all of those stupid rumors.

How have I changed: I grew up over these past 4 years. Don't get me wrong
I am still pretty immature but I now when to turn it on and off.

To The People whom things went bad with:

You people know who you are. I'm sorry for what happened between us but your gonna be sorry one day for leaving me behind.
Your never gonna meet someone like me again.
You had your chance and the future has been written. This is my final Goodbye. You lose, check please I'm done!!!

Final Statement: To everyone else, have fun here because it goes by way to fast. I had a blast here and I truly believe I made the most out of my 4 years.
Guys good luck next year, I'll always be there for you. Ladies with me and Carr gone its two less pimps you gotta worry about. "I wonder who will walk with me when I get

What is the one thing you would change about Albright? Dr. Brogan would teach again- he's a great dean, but a wonderful professor.

What would you like to be doing ten years from now? I wish I knew.

Which Albright professor influenced you the most? Tom Watcke- I know that all the hard work and frustration will pay off- I'm just still waiting...

If you could leave anything to Albright, what would it be? To Jen- I leave you muffin tops, a laundry hamper, the pause button on the VCR, and most importantly, Pacey and Ben! To Amanda- I leave you hot guy with a guitar, hot pk, and of course, hot freshman...you still have a year And to the college- Quinn

If you were stranded on a desert island and could choose anyone in the world to be stuck with,
who would it be? Jen Moran and a karaoke machine...oh wait, that would be hell...(You know I'm not any better- I love you, Jen!)

How do you feel you have changed over the past four years? I've now worn pajamas to class,
jeans to a football game,
and I consider a pretzel and a cookie a well-balanced meal, BUT I still say

Thing you will miss most about Albright: Being on the Albright stage and the cafeteria ladies—oh, and finding new and interesting places to park my car in hopes of not getting ticketed (and then getting ticketed)

Best memory of Albright: I have two—meeting Charlene, my roomie of four years, and the first time I heard applause for Beyond Therapy in the Meridian Theatre.

What is the one thing you
would change about Albright? I would change this question to what are the numerous things you would change about Albright. Just kidding! It would probably be improving housing facilities to include more amenities, but I'll leave that battle to the people that have to return to Albright housing after May 20th. Have fun!

What would you most like to be doing in ten years? In ten years I would most like to be doing what I would most like to be doing in ten years.
(Not a typo.)

What professor has influenced you the most? I can't claim any less than four, so I'll try to be brief:
Dr. Lynn Morrow, a brilliant and amazing woman, who taught me the importance of staying in the moment, SLOWING DOWN, and taking care of myself; Dr. Michael Adams, who among other things made me love medieval literature enough to stay in on a Friday night to read Chaucer; Dr. Al Cacicedo, whose syllabus and enthusiasm for Junior Seminar made me love the English language all the more; and finally Dr. Mary Jane Androne, for a phenomenal European literature course and for always listening.

What would you leave to Albright? I would leave my Volvo, in hopes that either a) somebody would clean it or b) somebody would steal it. Oh, and my Albright I.D. card (my 5th) because chances are, I'll lose it again before graduation and end up leaving it anyway. Ask security's opinion on that one.

They've printed up enough new cards for me.
If you were stranded on a desert island....? If I was stranded on a desert island I would most want to be stuck with me. I think I'm a pretty good time.

How do you think you have changed in the last four years? I have learned to appreciate the strength behind my closest friendships and the reasons why I value the friendships that have sustained these four years. I have gained a LOT of perspective in that respect.

If you had three wishes, what would they be? If I had three wishes I would wish for everlasting health, everlasting happiness, and every pair of shoes in the whole wide world. Oh, and if everlasting health and happiness could count as one, then definitely for a non-cancer causing cigarette.

ten years from now: I would like to be designing home furnishings such as price point design firm.

Albright Professor: Barbaro Danko, adjunct prof. who teaches Textile Design I and II. She not only teaches but also makes a living by creating textiles. She is extremely knowledgeable and forces her students to think bigger and push the envelope. Leave anything to Albright: A permanent home for the ever growing Visual and Apparel Merchandising/Textile Design majors. We have been forced to move at least three times in the past four years and this has been three times too many. Students' projects have been lost and ruined, and our space keeps decreasing in size.

