K. Guenther To Be Speaker

To Give Commencement Address On Sun., June 3

Kathleen M. Guenther will be the student speaker at commencement on Sunday, June 3 at 3:30 p. m. Miss Guenther will talk about what the seniors gained from their experiences at Albright College and what they will do with this knowledge in the future.

Majoring in English and German, Miss Guenther has been secretary of Delta Phi Alpha, honor-

Sigma.

Miss Guenther has spent much of her time working for student council. Her sophomore year Miss Guenther served as chairman of the chapel committee; her junior year, chairman of the social committee; her senior year, vice-president of council and chairman of chapel committee. Miss Guenther is remembered also for her work in the Domino Club. She was secretary of the club her sophomore year and vice-president her junior year. Miss Guenther has appeared in many Domino productions, her greatest role being the lead in the play, "Good-bye My Fancy."

Albright Suffers Operating Deficit

Operating Deficit

For the first time in more than ten years, Albright faces an operating deficit of $28,000 for 1950-51. To help reduce this, an appeal has been made to alumni and friends through a pamphlet, "Albright is in Your Hands," mailed this week. The deficit was brought about largely by higher operational costs. Like all colleges, Albright must depend upon sources of income other than tuition to meet its expenses. Last year alumni in 189 American colleges and universities gave more than $12,000,000 to their alma maters.

College officials explained that theoretically it would be possible to make up for the deficit by increasing the tuition, reducing the staff or reducing salaries. Each of these plans, however, would do more harm than good in the long run. It was decided accordingly to continue to administer all funds efficiently and economically to produce the maximum result from every dollar, and to approach alumni and friends for special gifts during the emergency.

Council Opposes Policies of Paper; Albrightian Editor Denies Charges

In unprecedented action last Tuesday, student council went on record as being opposed to the policies currently being expressed in The Albrightian. The vote was ten in favor, six against and five abstentions. Nine members of council were absent from the meeting. Elliott Sauertieg, representing the Pi Tau Beta fraternity, made the motion opposing The Albrightian to which objection was raised. These are as follows:

When informed of the action, William A. Heck, editor-in-chief of The Albrightian, denied the charges levied against the publication. He stated that the paper is still following its historic policy of supporting those things which are for the best interest of the college as a whole.

Heck, a member of student coun-cil, was absent from Tuesday's meeting because he was on a field trip with the psychology depart-

Council also approved the appointment of a committee to investigate the publication's policies and to report with recommended action.

Last Chance

With the extension of the deadline for filing applications for the Selective Service College Qualification Test extended until Friday, May 25, we encourage all men students to take advantage of the opportunity to take this test.

Latest reports indicate that a large percentage of those eligible for possible deferment as a result of this test have not made plans to take it. This situation is true not only at Albright but at other institutions as well.

As selective service officials explained, stu-dents have everything to gain and nothing to lose by taking the tests.

Farewell, Seniors

More than 100 Albright seniors will end their collegiate career on June 3 with the 92nd annual commencement exercises. For some of these, graduation will mark the end of formal education. For others, it will be but a door opening to graduate school.

Wherever the seniors go after they leave Albright, we hope that they will never forget the days they have spent here. We hope that for them Albright will be more than a memory of books, dances, sports and friends. We hope that it will also be an ideal leading them ever onward in the path of truth and justice.

With the hope that the Class of 1951 will nev forget Albright and with the promise that we will never forget them, we bid our seniors adieu.

idea to give a brief description of an exploration of "the edifice dedicated to scientific thought."

As we enter the door (convenient way to enter) on the west side, a foul smell penetrates our lungs. After adjusting to the situation, we climb the stairs and enter upon the "heights," (commonly known as the chem department) and are at once confronted with strange vapors lazily sifting through the halls. Next, as we walk down the corridor, a sudden flash and roar emanate from the lab ahead. But we find it to be only the freshmen experimenting with unsafe mixtures. We quickly duck out from here because a glowing description of organic compounds—benzine rings, double bands, etc.—is heard in the next lab. Here we see organic students distilling mysterious liquids (no, not alcohol), bending glass and preparing experiments. Viewing such activity three us, so we descend the stairs and experience a searing burning effect upon our noses—formaldehyde, of course! The biology department is in high gear probing into the innards of felines and gently dismembering earthworms.

