For president of the organization the heavy-thinking boys chose Russel Loucks, star guard on the football team—a signal indication of the respect in which this man is held, for Loucks is one of those rare athletes who can make his success in the classroom the equal of those on the gridiron. He is a product of York High School, and, although he never took up chess until the beginning of his senior year in college, he has already advanced to the point where he makes a hard match for anyone in the club.

VARSITY DEBATS SEASON BEGUN---DR. WEBER COACH

Tryout Originally Scheduled For Friday Night Is Postponed-Sched-ule Under Arrangement

For the first time in the history of Albright College this institution will be represented over the checkered squares by a chees team, and this team will compete against some of the strongest teams in the Central Pennsylvania Chess League, and also against other colleges. This became definitely decided last Friday when the club was formerly organized and officers for the coming year chosen. For president of the organization At a meeting of the varsity debaters last Monday, the present forensic season was formally begun. A try-out was agreed upon for the following Friday night, Dr. Weber elected coach of the team, and Ernest L. Heckert reelected manager.

Because of the fact that several of the prospective candidates for the team this year were unable to attend the try-out, and that the number did not warrant holding it that night, it was decided to post-pone it until

INITIAL BASKET BALL PRACTICE MONDAY NIGHT

Preparation For Coming Season To Start Next Week—"Jake" Looks For Many New Candidates

PROSPECTS LOOK GOOD

Plenty Of Material, Both Old Men And New To Produce Whirlwind Quintet-Season Opens Soon

What looks like the best material in a long while greeted Uncle Jake Weller, when he issued his first call of the season for basket ball men, on Monday night. The new material looks especially promising from the Freshman class, and with the mater-ial on hand a banner year should be enjoyed by the Red and White on the court. Sherid will be back at his old position at center, and there is no ques-tion that that job will be taken care of. Brown, Clemens and Wissler will be back battling for their old guard positions, and these three will make it stiff for any newcomers. Gunther and Haney will be out for the forward jobs. Among the new men Karlip, Day, Slaughter, Vickery, Horn, and DeBolt, are showing up well, and with these men to build around, a good team should be rep-resenting Albright this year on the court. Stein Griggs and "Butch" Kunzler, Stein Griggs and "Butch" Kunzler, iast years sterling forwards will be lost to the team, as well as Snyder and Kerns, who both earned letters, playing guard posts. Their absence will be greatly missed, especially that of Griggs, who was high scorer for two years, but with the new men showing good form, "Uncle Jake" should be able to replace them offertivals.

WHEN THE BIG well-drilling machine has been installed, it takes up its work with a steady, ceaseless drumming that never lets up until the job is finished. Day after day it struggles, pounding and puffing, till at last the water is reached, and the undertaking is completed.

So it should be with us, but we are afraid it isn't. For evidently the majority figures that, since there are but three weeks between Thanksgiving vacation (a short respite for which we are thankful) and the Christmas recess, it is unnecessary to get down to studying during that time. Now isn't that true? But unfortunately it should not be, for by allowing ourselves to merely shift thru the pre-Christmas period we are greatly endangering our standing at the close of the semester—There being only about three weeks from New Year's until the mid-years begin. When one really stops to think about this, it is appalling to note how our work slacks during the present short period.

We should realize how vitally important is the time at this moment. All too soon will these hours be gone, never to be retrieved. Why not be like the drilling machine that keeps working and never lets up until the job is done!

: Campus Chatter :

Ho Hum! Parrot feels lasy today. He hasn't had a chance to chatter since before Thanksgiving Vacation and he has almost gotten out of the habit. A relief, or a calamity, he wonders which? Anyway, he is back on the job, but then, so is old King Winter. He has coated the trees with ice, and the roofs and steps and navements are a clipnorer that a work. pavements are so slippery that a good bit of sliding is being done by those funny two-legged human beings call-ed "people," who inhabit the world. Even Parrot has a hard time and as a rule flying is easy. One compensa-tion, the ice and snow makes every thing over from reality into a fairy land so beautiful that it dazzles.

arrot wants to know why every Parrot wants to know why everyone laughed when, who was it, oh yes, Servey, led the Orchestra the other morning in Chapel? Were they afraid he would dislocate his right shoulder, and were they just laughing before because they knew they couldn't afterwards, or was it because he suddenly acquired an instrument at the beginning of the last number? Parrot deen't know, but from his perch in the Balcony proceedings certainly aroused his curiosity. curiosity.

No new cases, Parrot is sorry to announce. He has so much fun broadcasting them. But then the old ones are going great, so Parrot shouldn't feel worried. He could mention any number of them, are beginning to really seem serious, but he guesses he had better bide a wee before he starts his fun.

Parrot heard a happy whisper. It formed itself into two words—Christmas and Home, and then he understood the joyousness back of it. That means it won't be long until there are Christmas Carols heard everywhere, a Christmas tree perhaps, gifts, excitement and enough homegoing plans to float a battleship.

But Parrot must cease to chatter. dis amount of space is all gone, wen though his breath isn't.

WHY PROFESSORS GET

These are some of the reasons:
The bluffer. The boy with the loud voice and empty head. The fellow who took the course before...
The sweet little co-ed who desen't know what it's all about, but who needs at least a B in the course. The silent bird who might have something worth while to say but who keeps this something hidden. The collegian who hasn't read that far in the text and attempts to stage a fillibuster and throw the class off the track. The deadly serious young radical who knows only that he's radical. The equally serious young conservative who believes only what his grandfather believed. And the boy who is taking the course just for the credit. The sleepers don't count unless they snore.