Stranded on Island...: I would choose my Walton girls: Ruth, Marie and Soumala. The group of us come as one.

Feel changed: I have become extremely blunt and forward. I have also redefined what I feel relationships and friendships should mean to me, and I truly believe that "anything less than extraordinary is a waste of my time."

Three wishes: 1- To reach the goals I have set for myself. 2- To travel constantly. 3- To never have concern for money.

What will you miss most about Albright? My professors and what they have done in the past four years to shape who I am today.

What is your best memory of Albright College? Giving tours to per-

What is one thing you would change about Albright? I have been griping for this all semester and nothing seems to be getting done about it. THE FREEKIN INTERNET! FOR GOD'S SAKE MY MODEM IS FASTER!!!!!!

What would you like to be doing ten years from now? I would like to have full job satisfaction and be married and to start a family.

Which Albright Professor influenced you the most? Dr. Andrew Samuelsen. Even though you are one of the "newer" professors at Albright you got what it takes now to make the Science program go higher then it is now. You have gotten to know students on a personal level, which has helped you, develop here at Albright. I have taken every class with you and I don't regret anything you have taught me. Every time I have a question about something you always tries to find an answer for me as soon as possible. He has taught me a lot and I have taught him a lot. I just wanted to thank you for sharing some of your intelligence with me and always helping me when I needed it. Thank you for making class enjoyable with all the food and laughter that you brought to class with you. I will miss you tons and thanks for everything.

If you could leave anything to Albright, what would it be? I would leave a new science building fully furnished.... that means a new fluorescent scope too Dr. Samuelsen! If you were stranded on a desert island and could choose anyone in the world to be stuck with, who would it be? I would choose the love of my life Amy Cox. We have been through thick and thin this past semester with you being away. I know if we survived this we can survive a desert island together too. I love you with all my heart.

How do you feel that you changed over the past four years? I have become more responsible and mature. I was not serious about anything before I got here until all my professors taught me that it is important to remained focus and serious your whole life.

If you had three wishes, what would they be? 1- I wish just everyone would just get along 2- I wish students would value their school a bit more because hell you paid a 100,000 to come here you better appreciate it. 3- More student involvement on campus. If you don't like something don't bitch about it. Join an organization and do something about it.

What will you miss most about Albright: I will miss my friends that I have made during the past four years. Most of all I will miss the "great" social environment, no parking, parking tickets, housing fines, write-ups, and the cafeteria food.

What is your best memory of Albright: My best memory of Albright would have to be receiving a bid from Sigma Kappa freshman year. Also, April 15, 1998 when all of the pledging bulls**t was over.

What is one thing you would change about Albright: I would eliminate the $100 graduation fee to get out of Albright. Haven't we given them enough money during the past four years?!

What are your famous last words for Albright: I know Albright isn't perfect, but nothing is so make the best of it.

What would you like to be doing ten years from now: After I won the lottery, I would like to be lying on a beach while my housekeepers (male housekeepers) bring me a Coors Light. Enough with the daydreaming, I hope to be a housewife with a wonderful husband and plenty of kids.

Which Albright Professor influenced you the most: Without a doubt, Dr. Rodney Warfield. He is an excellent teacher and mentor, who gives 110% of himself to his students. I feel honored to have gotten a chance to know him. If you could leave anything behind to Albright, what would it be: I would leave my driver's license so others would be able to get off campus and go to the bar.

If you were stranded on a desert island and could anyone in the world to be stuck with, who would it be: I would want to be "stuck" with Heath Ledger so I would be able to ravage him without Natalie Shawlis getting in my way. How do you feel that you have changed over the past four years: I've learned there is a lot left to believe in and a whole lot more to hope for. I've learned that love has never been easy and it is a long time coming.

If you three wishes, what would they be: My first wish would be, eternal happiness. My second wish would be, having Tuesday nights at the Goose House, forever. My final wish would be, for Kevin Windsor to be able to grow hair.

Thank you!!

What would you leave to

May 15, 2001

Albright? "Da Roc" (no, not the pro wrestler, but if you want to know what I'm talking about, ask me ☺)

What do you want to be doing in ten years? Well, what I WANT to be doing is lounging by the beach, while attractive male waiters serve me Mai Tais, but what I want to be doing is a lot different then what I will actually be doing. If you want to know what is going on with me in ten years, call me in ten years, and then I'll be glad to tell you ☺.