Egad—we suddenly reel back from a terrible devastating roar from the room ahead! Upon further investigation we find it to be none other than a science fundamentals class quaking under the fury of their professor. As we leave this ghastly scene we come upon another unusual sight: a group of students slowly wending upstairs from the basement as if in a deep trance. Oh!—this is just another physics class emerging from one of "those lectures." We finish our trip by descending to the lower regions with their labyrinth of apparatus in the physics labs and finally by playing with those cute mice at the end of the hall.

After this exploration of the sacred recesses of the science hall, we come to the conclusion that it snows year

After this exploration of the sacred recesses of the sacred (mentally, that is) and that each room has its own particular smell. You should come up and visit (smell?) the place more often!

Via Second Class Mail

Campus elections have been taking the limelight this month in most of the country's colleges and universities. In more than a few schools they present a problem, as they do at Albright. The hub of the problem is the lackadisical response by the student bodies. Nominations are often ignored, while those factions putting up candidates are sourly criticized by groups who apparently made no attempts at action.

To boost election, spirit at North Control College.

are sourly criticized by groups who apparently made no attempts at action.

To boost election spirit at North Central College, Naperville, Illinois the "Chronicle" issued a special preelection extra, printing photographs and qualifications of the candidates. Otterbein College students disappointed their leaders' expectations for a 75 per cent turnout when only 52 per cent of the student body voted. (Albright's turnout was about 71 per cent in the last election.) However, St. Joseph's College hit an all time high with 85 per cent of its voters casting their ballots. No obvious reason for this success presents itself, although "The Hawk" commends Robert Kraft, president-elect of the student body, for "displaying one of the most complete campaigns ever seen on campus," Certainly election interest does begin long before the balloting takes place.

Because of threats by the administration to clamp down on fraternity hazing in order to prevent adverse criticism by citizens of Westerville, Ohio, the Interfraterity Council of Otterbein College is preparing to take action itself. Reformers maintain that many of the activities of "hell week" are outmoded and highschoolish and should be replaced by constructive activities. The sharpest division is over the question of whether "to swat or not to swat." Two of the school's fraternities favor preserving the paddle tradition.

Dandy Lion

Our dandy lion's growl this week is for none other than Pete Bohren—"the man with the glasses." Pete is 23 years old, a vet, and says he's from God's country or Warren. To explain this point further, (and I trust it needs further explaining), Warren is a small metropolis located in northwestern Pennsylvania.

Although Pete hasn't been seen around campus too much this semester, he has very valid reasons for exhibiting this absentee behavior. He is a special student and is working at the Pentagon Hosiery Company, where he will be permanently employed after graduation.

On December 30, 1950 he became a traitor to bachelor-hood, when he became engaged to Marilyn Mohr; and on June 30, 1951 he will be married to, quote, "the most beau-tiful little gal on either side of heaven," unquote.

Pete's activities at Albright have been many. He was business manager of The Albrightian and worked on the staff for three years, is a loyal member and secretary of the Zeta Omega Epsilon fraternity, and is on the staff of the Zeta Link, the fraternity newspaper. He is treasurer and chairman of the D.P. committee and a member of the Albright symphony and marching bands. He says he always got a charge out of the red and white uniforms, especially the cape. It made him feel like "Superman." Pete is also a member of Pi Gamma Mu, the International Relations Club and the dining hall committee.

Because of Pete's dry wit and god sense of humor, he

Because of Pete's dry wit and good sense of humor, he always has one laughing. To you, Pete, may you always have that amiable attitude and here's wishing you the best for your success in the future.

