

Domino Club Will Present "Arms and The Man" Tonight

The Albright College Domino Players will present their production of "Arms and the Man" by George Bernard Shaw, today and Saturday, December 2-3 in Krause Hall.

This three-act comedy, one of Shaw's best, is a satire on war, the professional soldier, and romanticism set in Bulgaria in 1885. Curtain time for the Friday evening performance is 8 p.m. A matinee is scheduled for Saturday afternoon at 2 p.m.

Richard A. Albright '69, will appear as Captain Bluntschli, a professional soldier. Barbara Joan Levitan '70, is Raina Petkoff; and Ronald W. Delp '67, is cast as Major Paul Petkoff, the father of Raina. Roger P. Mallon '69, is Major Sergius Saranoff, the cynical fiancé of Raina.

Other roles are played by Janet F. Snelbaker as Catherine Petkoff; Sandra J. Pike as Louka, and Theodore L. Cockley as Nicola. All are freshmen.

Albright, Delp, and Mallon appeared in the campus production of "Solid Gold Cadillac" last Fall. Delp and Miss Pike were cast in "Everyman" earlier this year.

Mrs. Sack Speaks At HEO Meeting

The second Home Economics meeting of this season was held in Alumni Hall at 7:00 P.M. on Tuesday, November 15, 1966. The guest speaker was Mrs. Rose Sack who is on the staff in the Sociology Department at Albright. Mrs. Sack is the director at the Jewish Community Center Nursery School in Reading and consultant for the Headstart Program in 1966.

At the meeting Mrs. Sack's topic was "Operation Headstart in Reading". She explained the significance of Operation Headstart and how the program has been carried out. Various slides were shown, afterwards Mrs. Sack answered questions about the program.

1967 GRID SCHEDULE ANNOUNCED, 5 PLAYERS MAKE ALL-STAR TEAM

A nine-game schedule, including Springfield College, Springfield, Mass., a newcomer, has been announced for Albright College's football team for the 1967 season.

The Lions will meet Springfield at home Saturday night, Oct. 7. Springfield replaces Wagner College on the Albright card which includes Lycoming, Juniata, Gettysburg, Delaware Valley, Moravian, Lebanon Valley, Upsala and Drexel.

Albright, coached by John Potokian, will open at Lycoming Saturday, Sept. 23. The home opener will be with Juniata Saturday night, Sept. 30. All games will be in the Middle Atlantic Conference Northern College Division with the exception of Springfield and Gettysburg.

Albright posted a second straight 4-5 record this fall. The Red and White defeated Juniata, Lycoming, Moravian and Lebanon Valley—losing to Gettysburg, Delaware Valley,

Soble, Leabman Join WXAC Board

Two Albright College students from Philadelphia have been appointed to the editorial board of WXAC-FM, station officials announced recently.

Alan G. Soble and Sylvan Leabman will serve one year terms on the three-man editorial board. In this capacity they share responsibility for the writing and review of editorial material centering on the college, its community, and on higher education.

Soble, a sophomore biology major, presently is secretary for the campus broadcasting facility which began operations this Fall as Reading's newest f.m. station (91.3 megacycles).

Leabman is a senior political science major with plans to enter graduate work in public administration. President of Alpha Phi Omega, national service fraternity, he serves on the advertising and publicity staff of Agon, the campus literary magazine, and has been active in the Domino players, French Club, and Epsilon Nu, a pre-legal fraternity.

CUE STAFF CHOSEN

New members of the Cue, the Albright Yearbook, were recently chosen. They are Lynn Eckert, Ann Morfogen, Michele Skea, Faye Geegce and Grace Vitkus. They will aid the current board of Susan George, Marnie Clark, Pat Stoltz, Marilyn Orfuss, Betty Deitenbeck, Paul Chaiet, LaBarbara Bowman, and Nancy Trainor.

Editor-in-chief Jane Oswald reports that the Cue is progressing well. Dave Cook is photographic editor, and Scott Lake is assistant photographer.