What one thing would you change about Albright? You want me to name one thing????

What is your best memories of Albright? Meeting my very best friend, Nancie', the Brass Lantern (what a great place to go), the unforgettable night at Taco Bell, the countless times I've been to the diner since I've been here, and meeting and knowing some of the greatest people I have ever known, and these people have given me a gift into the insight of who I really am....funny, but it's true...oh, and conversing with Mike about the state of the world, and how sometimes, ignorance is definitely fodder for our amusement.

What one person would you want to be stranded on a deserted island with? Besides Matthew Perry (I LOVE that guy, despite the problems) there is one person who I wouldn't mind being stranded with, but well, this person shall go nameless. Don't ask me who it is, I won't tell you that either.

Best Memory: Spring Rose Ball 2000, where I began the rest of my life.

One Change: This college needs youth in its administrative and faculty offices. Age is a wonderful thing, but there is nothing like the freshness of youth to invigorate people.

Ten Years: Happily married with Gina, within a career that allows me to not only work on documentary films but give me the free time to come back and visit the friends I've made at Albright.

Influential Prof: Without Dr.'s Pankratz, Adlestein, DeSyon and Crisafulli, I would still be among the flock of Albright Sheep grazing on shit.

Desert Island: Who else? My fiancé Gina Roselli, the only person who could put up with being stranded with me.

Changes: Albright, and more importantly the people I met while I was here, has made me a more confident, outgoing and passionate person. The friendships I've made here are far greater than any I've ever had. At the same time, I myself have become a better friend who has learned the deeper meanings of respect, commitment and success.

What would I change about Albright? Decrease student apathy/ increase student participation and caring. I'd also like to change the education department to be more challenging to help better prepare teachers for the real world.

How do you feel you've changed over the last 4 years? I am definitely a much more open person now. I have become more accepting of others, more willing to discuss others' ideas, and more outspoken.

What will you miss most about Albright? I will miss the relative friendliness of the school, the small campus, and all the friends and acquaintances that I have made here.

What is your best memory of Albright?

Hmm... One of my favorite memories was winning the Spirit Flag at CAACURH with RSA. I also enjoyed both conferences with Alpha Phi Omega. Some of my happiest (though most exhausting) times during Senior year were as a POP.

What would you like to be doing 10 years from now? I'd like to be teaching, happily involved in a relationship, with most of my student loans paid off.

What is the one thing you would change about Albright?: I would change the apathy that students have. If you do not like something, do not simply sit there and complain. Get up and try to do something about it by getting involved.

What are your famous last words for Albright?:

"A strong woman has faith that she is strong enough for the journey...but a woman of strength has faith that it is in the journey that she will become strong." -Unknown

Which Albright Professor influenced you the most?: It would not be fair to choose one professor because all of the professors at Albright have influenced me in their own special ways, whether they realize it or not.

How would you feel that you have changed over the past four years? I feel that I have become more accepting and understanding of the differences that we have as human beings. I think that I am more independent, more outgoing, and stronger, emotionally and mentally. My spirituality has also grown a great deal.

What will you miss most about Albright?

All of the great friends that I have met throughout my four years here.

What is your best memory at Albright?

Definitely being able to go to Hawaii for a month in the winter for two years in a row.

What is one thing you would change?

I would definitely change the party scene. For example; have more of them past 10:00.

What will you be doing ten years from now?

I would like to be raising a family and enjoying life with the people I love.

Which Professor influenced you the most?

Professor DeSyon has helped me so much throughout the past four years. Without his help and advice I do not think I would be as successful as I am.

If I could leave anything to Albright what would it be? New soccer coaches who will build the women's soccer program and make the sport fun again.

If you were stranded on a desert island with anyone in the world to be stuck with, who would it be? Stip because I could watch him glisten in the moonlight after he showers, because he's my dancing partner and because he says so.

How do you feel that you have changed over the past four years? I know that I have calmed down a lot since moving from New Jersey to Pennsylvania. I used to have a bad attitude and negative outlook on things but after being around different types of people and a different environment that has all changed.

If you had three wishes what would they be?