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor:

The fraternities, I think, should receive much better representation than was afforded by the defeated constitution. The frats deserve better representation because they are an active part of student life; in fact, a few fraternities are doing a great deal of constructive works on the campus—for example, painting the numbers on the bleacher seats and cleaning the war memorial plaqua—which received little or no acknowledgement. The whool paper seems to overlook or neglect these good access.

Now that the new constitution has been defeated, what should be done and why?

Wess Yeager, '54—I think a new constitution that would do away with separate representation for dorm and day students should be written for this will lessen the breach that already exists between these two groups. For instance, a men's senate could be composed of half day and half dorm students and this group would internally pick its representatives to student council. The same would also apply to a women's senate.

James Dunkelberger, '51—Council should come to some agreement on the most controversial parts of the constitution before they try adoption a second time. Albert Fiorini, '52—If the apathy that was prevalent during the last election were eliminated, approval could most likely be had. The beginning of the next school year would be an ideal time for another election. Newspaper publicity should serve to inform the student body of the proposed changes and why adoption is necessary. Arthur Chafe, '51—Council should keep plugging the issue; keep it alive.

Arthur Chafe, '51—Council should keep plugging the issue; keep it alive.

Patricia Eisenbise, '54—First, a vote of the students should be taken to see if a new constitution is actually wanted. If not, the idea should be discarded. If a new constitution is desired, the students should suggest what changes they want made, and then a constitution should be drawn up to satisfy these demands.

Robert Lippincott, '53—Minorities are still running the campus. We must strive in some way to decrease their power.

Leroy Wenger, '54—There is too much dissention on the matter to attempt it a second time.

Harold Kehler, '51—Keep the issue alive in the interest of the future inheritance of student council.

By Jackie Zwoye

By Jackie Zwoyer

Just wait until the editor reads this! It was supposed to have been a personal opinion column on the question:
"Now that the constitution has been defeated, what should be done and why?"

Two kind souls volunteered the following advice:

Emma Seifrit, '54—The proposed constitution should be brought up for consideration again next year. Before a vote is taken, however, there should be a campaign to interest the student body so that a majority of the students would be acquainted with it and would also vote. Perhaps this could be done by reading it in chapel, although this might put those (who weren't already) asleep.

And one person was interested enough to say...

Jackie Klein, '54—I think that the student council should try to find out why the constitution was not accepted, and then try to make it better. Then it could be put to a vote again next year. More publicity could help the cause a lot.

a vote again next year. More publicity could help the cause a lot.

The fact that both mentioned the need for publicity is significant. This isn't a personal opinion column because, unlike the two people above who did some thinking on the matter, too few people had any opinion at all about the rejected constitution.

After numerous replies of "Who cares? We've struggled along with the old constitution this long; why can't we go on?" "I'm not worrying about a new constitution; are you sure we need a student council?" this reporter was ready to give up the idea. The piece de resistance was one coy maiden's reply, "I didn't know we'd rejected it."

Well, what are you going to do? Before student council can hope to get a new constitution (regardless of how good it may be for us) it will have to convince certain people by some concrete successful activities that is is a going concern—not a battleground for proponents of the ultimate in "Roberts' Rules." True, it's a vicious cycle. The council may need the constitution to operate more effectively but it's also got to produce some evidence of its worthy potentialities before it can hope to get that existitution.

The election did prove one thing. The council will have to "talk up" something as big as a new constitution in a much more progressive, persuasive campaign than simply printing it on the back pages of The Albrightian. For Pete's sake! You can't beat down the giant Apathy here at Albright in that way.

Current Tides—The Franco Enigma

By Russell F. Weigiey

By Russell F. Weigiey

Early this year ambassadors of the Western powers returned to Spain after a forty year absence; many in this country hope that the recon will prove the first step toward admitting the Spainsh government into the North Atlantic alliance. If their hopes are realized, the step will mark the climax to a long series of Western blunders which have placed us in such a position in Spain that the results are likely to be disastrous no matter what we do there.