THE SMALL COLLEGE

Reprint From The Phila. Inquirer.

On the occasion of the opening of a $250,000 Science building at Wittenberg College, Springfield, Ohio, the dedicatory address was delivered by Dr. Edgar Fahs Smith, Provost Emeritus of the University of Pennsylvania, a chemist of international reputation and one of Gettysburg's renowned alumni. While there he said in private conversation, "I can not understand why the public is not more interested in the small colleges of the country, for they are doing the best undergraduate work. This is due to the fact that they are small enough for the students to come into intimate contact with the professors and be molded by them. They are not lost in the crowd. Furthermore, in the small colleges upported by churches there is much better opportunity for developing character than in any of the larger universities. I am thankful that in these colleges Morality and Religion are emphasized." large universities are now dividing their students into small groups in order to have this personal contact and to enable the students to become better acquainted amongst themselves. Furthermore, there is a tendency for some of the large universities to seek the small college graduate for their graudate schools. Perhaps this realization on their part of the worth of the small college man is due to the fact that the small college equips men for serious purposes and able to withstand the outside influences that tend to demoralize and tear down.

supported by churches there is much better opportunity for developing character than in any of the larger universities. I am thankful that in these colleges Morality and Religion are emphasized."

This statement coming from a man who has had experience both in small college and university work is gratifying to us and sums up in a few words the importance of the small college in the educational process of today. It also points to the trend of opinion that is prevalent amongst educators at the present time to look more favorably toward the small college as the source from which to expect some of the great leaders of tomorrow. Morality and religion are vital factors in the life of college men and are becoming more apparent to those who hope to build and eattain success in the world.

Perhaps the public is inclined to look upon the larger universities are heavily endowed, have many large and costly buildings, an abundance of modern equipment, immense standiums and thousands of dollars for the build this great nation of ourse and costly buildings, an abundance of modern equipment, immense standiums and thousands of dollars for the build this great nation of ourse and costly buildings, an abundance of the build this great nation of ourse were men trained in small colleges and recognized the value of morality and religion. However, we do not contend that the large universities have no morality nor religion in their makeup and have never turned out great men, for they have, but we do contend that the percentage based on enrollment is more favorable to the small college.

The educators of today are taking into consideration the importance of initimate contact between students and professors and several of the

DR. ANGELL OF YALE EM-

PHASIZES PHYSICAL STRENGTH AND VIGOR
IN COLLEGES

The summer vacation of many a tollege president, it has often seemed in us, must be plentifully dotted with bad half-hours when the disturbing thought comes to him, "What at earth can I say that will be new at helpful to the freshmen when colege opens in the fall?" It does seem that young college men—and women, hat young college men—and women, oo, for that matter—approach the cademic gates in the fall of the year more than ever in need of guidance, only to find those who should be their guides, philosophers and friends the properties of the search of the properties of college president, it has often seemed to us, must be plentifully dotted with bad half-hours when the dis-turbing thought comes to him, "What on earth can I say that win be new or helpful to the freshmen when col-lege opens in the fall?" It does seem that young college men—and women, too, for that matter—approach the academic gates in the fall of the year more than ever in need of guidance, culy to find those who should be their guides, philosophers and friends more and more doubtful as to what advice. and help should be offered them. The doctors certainly do disagree.

Here we have the news from New Haven that President Angell, of Yale, in welcoming the class of 1931 expressed rather strange views as to the most desirable equipment for a beginner to bring to college. "What are the talents," asked he, "most essential for an honorable, profitable and happy four years at Yale? I do not hesitate to put in the forefront physical health and vigor." He sidmitted that "the ascetic and emaciated saint is a historical figure," and that "there are doubtless forms of spiritual experience which accrue and that "there are doubtless forms of spiritual experience which accrue to a complete mortification of the flesh," but the blessing to be most devoutly sought and scrupulously cherished is bodily health. Apparently it was Dr. Angell's thought that, having bodily health, the student might be reasonably assured that mental and spiritual health would follow.

Pessimism At Columbia By Dean Hawkes; Terrifies Frosh

At about the same time the open At about the same time time open-ing of the college year at Columbia University was marked by the pessi-mistic annual report by Dean Her-bert E. Hawkes. It was enough to strike terror to the heart of an earnset freshman, for he declared in ef-fect that the colleges are not de-ing much in this country to help youth to the higher things. Failing to plant any dominating motive in the student, said Dr. Hawkes, the Amuniversity crean university leaves him under the control of all sorts of secondary interests which scatter his aim and energies. "When a boy has reached college," he said, "I am convinced that the line of greatest interest is the line of greatest achievement.

Of course, that statement is ab solutely sound. And so it becomes the business of the college or uni-versity to steer the freshman to the "line of greatest interest."

COLLEGIATE ENGLISH

Students induige in slang as if it were the standard of excellence. The process continues to the point of complete renunciation of the standard for the vernacular. That is when slang becomes boring and tiresome. Its charm, if there was any, has been lost by making it a rubber stamp. The same process makes some necessions and the stamp. The same process makes some peo-ple positively undesirable in so far as speech relationship is held with them. They seemingly are unable to go beyond elementary language, and leave the rest to slang. The time yond elementary language, and leave the rest to slang. The timinand the effort spent in gathering poslang and disseminating it for the delectation (presumably) of others could just as well be turned to the more commendable tars of learning to speak the commonal tongue with correctness to ease. There is a beyong language just as lively as the vernacular, and more pleasing, both in form and content. The "You're all wet" clan, the "cute" girls, and the "bull shooters" ought to go into the question sometime and find out that there is an English language with some 450,000 words.