I wish that my family would be happy and healthy. I wish that I would find the perfect person who would take care of me no matter what. I wish that everyone could see Stip glisten after a shower in Hawaii.

What will you miss most about Albright?: What I will miss the most is all the great times I have spent with my friends and especially my roommates who have been together since day one (Bums, Clair, and Whitey)- you guys are the greatest! These memories will last me a life-time. Also, every Tuesday night at the Goose hanging out and chillin with the entire Albright gang.

What is your best memory of Albright? I would have to say winning the MAC Tennis Championship my freshman year when the team went 17-0. It was a real big accomplishment for the team and me.

What is the one thing you would change about Albright?: I know security is doing their job but, they need to chill out a little bit on everything. For instance, the parties in the Woods. RELAX, it will be O.K.

What are your famous last words for Albright?: EAT, DRINK, and BE MERRY! (Dave Matthews Band)

Which Albright Professor influenced you the most?: Actually, their have been several of them that have had a great influence on me. First, the obvious one is Dr. Yoder. He was my history teacher along with being my coach for four years. He is more than both of those titles I consider him to be a great friend and person as well. He had been great over the past 4 years. Dr. Pankratz and Dr. DeSyon also have been influential to me as well. They have taught me more then just what goes on in the classroom. Never forget the the Seminar trip that went to D.C. with Pankratz it was a blast! Riley, Robyn, Haberl and I even found some time for a few beverages in the train station.

Bosstones put on a "mighty" show

Matt Neatock
Eagle/Times

The Mighty Mighty Bosstones have been making their own brand of punk/rock/ska music for more than 10 years.

And Thursday the band, whose hit song "The Impression That I Get" made ska mainstream in 1997, came to Albright's Bollman Center as part of the college's Spring Fever week.

Lead singer Dicky Barrett said the band has played several colleges on its Your Town Throwdown tour, but has not noticed a difference between college fans and those who are usually in attendance.

"I'd love to give you a snappy answer about college fans," Barrett said. "But people that enjoy the Bosstone's music seem to always be the same breed. 'They're just fun-loving, good-hearted, sincere, sweet human beings.'"

The crowd at the Bollman Center was no exception to the fans Barrett described.

Albright senior Kevin Windsor said he has been a fan of the band since it formed in 1990.

"I've always liked them," Windsor said. "They didn't really sell out after they became popular."

"They still play the same small clubs as they did when they were getting started. I really respect a band that does that."

Others at the show were seeing the band for the first time.

Junior Alti Clemente said he was surprised by how much he enjoyed the Bosstones' performance.

"Considering that I don't really like ska, they really impressed me,"

Clemente said. "They have a lot of skill and enthusiasm for playing such a small college, so it was a lot better to see them live than listening to their recordings."

Barrett said he agreed fans have to see his band — as well as any other band — live to fully appreciate its music.

"I think that if you can't deliver live and entertain a room full of people, then you shouldn't be a band," he said. "It's a case of the cart and the horse. The horse is the live performance and the cart is what you record."

"After seeing us tonight I hope fans leave thinking, 'God, that was fun,' or 'That was a nice show.' But if it's like how it is normally they'll think, 'That front guy's a real jerk, but at least the band was pretty good.'"

With a little luck, the Bosstones won't be the last major band to perform at Albright.

Joe Rosenberg, director of student activities at Albright, said he hopes to deliver more acts to the campus.

"We wanted to do something different for Albright and the community surrounding it by bringing in a good college rock show," Rosenberg said. "Hopefully this will be the first of many."

Welcome!

Tune into the T.V. Zone

by: Matthew Jay

This is my last article till next season, lets hope that WGA and SAG resolve all there issues with the Entertainment Industry and avoid a Strike.

We are in May sweeps, as November and February are huge months for TV programming, so is May. This month marks the end of the present season. All shows will be making season finales or some may be making their series finales that will either leave you with wanting more or just end for good.