Hope Schweitzer Enters Contest

Hope L. Schweitzer, a senior home economics major from Scotch Plains, N. J., is the official Albright College entry in the 1966 Miss Cheerleader U.S.A. contest to be held in Cypress Gardens, Fla., over the Christmas holidays. She was last year's homecoming queen.

Miss Schweitzer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert L. Schweitzer, is captain of the Albright cheerleaders. She will compete with cheerleaders from hundreds of colleges and universities throughout the country for this year's crown.

Five finalists in the competition will be chosen in early December, and each will receive an all-expense-paid trip to Cypress Gardens for the finals on Dec. 29. Preliminary judging is based on action and portrait photographs submitted for each contestant. The winner will be chosen on her ability to lead cheers and enthrall the crowd on hand for the finals.

Prizes awarded finalists include a swim wardrobe, camera, winter skis, a silver trophy. The national winner receives a trip to the Orange Bowl festivities, a $200 scholarship and the Miss Cheerleader U.S.A. trophy.

She is president of Pi Alpha Tau sorority and co-chairman of Albright's Intersorority Council, secretary of the Class of 1967, a member of the executive boards of the Women's Athletic Council and Women's Athletic Assn., and active in HEO, the College home economics organization.

On Wednesday evening, December 7, the Jewish holiday of Chanukah begins. This holiday celebrates the rededication of the Temple by the victorious Maccabees in their struggle against the Syrian King Antiochus, who had attempted to suppress the religion of the Jews. Every evening lights are kindled in commemoration of that event. Candle lighting will be held in the Pine Room at 8:30, December 7.

The Albrightian would like to wish a Happy Chanukah to all of our readers of the Jewish faith.

Poor Attendance Mars Chuck Berry Concert

The Chuck Berry and Shirelles concert on November 19, was not a complete failure. Financially, Albright took a crushing blow losing approximately $2800. However, reports show that those who gave the concert a chance enjoyed it.

Council To Act On Absent Reps

The Student Council Executive Committee will decide on Monday whether certain representatives will be removed from Council because of too many absences from Council meetings.

These representatives will be relieved of their Council positions unless their excuses for the absences are accepted by the executive committee.

A chart of the attendance by Council members presented in the Tuesday meeting (see below) shows twelve representatives subject to such action.

The twelve are senior class representative Roy Nunn, junior class representatives Bill Stoyko, and George Blakeslee, all three of the sophomore class representatives, Jeffrey Weil, Roger Mallon, and Linda Peacock, freshman representative Bob Petrucelli, Kappa Representative Gary Lowe and Pi Tau representative Arthur Laike, Zeta representatives Steve Bartone and Richard Egger; and APO representative, Marvin Garrett.

The constitution states: "Members of Student Council shall not be permitted to miss more than two consecutive or three non-consecutive meetings per semester. Members missing more than the number of meetings set down in subsections (5) shall be dismissed from Council unless a written excuse is submitted and the Executive Committee of Council approves it. In the event a member is dismissed from Council, the president of the organization he represents shall be notified that his organization will be de-

The Shirelles put on an entertaining show singing old favorites of theirs such as: "Tonight's the Night," "Those Oldies but Goodies," "Soldier Boy," "Will You Love Me Tomorrow," and "Boys."

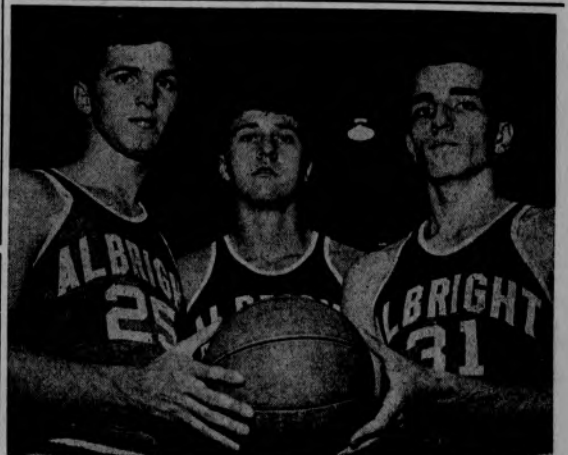

They also sang popular hits such as: "What I Say," "The Dog," "Twist and Shout," and "Money," to the accompaniment of clapping hands and singing audience. They showed themselves as entertainers in their own right and despite the humiliating emptiness of the gym, put their hearts and feet into the show.