Though competition for the title is keen, the Spanish regime of Generalissimo Francisco Franco might easily be named the most unsavory government in the civilized world. It is a government whose undenied aim is to exploit the nation for a handful of generals and landowners at the top; it hardly bothers to make as much as a presense of improving the lot of its average subjects, while even the Soviets make some gestures in that direction. Franco stands alone at the head of the state, "responsible only to God and to history." His party, the Falange, avowedly patterned after Mussolini's Fascisti, controls both the political and economic life of the nation; all organizations of employers and workers are united in the Falange. Freedom of speech, of association, of religion have been mercilessly stamped out; thousands of political prisoners fill the jails.

Perhaps the most tragic feature of the Spanish mess prisoners fill the jails.

Perhaps the most tragic feature of the Spanish mess is that the western democracies probably could have prevented Franco's coming to power in the first place. The Spanish Civil War began with a democratically-inclined government in Madrid and Franco leading a rebellion of disgruntled rightists into Spain from Morocco. Though most of the army joined the insurgents, the great bulk of the population remained loyal, an effective Popular Militia was formed, and anti-fascist volunteers from other countries poured into Spain. But Franco soon began receiving munitions, planes and troops from Germany and Italy; France and England gave only token support to the Spanish government; the United States, reversing its traditional policy toward legitimate governments, forbade the export of war material to either side, thus in effect helping France; and only the distant Soviet Union sent any substantial aid to the loyalists. In 1939 France won out.

The idea of those who would have us embrace the Spanish dictator today is that Spain not only occupies a strategic position in the Mediterranean but also has, on paper, a good-sized army—22 divisions, almost 500,000 men. About all these troops are good for at the moment, however, is to appear in parades. They have practically no heavy weapons and those they do have are mostly obsolete; there are few skilled technicians; the transport problem is a nightmare—there are only 6,000 miles of railway in the whole country and most of this is barely serviceable. Most important, it remains a question whether the country would fight effectively for Franco. The regime never has been able to crush some 30,000 guerrillas scattered in the mountains, and new unrest has flared up in recent months—the strikes in Barcelona in March, a sitdown strike in the industrial city of Bibao in late April. If we support Franco, we endorse a tyrant of the worst kind to get an ally of highly doubtful value.

If we do not support Franco, se endorse a tyrant of the worst kind to get an ally of highly doubtful value.

If we do not support Franco's remeines in the last days of the Civil War. The collapse of the Falange might open Spain to the Reds. Nonetheless, Spanish leaders who are both anti-Franco and anti-Communist do remain, and Communist strength has never been very great among the mass of the Catholic Spanish people. If we are able to contain the Reds elsewhere in Europe, and at the same time refuse to grant further encouragement to Franco, a democratic Spain may yet emerge.

The girls' awards were given by Mrs. Eva Mosser with Jean Magee, Ellie Spring and Nancy Stump receiving the key, the highest award that can be received by the girls. Mrs. H. Geiger, head of the Women's Auxiliary, presented the trophies to the outstanding woman athlete in leadership and sportsmanship. This year's award was a tie between Jean Magee and Nancy Stump, so that both girls received trophies.

Highlight of the evening was a talk by Charles S. (Pop) Kelchner. He stated his belief that athletes play a major role on any college campus and must work hard to become accomplished. He also emphasized the importance of a clean mind and body so that social and spiritual life can be developed fully. He closed his speech with congratulations to the personnel of Albright who he believes are second to none.

The program was brought to close with the cheerleaders giving several cheers and a rendiact of the Alma Mater led by Leonard Buxton.

Trounce Moravian, 13-0 As Martone Strikes Out 14; St. Joe's Win Hurling Duel

The Albright College baseball team posted two wins and one loss during the past week to bring their record to 10 triumphs against six losses. They defeated Lebanon Valley and Moravian and lost a close pitching dual to LaSalle.