As of last week, WB has announced that "Buffy The Vampire Slayer" will be ending its run on the WB at the end of its present season. The show is only in its fifth season, The WB said, "knowing how much you care about the show, we negotiated strongly to keep it on The WB, but ultimately the price 20th Television wanted was too high for us to pay." As Buffy was the savior for the WB, UPN hopes it can do the same for it. This week UPN negotiated with Buffy producer 20th Century Fox for $102 million to keep the show for two years. It's not uncommon for shows to negotiate with other networks, like last years big move "Sabrina the Teenage Witch"

Another WB program close to cancellation is "Popular". In it's second season "Popular" may only be popular in name only. Its take on the high school experience is always interesting to watch, they deal with real teenage problems sometimes it hits on the weird not the real. Popular's first season finale included death, dismemberment, a double wedding and Delta Burke. Can "Popular" top a fun filled episode from last season? The answer is yes. This episode revolves around Tammy Lynn Michaels as Nicole Julian, the school's megabitch. Tammy told TV guide online, "In this episode, Nicole's behavior will make the rest of her actions seem angelic." As of this week the WB has yet to register the series for the fall. This season finale may be the series finale to.

Most shows are tightlipped on the plot of their season finales. In the past season or series finales have caused shows to concoct false endings and even have cast and crew sign legal documents promising not to reveal the end results of the shows. One of the most popular season finale was on Dallas, "nighttime soap opera. The show was the famous "Who Shot Jr?" episode. Like most shows ending the season with the watcher wanting more. This year is no exception so keep tuned in and I'm tuning out. See you in TV Land.

Theatre Review:

A funny thing happened on the way to the forum

Jess Eisenhart
Lion Reporter

Did you catch it? The domino players acted their goofiest (besides their everyday antics) these past two weekends (April 27-29, May 3-5). If you heard the laughter coming from the Meridian Theatre, it was the audience enjoying the delightful musical "A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum" directed by Dr. Lynn Morrow. The setting took place in Rome and the set surely fit the description. The lights went up, the actors came down the aisle, and the laughter rippled throughout the crowd.

The play was based on the ancient Roman comedy style where the hero and the heroine fall in love, but are blocked by some obstacle. A rather cunning slave steps in and helps out the hero leading to love prevailing. What is missing then? The answer is all the satirical things that lead up to the happy ending. Throw in a money-loving pimp, some wild whores, a comical trio of eunuchs, a proud captain, a worrisome servant, a bossy mother, a horny father, and last but not least a truly ancient neighbor and there is the comedy in a nut shell.

The play rolled along rather smoothly with only a few minor hitches where a mike didn't work here or a line forgotten there. Students and professors alike graced the stage with their talented acting to produce a laugh out loud production. Maybe, you are wondering which three professors put aside their cloaks of teaching to reveal their hidden acting ability? Dr. King, Dr. Pankratz, and Dr. Scheirer all gave convincing quality performances and lived up nicely to their roles.

All good things must come to an end, as the play did, but not without a hint of sadness though. We must bid farewell to the two seniors Matthew Goldsborough and Maitiu OhEighertaigh. Both will be greatly missed as they exit the stage for a last show, but the hope remains that they will continue to grace other audiences with their talents. It was a good cast who pulled off a wonderful production, and who complimented one another really well.

What will miss most about Albright? It is very tempting to be sarcastic but I'll try to hold it in. I'll miss the friends I've made, all those that have made me laugh and have been there when things weren't always going right. As many of us have learned, college is about the people you meet and the life-long friendships that are formed, and of course where the next party will be....

What is your best memory of Albright?

10. 1999-2000 Swimmer Suite 9. Living in the Virgin Vault with KTK

8. "There's a professor behind you"..."no there isn't"!! (for you Mere) 7. Palm St. (thanks Jones, for hearing me out) 6. S-I-G-M-A K-A-P-P-A 5. What is the one thing you would change about Albright? Well, there are a lot of things but one has been taken care of, now who will be our new Greek advisor????

What would you like to be doing ten years from now? I would like to be lying on a beach somewhere, but I will most likely be teaching in a school yet to be determined.

If you could leave anything to Albright, what would it be? Haven't the seniors left enough money, oh wait there's a $100 graduation fee. I sure hope that money is going towards kegs or something.

How do you feel that you have changed over the past four years? Hopefully for the better, cause as Mere says "you were a geek", but I think that certain people brought out some of my hidden talents like being excessively loud. Thank you to the sorority for allowing me to have the honor of being President, and thanks to the swim team. It is hard to believe four years are complete but it was worth the experience. Now, let's get outta here!!