Chuck Berry, full of vitality, sang, went wild with rhythm, and proved to be very enjoyable. As the audience screamed out his old hits he replied, "You name it, I'll sing it." And he did—with as much enthusiasm as if there had been a full house.

Albright needed 1500 tickets sold to break even. It was estimated that 545 people attended and approximately 145 of these people were paying Albright students. Only about 14% of the student body cared to support the groups. Had the Albright students given the entertainers a chance, they would probably have enjoyed the concert as much as the students who did go.

Had only 600 more Albright students attended, the concert would have had more of a chance of coming out even, and another could be planned. As it stands now, however, with no acting chairman of Nuclei and no funds with which to work, Albright may never see another big name group.

Prived of one representative for a period of two consecutive Council meetings, after which period the organization may send another properly elected representative.

Three seniors are on the Albright College basketball team as the team opens its home season tomorrow by hosting Susquehanna University at the fieldhouse. Albright played Susquehanna twice last year, defeating them 95 to 77 and losing narrowly 66 to 67. The Lions were M.A.C. champions last year. Left to right: Bill Kudrick, Sal Randazzo, Jay Lord.

Roll Over, Beethoven!

The problem of sponsoring a big-name entertainment group has many facets and after the recent miserable flop, an investigation is necessary. Less than 200 Albright students attended the affair featuring Chuck Berry and The Shirelles causing a loss of 2500 dollars and greatly dimming the future for other groups on campus. It is true that a more popular group would have been more successful but the blame cannot rest exclusively on the shoulders of the Nuclei Committee or the student body.

Other colleges host big-name groups year after year which are greatly supported and enjoyed by the students. Franklin & Marshall College, for instance, had a total of seven groups scheduled this semester, including The Supremes, The Righteous Brothers, The Ramsey Lewis Trio, and Peter, Paul, and Mary. Why can't Albright have one successful group?

First, a new outlook must be taken by the Student Council and administration concerning the financial side of the program. A good group can bring about an emotional release and uplifting among the students, making the college year a little more tolerable. Why, then, must it be considered a money-making project? The Four Seasons concert, by far the best in recent years, was well attended by students and nearly broke even financially. The college could easily afford to take a small loss for the concerts, after all, the Convocation-Chapel programs lose money every week.

Secondly, a special committee must be formed for obtaining these groups and given the privilege of acting completely alone on the matter. Last year, the Nuclei chairman had the opportunity to contract The Mamas and Papas for 3500 dollars. At the time, the group was only beginning on the road to popularity so Student Council hesitated to give an okay. One week later, The Mamas and The Papas increased their price to 6000 dollars, out of reach of the Albright budget.

Keeping these ideas in mind, we can only hope that Albright will be able to have big-name groups in the future but the outlook is not promising.

Help Needed!

Albright College is about to spend $600,000 on a new dormitory. The Albrightian has been waiting patiently to hear about the questionnaires which were given out to the residents of Walton, Smith, and Crowell Halls; asking what improvements should be made in the dorm. But, alas, no questionnaires were distributed.

It is altogether possible that some improvements could be made with very little additional expenditure. But how is the Administration going to find out unless they ask the students? Architects are fine, but only students have lived in the dorms. For a college so in need of money that it raises the fees by $350, $600,000 is a great deal of money; it should be spent only with great care. It is careless to build a dormitory with numerous deficiencies, which could have been corrected, IF ONLY THE STUDENTS HAD BEEN CONSULTED!

Letters To The Editor

Dear Sir:

I was quite surprised to learn that some faculty members were opposed to the Psychology Department's contribution to WUS. I do not wish to argue the pros and cons of what the pie throwing could have done to the reputation of three professors; I simply want to state my support of their actions. It may be a presumption, but I feel that the majority of the student body feels the same way.