After playing through five scoreless innings, LaSalle finally broke the ice in the sixth frame and again in the eighth to defeat Albright, 2-0, on the 15th and Bern Streets diamond last Thursday. However, the Lions remained on the winning side of the ledger with nine victories against six defeats. Jim Covello and Paul Muller, who performed on the mound for their respective sides, each allowed seven hits. The first Explorer tally, scored in the sixth, was unearned as it was tallied on an error by third baseman George Amole. The final insurance tally, however, was genuine.

Joe Gallagher, who scored both tallies for LaSalle, reached first asfely in the sixth inning on a fielder's choice and moved to second on a sacrifice. He scored a minute later when Jack George's grounder to Amole was picked up and thrown over the head of Connie between hits Chestal the Moravian Greyhounds, 13-0, on the home diamond last Thursday. Gallagher again crossed the plate in the eighth after George sent a towering fly to center.

Cats Load Bases

The Lions had the bases loaded and no one out in the second frame, only to be put down in order without scratching the score sheet. Jay Sherlach reached first on an error, Blackie Moyer singled, and Amole reached first base on a fielder's choice. Sherlach and Moyer were retired at the plate on force plays and Lefty Leitham was thrown out at first.

Newcomers who showed exceptional promise in pre-season practice were grid stars Bill Newman, Dan Surgent, Jim McHale, John Downey, John Kopa and rookies Tom Brown, Dick Ryder, Mike Roscipko and John McCarthy.

The Albright diamondmen play a double header in the season's finale. The morning fray will take place at 10:00 a. m. on Saturday, June 2, at Lancaster with Franklin and Marshall College and the nightcap will be played at 2:30 the same afternoon at 15th and Bern. Coach Boyd Sponaugle's Blue and White squad lost a losing battle with the weatherman during the early part of the season and many of their first frays were postponed or cancelled.

Pat Bieber did the hurling for the winners with George Rankin doing the receiving. Joe Ward was on the hill for the Kappas and Hugh MacLeish was behind the plate. Although the Kappas took an early lead by hitting Bieber hard, the Zetas pecked away until they had knotted the count at nine all. The Zetas finally took the lead before the final out to walk off the field with a 12-0 victory.

The Kappas defeated the APO's on Thursday, May 10 to continue their winning streak and forge into a deadlock for the loop lead. This win knocked the APO's from the circuit head position.

On the same day the Zetas defeated the KTX with Bieber again doing the mound duties and getting credit for the win Rankin, who had four hits in four attempts, hit a booming four bagger to give the Zetas the lead.

Hawks Triumph Over Lion Thinclads, 78-48; Shirkmen Set Records While Dropping Second Battle

While Dropping Second Battle

Coach Gene Shirk's thinclads went down to their second defeat of the season last Wednesday, May 9, in Philadelphia at the hands of $1. Joseph's Hawks, 78-48. The Shirkmen now have recorded four wins and two setbacks.

Howie Brenner and Lee Cappel each scored doubles for the Red and White trackmen and more than one of the Albright performers bettered his best mark. Brenner ran the 100-yard dash in 10.2 seconds and took the broad jump event with a leap of 21 feet, 4½ inches.

Cappel captured the 120-yard high hurdles in 16.1 and came back in the javelin toss with a throw of 189 feet, three inches to win that event also. He also traveled the distance of the low hurdles in 25.4 seconds which was his best thus far in his career but not good enough to lead St. Joseph's Bob Pettit who covered the course in 25.2.

Gerry Potts for the first time this season lost both ends of his events. His 44 foot shot toss was the farthest he has reached yet. He also threw the discus 131 feet, two inches.

Psychology Class Visits Wernersville

The abnormal psychology class, taught by Prof. John Reid, visited the Wernersville State Hospital Tuesday afternoon. The first part of the visit featured a tour of the buildings during which patients and facilities were observed. Of special interest to the group was the occupational therapy department. The second half of the visit was spent in getting a clinical picture of psychotics. At this time the class saw paranoids, schizophrenies and manic depressive patients. Each student was given an opportunity to question the patients as they were brought in for observation. The students received some interesting answers, one patient assuming authorship of the Tennessee Waltz and another claiming to be the owner of three million dollars.