Bollman Center hosts national badminton tournament

Jen Romans
Lion Reporter

So you think badminton is just a backyard game? Better not say that to the group of students who played in the National Collegiate Badminton Tournament.

Albright College hosted the tournament April 21-22. On Saturday the best badminton players in the country from 13 schools assembled to play in the singles, doubles, and mixed doubles categories. Sunday, the finals were played, while Albright players line judged.

Howard University swept the finals. Ademola Ogunseye of Howard easily defeated Seth Elliot of Stanford winning 15-1, 15-4. Ogunseye combined with Arthur Alexander to win the men's doubles game, defeating Julian Wu and Benny Yu of The University of California, San Diego.

For mixed doubles Ogunseye once again was a winner, when paired with Shackerah Cupidon, a fellow Howard teammate. The pair played very close games, narrowly defeating Arthur Alexander and Amy Nguy (University of Maryland, Baltimore County).

Shackerah, like Ogunseye was able to capture each category she played in beating Dara Walsh (University of California, San Diego) and wearing the girl out for their meeting in the doubles competition. Cupidon then paired with Nguy were able to defeat Walsh and her fellow teammate from San Diego, DeDe Davis.

Since there is no scoreboard in badminton one scorekeeper says the score, making it extremely difficult to know the exact end result. However, medals were given out to the first and second place winners and the first and second place consolation winners (where Stanford was a powerhouse). In the case of the singles players racquets were also awarded.

It may be difficult to loose in the finals of the National badminton tournament, where you may be completely red and breathless with only 1 point to your name, rather different from the scene in the backyard. However, Howard was extremely amicable. One player who did not make it to the finals even commented "Howard is the best school to lose to".

The Albrightian would like to wish everyone a happy and safe summer, as well as thanks to the entire Albright College Community for its support during this year.

Ask the Question Marquis

Q: Dear Question Marquis: My sister's boyfriend broke up with her over a year ago. But his voice is still on her answering machine. Should I tell her how pathetic this is? - Stephen in Annapolis

A: My advice here is going like this: It is not a problem, it is an opportunity. There is no truer friend of passion than the vulnerable rejected lover. You must simply play your cards correctly. I recommend a subtle approach to win her trust. Perhaps you can tell her about Questia. About how much more free time she will have when she's writing research papers if she does the research online. For a time that the two of you could use to, je ne sais pas, get to know each other better? If you know what I...wait--you said your sister's boyfriend? This is a terrible misunderstanding. I have got to stop skimming these questions.

Q: Dear Question Marquis: I am very interested in Questia. Could you please give me some more information about its exciting features? - TW in Houston

A: Zut alors! I think my employer has slipped this one in. But just by chance this is not how the case is, I will answer it briefly. Questia will have an extensive scholarly collection, and the full text of each book and journal article is all online. You just enter your topic and then you can instantly search through any book. And many of the author's own sources are, how you say, "hyperlinked." So you can follow the writer's train of thought, if you like. Also, quotes, footnotes and bibliographies are all done automatically. And, in a few months, Questia can be used to more efficiently groom racehorses. Or such is my understanding. That may be confidential information, so don't go gossiping it about like a bunch of Montesquieu's concubines. Now I wish I hadn't told you.

*"There is no truer friend of passion than the vulnerable rejected lover.
You simply must play your cards correctly."*

Q: Dear Question Marquis: Well...why did you tell us? In both of your answers, you could have corrected your mistakes by using the delete key.

A: In life, there is no such thing as a delete key. Q.E.D., there is no delete key for writing my column. What's done is done, what's said is said. Vive moi! (Long live me!)

NBA: Driving Toronto Buggy

Jerry Reimenschneider
Eagle/Times

TORONTO -- You cannot simply swat them, then watch them as they fall. You cannot merely stomp them, then listen as they squish.

Once you've finally snatched the Philadelphia 76ers, once you have them wiggling in your fingertips, you had better finish the job. You had better seal them in cellophane.

You had better flush them promptly and have the plumber replace the pipes.

Just to be sure you're really rid of them. Just to be sure they're really dead.

Because as Toronto's trash-talking Raptors learned the hard way Sunday afternoon, the Sixers have the immune system of a cockroach.

Because as the Raptors rediscovered during Philadelphia's 84-79 victory at Air Canada Centre, the Sixers cling to life the way skinny ticks cling to scalps.