It has been said that a man never stands so tall as when he stoops to help another. The "degradation" of these men has raised enough money to feed an underprivileged student for a few months. This, in itself, should be justification of their actions. I wish to extend my congratulations to Dr. Smith, Dr. Gilbert and Mr. Wolfe for being good sports and for advancing a worthy cause.

INTRAMURALS

The Pi Tau Beta Fraternity defeated the brothers of Alpha Pi Omega in two consecutive games of the final match in the Intramural Volleyball Tournament held last Monday night. After winning the first game by a score of 11-2, the Pi Tau's forced a decisive 11-9 victory.

Six teams participated in the double elimination tournament which proved to be a high pressured battle down to the last point.

The Alpha Phi Omega Fraternity and the Daymen both lost their first two games, eliminating them from the tournament. The Zeta's and the Albright Courtmen managed a (2-2) tally before they were eliminated. The A.P.O.'s grabbed second with a (3-2) log and the champs of Pi Tau Beta racked up a victorious (4-1) record.

Harriers Place 13th In M.A.C. Competition

Albright's Cross Country Team, under the coaching of Alumnus George Mack ('58), placed thirteenth in the Middle Atlantic Conference this year.

Although the team could not manage a win for the season, several individuals proved to be excellent competitors. Jim Garaby, an A.P.O., finished 33rd out of 123 runners in the M.A.C. Tournament. A senior this year, Jim led the team across the finish line in every meet. Consistently right behind him was Bill Hales ('68). Two other Juniors who did well this year and will be running for the Lions next year are Al McKinney and Jim Mayberry.

A new course, Religion 401, will be offered next semester. It will be the first team-taught course at Albright, taught by Profs. Barth, Raith, and Hayes. It will be a depth study of the effects of Puritanism on American culture, considering political, social and religious aspects. The course will be limited to 12 or 15 students.

The Great Books course will emphasize 19th and 20th century novels in the U. S. and Great Britain next semester. This is a reading and discussion course.

Of Graves, Of Worms, Of Epitaphs What Happened To Five-thirty?

By Mickey Mustokoff and Dean Jay Heine

After last week's fiasco we felt it altogether fitting and proper to tackle something a bit less sticky than pie-throwing. We felt the need to discuss a matter more stimulating than Betty Crocker. In short, we wanted to bring to the attention of the student items of greater relevance than pie crust and mail-boxes. The problem facing all of us most directly, especially in a school such as ours, lies in the liberalization of the liberal arts college.

Standing before us ready to graduate are people who have been carefully trained for the specific profession of the nine to five existence. But what is the graduate supposed to do at five-thirty? Even Ed Sullivan won't be on for two more days. We're turning out, and doing an excellent job of it from what reports we've had, doctors who will hopefully go on, one day, to find the cure for cancer, lawyers who will defend, protect, and make real the rights of all men, and teachers who will know every detail of their subject. But will we have doctors who think of the United Nations when they hear the name lonesco, will we have lawyers who vaguely remember the road outside of New Jersey as the Hemingway, will we have teachers who recall The Snows of Kilimanjaro as a resort in the Catskills, and will we have ministers who ban War and Peace because they think it relates to competition in the Red Light District?

We believe that today's student is not thoroughly educated outside his chosen field of study. He is, therefore, neither culturally nor pragmatically intelligent. We think it is time that the doctor should not be afraid to soil his hands with the newsprint of the New York Times or the Saturday Review. We feel that the lawyer should no longer be denied the microcosms of the laboratory. We hope that the time has come for the graduating teacher to know his subject well enough to realize that it does not exist at all without the knowledge of both the related and seemingly unrelated fields.

Yet, these observations should, and we seriously believe can, be more than the simple spoutings of two wordy under-graduates. It is not too much to expect of both the school and the individual student to support laboratories for those who do not plan to make a career in the fields of science. It is within reason to propose a course of study which would enable all students to come into contact with current issues in the world and the modern trends in art. We are not so naive as to forget that the success of such a program rests with the student, yet it must be the duty of the administration to provide, at least, some incentive. If the two cultures are not going to be met in the small liberal arts college, where are they to be met at all?