When their breath is all but gone, as it seemed to be before Sunday's Game 4 win, the Sixers find strength to gasp.

When this bug is in an airless tank, as the Sixers seemed to be before evening their best-of-seven Eastern Conference semifinal, it somehow scrounges oxygen.

When things are at their worst, the Sixers are at their best.

"It's easy when everything is going the way you want it to go," said Sixers All-Star Allen Iverson, who hit Sunday's decisive 3-pointer for the last three of his 30 points. "But you find out what type of player you are, what type of man you are, when things are going against you."

Before Game 4, things had been going against the Sixers since their arrival in Ontario.

Toronto had demoralized them during Game 3 Friday night, beating them by 24 and turning their evening into a debacle. While Raptors star Vince Carter was plopping 50 points upon them, the Oakley saw the Sixers scurrying and mistook the bug for dead.

"(Sixers center Dikembe) Mutombo said before the series it'd be over early," said Oakley prior to Game 4. "He must have known something."

Oakley's stab at verbal payback, his implication that Toronto would be the team to finish the series swiftly, proved premature.

The Sixers withstood a hostile crowd, creative officiating and a late Raptors run on Sunday.

They survived a poor second half from Iverson and another terrible performance from forward Tyrone Hill.

They survived the sobering news, delivered as the game clenched in the fourth quarter, that forward George Lynch had broken his foot and was lost for the playoffs.

They survived, period.

Again.

"We've had a lot of adversity all season, with injuries and trades and all kind of stuff," Iverson said. "It's just important, once we're on the dance floor, to put all those things aside -- and dance."

This bug wasn't scurrying to its death.

This bug was just dancing.

The Toronto Raptors' Vince Carter jumps on the Sixers' Kevin Ollie, fouling him during the closing moments of Game 4 of the Eastern Conference semifinal series in Toronto Sunday. The Sixers won 84-79 to even the best-of-seven series at 2-2.

Sixers were busy bickering amongst themselves.

They finished Game 3 downtrodden and down two games to one to a Raptors team holding a can of Raid -- the one with the formula for killing pesky Sixers in their tracks.

Following Friday night's disorientation, the Sixers moved frantically to escape the spray.

Two team meetings, one initiated by Iverson, had taken place by Saturday morning's practice. And coach Larry Brown made a mid-series change to his starting lineup, replacing gimpy point guard Eric Snow with NBA Sixth Man Award winner Aaron McKie.

Letters to the Editor

Cafeteria worker responds to parent's editorial

Dear

I am writing in response to the letter that was published in the April 18, 2001 edition of The Albrightian. The first point that I would like to make is that I must question why was this letter not signed? It has been my experience that anyone who writes with conviction will put his or her name to what they have written.

Secondly, I am very disconcerted about the reference of "prison food" to describe what is served in the Dining Hall. Again, I have another question. At what correctional facility was your child incarcerated? As a long-term employee of the Dining Hall and a member of the Berks County Prison Society I know what type of food is served in prison. The two do not compare.

Now, let us get to the "meat" of this letter. The Dining Hall uses brand name foods. They are the same that one would be able to purchase at any local supermarket or the Farmer's Market for that fact. Our produce is fresh and purchased from Karetas Foods.

Our milk is purchased from Clover Farms Dairy, fresh chicken is purchased from Wegman & Sons, and breads from Maier's / Strohman.

Additionally, items bought in bulk from our distributor are made by companies like Stouffers, Sara Lee, Oreida, Pillsbury, Kellogg's, and Quaker.

Those delicious rolls on the Hoagie Bar are purchased from Conshohocken Bakery, or A.T.V. Bakery (one of the finest Italian Bakers in the area) and made under the supervision of my husband! The majority of the "Specialty Salads" on the salad bar are made from scratch. Need I go on?

Finally, in ending we would like to put our money where your mouths are. Just cut out this letter (original copy please) and bring it with you when your parents come to visit — for a regular meal service.

Respectfully submitted,

Denise Cammarano

Notes from Albright Environmental Action

An editorial regarding: "It's time to bring law to the lawlessness," by Ryan Bialas of the College Republicans

Mr. Bialas,

Upon reading your short-sighted article on how what we "truly need is for the government to crack down on lawlessness" and "eradicate" those "who commit violent crimes...from our community" by "throw [ing] them into jail and keeping them there", I deemed it necessary to point out a section of the crime-committing population that you have sorely overlooked. You speak about the subject of taxpayer's dollars keeping these "criminals" alive. Have you ever considered what kind of massive economic and social damage the REAL criminals cause? I'm not talking about John Doe that shot Jane Doe on 4th Street. I'm talking about large corporations and businesses (many of which who are transnational) who continually rape the earth and its people. It is a type of violence that easily gets overlooked, all because it's money dealing with money. Somehow, stealing from old Mrs. Smith's estate is jail-worthy, yet the company Citigroup's blatant predation on poor populations is not; killing one's neighbor may promise the death penalty, yet corporations in places like Chester, PA serve a slow and painful death to the minority community they have strategically settled in make money every day; and companies like Wal-Mart, Gap Inc., and Boise Cascade are continually allowed to rape people from their lives and livelihoods and the earth from its land and resources.

I am in no way saying that violent acts are not punishable; I am saying, however, that it's past due time that we recognize how violent the wealthy people and countries are. It is time to make corporate accountability mandatory in all business. And, if you speak of "taxpayer's dollars", imagine what kind of money is involved in these multi-billion dollar industries. The revenue generated from fining of such activities would be amazing, far more than what we as taxpayers spend on rehabilitation and institutionalization. I say, throw all those rapists, thieves and drug-pushers that is Corporate America in jail as well.

Furthermore, You mention how "drug users, rapists, killers, and criminals" should not be kept "alive and sustained on taxpayer money". Are you directly supporting the death penalty for anyone who commits any kind of felon? If not, that is what I have read into your article and I may not be alone.

-Kate Yaeger
Albright Environmental Action

It's time to bring Law to the Lawless Re-visited

Ayan Rand once wrote, "The tribal notion of the 'common good' has served as the moral justification of most social systems—and of all tyrannies—in history. The degree of society's enslavement or freedom corresponded to the degree to which that tribal slogan was invoked or ignored." Libertarians believe in law, government and order.

We believe that each person has certain unalienable rights like life, liberty, and property. To protect these rights government was created.

The government's job is to ensure that these rights are not violated. In a libertarian world, murderers and rapists would be arrested, given a trial and thrown in jail if found guilty. It is hard to comprehend how a world where everyone has their unalienable rights and where a government's sole job is to protect them could be a tragedy.

Why do libertarians complain about the overbearing government that tries to control everything from drugs to SUVs, pornography to what you eat?

Because as we try to control these things for the "common good" we start taking away personal responsibility. As people are told what they can and can't do, they lose control of their lives. They lose responsibility for their actions. If one is not responsible for their own actions then why should they care what they do?

As you lose your own unalienable rights what makes your neighbor's rights any more sacred? No wonder our world is going to hell. It's what my friend used to call an "infinitely regressive situation." The more the government tries to solve our problems, the more problems the government creates. Which leads to more government problem solving. We need to start demanding back our freedom so we can be responsible for our own lives.

Ryan Bialas wrote, "The fact of the matter is that humans will not self regulate themselves...but also act in self interested ways that are destructive to the whole community." The problem here is that self-interest is not a bad thing.

The entire world revolves around self-interest. Every time you work for money, in some way you do it out of self-interest. Anytime you buy anything, in some way you do it out of self-interest. In turn, other people are able to make money or benefit from your work.

From time to time people will try to hurt your rights in the process. That is when self-interest becomes wrong. That is when the government should intervene.

Libertarians recognize that the world has its problems. Even a libertarian world would have problems. So what kind of world would you like to live in? Libertarians would like to live in a world where they have the freedom to control their own destinies.

There would be problems in this world, however only in a libertarian world would you best be able to solve those problems.

With freedom comes responsibility, take away freedom and you lose the responsibility. Libertarians are not calling for anarchy and lawlessness. We are calling for a world where everyone has the right to life, liberty and property. Laws would exist to protect these rights from being violated by others. To give meaning to those laws the government would enforce them.

Would you like the right to your life, your liberty and your property? Would you like to have the ability and responsibility to maximize those rights as you see fit? The time is now to start evaluating what is truly lawless and what in the name of the "common good" is perpetuating true lawlessness.
